Impact Paper For Hilarita Is Accepted

By REBECCA LARSEN

The environmental impact report for the 102-unit Hilarita moderate-income housing project was accepted last night by the Tiburon City Council after a three-hour discussion. (Another Tiburon city council story, page 8.)

The council also approved the tentative subdivision map for the project on the condition that the city be represented on a tenant selection committee and that the project organizers guarantee that it remain a moderate-income housing for at least 20 years.

The council also asked the Marin County Housing Authority, which owns the project site, to promise to sell the city two acres of open space at the Hilarita location for $36,000. (The city and housing authority had agreed to this sale some time ago, but housing authority representatives have since said they want to sell the land on the open market.)

Representatives of the Tiburon Ecumenical Association, a group of churches which is building the project, said they will file their final subdivision map with Tiburon in April and hope to begin construction early in the spring.

Although debate was long and involved before the standing-room-only crowd of opponents and proponents, the council seemed intent on finishing off as much of the Hilarita issue as possible before three of its members left office last night.

Most votes were unanimous except that taken on the motion to accept the environmental impact report. Mayor Branwell D. Fanning dissented on the grounds that the report was incomplete.

Longtime Hilarita foe Herbert E. Wenig, who has tried to stop the project through court suits in the past, objected that the council was showing "tremendous urgency to get through in the fastest time possible."

"Projects should not be allowed to quickly slide through this report process," said resident Rufus Thayer. "All the people who were not in Tiburon when this thing got started should have some opportunity for review of the project."

Councilman Allan N. Littman, who has given up much of his opposition to the project in recent months, said there has been sufficient review of the project, which has been debated in the city for four years. "The environmental impact report is less than perfect," he said, "but unless one is willing to apply a perfectionist rule to reports of this kind, it does meet the performance test.

Among other items, the report said the project would add 600 new auto trips per day to traffic on Tiburon Boulevard which would require the ecumenical association and the city to build a left-hand storage lane for autos turning into Hilarita. The report also said the project would bring 75 new children to Reed School district, but said that the cost of absorbing these new pupils would be made up for by the district's declining enrollment.

Gas Lines Longer In Marin County

A Worse Situation Seen Late In Month

By MARY LEYDECKER

Although almost all of Marin's service station operators and motorists seem to be cooperating in the county's new voluntary odd-even gasoline sales plan, lines of cars waiting for fuel today were long at many stations.

"The odd-even system does not solve the basic problem," one service station operator warned, predicting that the end of March will see "the worst situation yet."

Yesterday, observers noted that lines of cars at stations were markedly shorter than last week, but today, when owners of even-numbered license plates took a turn at the pumps, long queues were back in many instances.

A spokesman for the Department of Motor Vehicles in Sacramento pooh-poohed the notion that there are more even-numbered plates than odd, which might have caused differences in length of lines between yesterday and today in Marin.

He said the state issues the same number of each and that "the law of chance in any area larger than a city block" would make for an even distribution.

The crush today may have been due to many motorists, who gassed up at the end of last week, running out of fuel after three or four days, an operator suggested.

While statewide, counties which have adopted the odd-even plan have experienced shorter lines of cars at stations, the problem of a lack of gasoline remains, said a representative of the Marin Independent Service Station Operators Association.

Gary Britton, owner of a Chevron station in San Rafael, said he, like all service station operators, is receiving an allocation of gasoline from the oil company with which he contracts.

The allocation for this month is based on the amount a station sold in March 1972, and the supply for this month is less — ranging from 60 per cent with one oil company to 90 for others.

Britton said even rationing his daily sales to a certain amount of gallons each day "I can't last out the month." He predicted that by the last week of March, he will be out of gasoline and said he thought many other dealers will be in the same predicament.

The odd-even plan, while bringing a more orderly way of distributing gasoline, "doesn't help extend the little amount of gasoline I've got," Britton said.

A spot check of Marin service stations today showed that all of those contacted are going along with the voluntary odd-

Sausalito's Freeze Passed

The controversial Sausalito building moratorium, which would freeze major development along the waterfront for four months pending a traffic study, was passed last night by the city council. (Another Sausalito City Council story, page 3.)

The 4-to-1 vote (Councilman Sally Stanford dissenting) followed about two and a half hours of heated discussion at a council meeting attended by about 100 persons at Central School.

The freeze will affect the 38.3-acre Schoonmaker project, the 20-acre Sausalito Central Waterfront project, the 6.29-acre Marinship Square and the 7.35-acre commercial portion of the Whiskey Springs project.

The 5.82-acre residential portion of Whiskey Springs is outside the freeze area, and the 20-acre Deak project is exempt because it previously received final approval from the council.

Also not banned are certain small projects, such as those exempt from the requirements of the California Environmental Quality Act (and therefore thought to have little impact) and those generating less than 35 daily vehicle trips per acre.

The freeze will permit the city to study the probable impact of those five major projects on the city's already severe traffic problems, especially along Bridgeway.

"You're talking about only four months, but you don't mean it," charged Edward Fitzsimmons, a Sausalito contractor. The freeze may be extended up to 20 more months by a four-fifths vote of the council.

Other arguments against the freeze mentioned the defeat of anti-growth measures in the courts, the possibility of inverse condemnation suits by developers, the patience of Sausalito developers (Whiskey Springs has been pending for four years) and the fact that this may be a poor time for a traffic study because the gasoline shortage is disrupting driving habits.

Supporters cited the absence of any comprehensive, recent traffic study, and urged preservation of the small-town character of Sausalito.

In an action dictated by its earlier vote on the moratorium, the council voted unanimously to put off a rezoning request by the Whiskey Springs developer until July 16, the first meeting after the end of the freeze.

Duffel Financial and Construction Co. had requested the rezoning of 7.35 acres from multiple residential to commercial industrial.

Planners Act To Slice Mount Burdell's Density

By ERIK M. INGRAM

The Marin County Planning Commission voted 5-to-1 yesterday to approve rezoning 1,500 acres in the Mount Burdell area to allow fewer possible homesites.

On a related matter in the Terra Linda-Sleepy Hollow Divide area, the commission approved rezoning scattered parcels but deferred action on the rest, pending further study.

The Mount Burdell action, which would reduce the number of homesites from 750 to about 120, must be ratified by the county board of supervisors.

The area lies generally west of Highway 101 and north of Novato city limits. It includes the 410-acre Pashburg property, 700-acre University of San Francisco property, 355-acres Nunes property and 47-acre Pinheiro property.

Minimum lot size is currently two acres but under yesterday's action the university and Pashburg lands are recommended for A-60, meaning one home for every 60 acres.

The Nunes property is recommended for one home for every 10 acres and the Pinheiro parcel is recommended for commercial use.

Commissioner Marie J. Sessi opposed the action and Gilbert Murphy was absent.

Much of yesterday's discussion on the Mount Burdell and Terra Linda-Sleepy Hollow Divide rezonings centered on agricultural zoning, such as A-60, versus "multiple planned residential" with a density allowing only one unit per 60 acres.

Under the latter, planners argued, they would have more control over future developments because virtually any use of the land would require a master plan whereas agricultural zoning wouldn't.

At the urging of Commissioner Jerry Freedman, the planning staff agreed to study a new zoning designation which would merge agricultural and

Bandits Hit Same Residence Again

Marin sheriff's deputies are looking for four bandits who burst armed into a San Geronimo home, tied up four victims and made off with more than $5,000 in cash and property plus a lethal dose of rattlesnake poison.

The robbery at 100 Creamery Road bore similarities to a holdup last year at the same house when three armed men and a lookout took cash, jewelry and cameras valued at $2,000.

The sheriff's department said the robbery occurred at 9 p.m. last Wednesday though it was not reported to the press until today.

Deputy J. D. Brunslik gave this account:

Barnett J. Sumski, 37, who lives at the house, was watching television with two friends, Carl O. Lorenz, 25, of San Francisco, and Andrew Stitch, 23, of the B and R Trailer Park in San Rafael.

Suddenly four men, wearing ski masks and armed with rifles and pistols, kicked in the front door and entered the house.

They ordered Sumski, Lorenz and Stitch to the bedroom floor and bound their hands with tape. "Where's all the money and the dope?" they reportedly demanded.

Kathleen I. Stevens, 28, sleeping in another bedroom, was awakened and forced into the living room, where a rifle was held at her head while she too was bound.

While two of the bandits held the victims at bay, the others ransacked the house.

After gathering $95 in cash from the victims, and jewelry, coins, cameras, stereo equipment, a videotape outfit, a coin collection and an antique rifle, the four fled in a station wagon toward Forest Knolls.

They also took one gram of rattlesnake poison, enough to kill a person, apparently in the belief it was a drug, Brunslik said.

Sumski and Mrs. Stevens, along with two others, were the victims last September of a similar holdup. Three men wearing ski masks took numerous articles and fled in a stolen car, later discovered in Fairfax with the masks and guns still inside.

Total value of the loot stolen Wednesday was estimated at $5,345 and included two cameras and lenses worth $2,000 and a videotape camera and recorder worth $1,500, Brunslik said.

Crowe Faces Felony Charge Over Brawl

A felony charge of assault with a deadly weapon was filed today against Fairfax Town Administrator Robert E. Crowe for his part in a post-election brawl in Fairfax last week.

Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales said Crowe, 37, is accused of hitting Kenneth M. Davidson in the back with an axe.

In addition, Davidson, 19, was charged with disturbing the peace, a misdemeanor, for his part in the fracas.

Both men are scheduled for arraignment Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

If convicted, Crowe could be sentenced to six months to life in prison and fined $5,000. Davidson could draw 90 days in jail and a $200 fine.

Bales said he decided to file the charges after an investigation of the fight in front of the Roberta A. Laidley home at 34 Meadow Way in the early hours of last Wednesday.

The investigation "revealed physical evidence at the scene which corroborated the version of Davidson "who told police Crowe attacked him first, Bales said. Bales would not elaborate on the nature of the evidence.

Fairfax police yesterday quoted a doctor at Marin General Hospital as saying Davidson would have been killed by the axe blow to his back had he not been wearing a leather belt, which was cut in the fray.

As it was, Davidson suffered a 1.5-inch-deep cut that required 30 stitches to close, according to doctors. Crowe, re-

Rain Continues In North Bay

The light but steady rain that fell on Marin and Southern Sonoma counties yesterday and last night, tapered off this morning with readings from light to more than an inch.

The Weather Bureau's forecast calls for a 30 per cent chance of rain tonight giving way to partial cloudiness. Winds will be from the west to southwest at five to 15 miles per hour.

By noon today, San Rafael had received .65 inch of rain. Other readings up to 8 a.m. today, were: San Anselmo, 1.16 inches; Woodacre, .97; Fairfax, .4; Novato, .3; Belvedere, .26; Mill Valley, .25; Sausalito, .24; Tamalpais Valley, .22, and Petaluma, .05.

Judge Orders San Francisco's Striking Employees Back To Jobs

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A judge today ordered city workers to end their six-day walkout which has crippled all municipal services and created a serious health hazard from raw sewage flowing into San Francisco Bay.

Municipal Court Judge Clayton W. Horn issued the sweeping backto-work order and called for the arrest of any pickets who defy it.

An hour after the order was issued, pickets remained at the entrance of city hall and Municipal Railway and BART subway lines remained stalled.

Negotiations between the unions and the city broke off for the second time early today with Mayor Joseph Alioto declaring the public was "outraged" by the unions' refusal to reopen city sewage treatment plants. He said negotiations would not be resumed until the treatment plant workers return to their jobs.

About 10,000 municipal workers are directly involved in the strike, but thousands of others working for the transit systems and schools were refusing to cross picket lines placed around public facilities.

The order by Judge Horn came in a $1 billion suit filed by the chamber of commerce. The city was named as a defendant in the suit, but Deputy City Atty. George Baglin told the court the city would join in the action against the unions.

Public transit, including the new BART subway, remained at a standstill today, with thousands of workers walking, hitchhiking and bicycling to their jobs.

Schools were open but only a handful of students and teachers showed up. School service was stalled along with other transit.

After hours of attempting to mediate with unions, the mayor announced that no progress was made.

Alioto, who has heavy labor support in his bid for the California governorship, blasted the

Hijacker Foiled In Record Demand

NAHA, Okinawa (UPI) — A masked Japanese teen-ager described as "somewhat out of his mind" hijacked a Japan Air Lines super jumbo jet with 426 persons aboard today and held them for a ransom of more than $55 million before being outwitted and subdued by police.

There were no injuries aboard the giant Boeing 747SR "air bus." But one 45-year-old Japanese man suffered an apparent heart attack and was hospitalized.

Seven policemen disguised in the white coveralls of maintenance workers boarded the plane as it sat on the deserted runway at Naha Airport for six and one-half hours and three of them burst into the cockpit and overpowered the 18-year-old hijacker, police said.

"He seemed to have no time to show any resistance," a spokesman said. They said he was unarmed, but had kept his hand inside a zippered black flight bag and told crewmen "you will obey our orders."

Police quoted the boy as saying he had seized the plane in order to "study the earth." He was wearing dark sunglasses and a white face mask when he broke into the upper deck fligtt cabin and took control of the airplane just before it landed at Naha on a 1,000 mile domestic flight from Tokyo.

The plane landed at 1:36 p.m. (12:36 a.m. EDT) and the boy was captured just before 8 p.m. (7 a.m. EDT).

Joel Tucker, 42, an American passenger, told UPI the passengers took the air piracy "very, very calmly."

"There was no panic at all," said Tucker, who lives in Japan and is Far East director of commercial airplane sales for the Boeing Aircraft Manufacturing Co. "We had nothing to do except to read and sleep." He said the biggest problem was being bored as the plane sat idle. Tucker said the hijacker never spoke to the passengers.

Police said the hijacker was an 18-year-old Japanese from Aichi prefecture. His name was withheld because Japanese law prevents identification of anyone under 20 involved in a crime.

Officials at Naha Airport said all aboard the Boeing 747 SR air bus were safe. At least four of the passengers were Americans who were among 162 women, children and older men released before the hijacker was outwitted by the Okinawa police.

Aside from the record ransom, the hijacker demanded JAL give him 15 pieces of ordinary rope, 15 pieces of vinyl mountain climbing rope, one rope-cutting knife, 15 parachutes, 15 eye masks, two picks, a shovel, one black suitcase and 15 pairs of handcuffs.

The demands indicated the hijacker might have contemplated some grandiose scheme such as parachuting into the mountains with a number of hostages.

The hijacker, whom pilot Toshikazu Oketani described to the airport control tower as being "somewhat out of his mind," had demanded the airline pay him $55 million in $1,000 bills and 200 million yen ($666,666) in 10,000-yen bills, JAL said.

The hijacker entered the cockpit carrying a bag in his hand. "This plane is hijacked," he told the pilot. He ordered Oketani to land the huge plane, carrying 409 passengers and a crew of 20, and then demanded that it be refueled for a flight to an unknown destination.

JAL officials said it was not unusual for the giant aircraft to be carrying so many passengers. The plane had been rebuilt to accommodate 490 passengers, and this is a peak tourist season for Okinawa.

The Naha airport administration office closed the airport to traffic after the hijacked plane touched down and parked at an eastern part of the airport. However, a commercial airliner bound from Hong Kong to Naha took off as scheduled sometime later.

The freed passengers were kept away from the press, then placed aboard three buses and driven off to an unknown location.

Pay Goes Farther In The U.S. Than Anywhere Else In World

NEW YORK (UPI) — The United States still has the highest standard of living, a survey released by a Swiss bank said yesterday. But residents of the Swiss cities of Geneva and Zurich are not far behind in purchasing power.

The report, "Prices and Earnings Around the Globe," compared living standards on the basis of working hours by workers in various cities needed to buy a variety of goods and services.

The survey was released by the Union Bank of Switzerland.

A typical New Yorker needs 79 hours of work to pay rent on a modern four-room apartment, the report found. In Paris, a comparable apartment requires 107 hours of work and in Singaport, 351 hours.

A standard basket of groceries cost $58 in New York and San Francisco, but $81 in Stockholm. On a working hours basis, the report said a Johannesburg bus driver would have to work 11 2-3 hours to buy the same food, a North American driver 12 to 15 hours and a Geneva or Zurich driver 20 to 21 hours. A bus driver in Bogota, Bombay, Hong Kong or Istanbul could not buy the same basket without spending more than a week's take-home pay.

In other findings:

Gasoline prices were highest in Dusseldorf, at 29 cents a liter for regular grade, and lowest in Caracas, 6 cents a liter. In North America, motorists paid less than half the prices prevalent in Europe.

Bus transportation is cheapest in Bogota, only 3 cents for 5 miles. In Stockholm the price is 60 cents.

Restaurant prices are highest in North America. A rump steak with potatoes and vegetables cost $10.20 to 11.05 in New York and Montreal, $8.95 in San Francisco, $8.40 in Chicago, but less than $3.30 in Athens, Bogota, Bombay, Buenos Aires, Istanbul and Madrid.

Haircuts average 20 cents in Bombay and $3.80 in the United States.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Ford Praises The News Media

Ford

His comments at the annual Lincoln Day Dinner of the Middlesex Club were in contrast to those of former Vice President Spiro Agnew, who used a similar occasion in 1971 to start a hard-hitting attack on television news coverage.

"We may disagree," Ford said, "but it's important that we communicate."

Referring to Agnew's remarks, Ford said: "I'm declaring war on no one — except the psychological complex of defeat and despair that is afflicting the party. I think that it's important to have good relations with the press. I happen to believe that the news media can and has been helpful in trying to preserve some of the great liberties in this country."

Link Reopened

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Government troops today broke the rebel stranglehold on Phnom Penh's road link to the country's only deepwater port after 11 days of bloody fighting.

The reports said Cambodian troops reopened Highway 4 following daily battles with insurgent forces that began March 1. Field reporters said more than 80 rebels were killed in the 11 days of fighting at a cost of 21 government troops dead.

End To Embargo?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If the State Department approves, as expected, thousands of new American automobiles will soon roll onto the roads of Cuba for the first time since the 1960 trade embargo.

Latin American diplomats say that could also mean the beginning of the end for the anti-Castro embargo originated by President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The precedent would be State Department approval of a trade deal between Cuba and Argentina, which includes the offer of 42,000 Ford, General Motors and Chrysler automobiles made at U.S.-owned factories in Argentina.

Seeks Hearing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Chamber of Commerce today asked the government for public hearings on a controversial plan to collect detailed profit and spending information from the nation's 500 biggest businesses.

The Federal Trade Commission, where the plan is being considered, would use the information for antitrust studies and to gain a clearer understanding of the consumer impact of the corporate giants.

Money Left Over

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With less than three months until school's out for the summer, the U.S. Office of Education still has $51 million left of a $111 million appropriation to give away to needy college freshmen.

The deadline for applications was extended from Feb. 1 to April 1, to reach students who might not have known the money was available, and recipients can use the grants retroactively to cover education costs already incurred.

Still, program director Peter K. Voigt is uncertain the government will be able to distribute all the money authorized by Congress for the first year of the Educational Opportunity Grants.

Senator Slain

DUBLIN (UPI) — Gunmen today assassinated an Irish Republic senator known as a critic of British military actions in Northern Ireland.

A 12-man masked gang seized Sen. Billy Fox, a 36-year-old Protestant, while he visited the home of Protestant farmer Richard Coulson near the border town of Clones in the Republic's County Monaghan.

Party's Pledge

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The Social Christian Party promised today to work toward a solution of regional grievances in Belgium after strengthening its parliamentary position in national elections.

Final but unofficial returns in Sunday's balloting showed the left-of-center Social Christians gaining five seats in parliament to reach a total of 72 in the 212-member legislative body.

Social Christian leader Leo Tindemans was expected to be named by King Baudouin to try to form a new coalition government to rule Belgium.

Glen Grove Vote Set In Sausalito

Sausalito voters will be given a chance June 4 to decide whether to permit the building of the 12-unit Glen Grove condominium project, the Sausalito City Council decided last night. (Another Sausalito City Council story, page 1.)

The cost of placing the measure on the ballot will be "under $2,000," City Mgr. T. P. McKenzie estimated. Costs are reduced because polls will be open that day for a primary election.

The project, previously approved by the council, was protested in a referendum petition signed by 611 citizens.

The council said it would be willing to rescind its approval, allowing the developer to submit another proposal, but a spokesman for the developer said "we would rather go to the people."

The Sausalito City Council also:

PLANTERS — Voted 4-to-1 (Mayor Robin Sweeny dissenting) to direct staff to provide within 30 days a plan to remove the planter boxes from Bridgeway.

SESSION — Met in closed session to consider the hiring of a city employee.

MEETING — Set its next meeting for tonight at 8 o'clock in the council chambers.

Pompidou Visit

PARIS (UPI) — President Georges Pompidou flew to the Soviet Union today for talks with Soviet Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev expected to focus on European security and the energy crisis.

Mills Not Backing Down On Nixon Tax Statement

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the face of direct White House criticism, Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, one of the most influential House Democrats, declined to back away from his prediction that a congressional report on President Nixon's tax dealings would prompt him to resign.

Returning to his office after being hospitalized because of back surgery, Mills told reporters: "I'm not accusing the President of fraud. But I am of the opinion that the report we will file will be more cause for him deciding to resign than anything that came out of Watergate."

Mills, as chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, is a co-chairman of a joint House-Senate tax group which is studying Nixon's handling of his income taxes, including deductions for donating his vice presidential papers to the national archives. It will report its findings, Mills indicated, in 30 to 40 days.

The Arkansas Democrat was strongly criticized by a top Nixon adviser, Bryce Harlow, last night for expressing belief Nixon would resign because of disclosures about the tax situation. Harlow termed Mills had subjected Nixon to "guilt by innuendo" by suggesting tax fraud on the President's part.

Of Harlow's criticism, Mills commented: "That's common language someone says when somebody says something they don't like. Bryce and I have been friends for years and I consider him still a friend."

Harlow said Mills should "put up or shut up."

"If he has some facts on which to base his statements, he should make them known," said Harlow.

Harlow accused the Arkansas Democrat of "engaging in the old game of guilt by innuendo," and in a reference to the McCarthy era, said "20 years ago the press got very upset about a campaign by innuendo."

Mills told reporters Friday he believed Nixon would resign over disclosures about his taxes by a congressional committee. Asked for details, Mills said, "I know, but I won't say. You'll know about it in some 30 or 40 days."

The Post noted that Mills had been "privy to information made available to him" as co-chairman of the joint committee studying Nixon's tax returns and "should refrain from making unsupported and unspecified charges of such monumental gravity."

The Times said of Mills: "It is manifestly unfair to the President to hint broadly at damaging conclusions and then hold back the evidence to support those conclusions for a month or more."

In a separate article the New York Times said today that Nixon suggested in June 1969, that members of his staff be given access to the tax returns of former presidents so he could learn what deductions his predecessors had taken. Federal law prohibits disclosure of information from any tax return for other than specified, authorized purposes. The Times said a White House memorandum on Nixon suggestion is now in the hands of congressional investigators.

Harlow decried Mills' statement aboard a presidential flight back to Washington from Key Biscayne, Fla., where Nixon had spent the last four days working and relaxing in the warm sunshine. A light snow was falling when Nixon landed here.

The President met this morning with Jordan's visiting monarch, King Hussein, for a discussion of the Mideast and Jordan's effort to bolster U. S. support —now totaling $40 million a year —for its military forces.

Last Friday, at a news conference at which he announced his intention to seek re-election, Mills told reporters that a congressional report on Nixon's tax returns for the years 1969-72 should give the President more cause to resign than anything revealed so far in the various Watergate investigations.

Columnist Jack Anderson, in two separate published reports, said that the committee has heard testimony that Nixon went over his tax returns page by page and took a personal interest in them. Newsweek magazine said that at least two persons who worked on the 1969 return have been warned by the Internal Revenue Service that they are subject to a criminal fraud investigation.

Two Errors On Candidates

Two errors in listings of candidates which appeared in an article in Saturday's Independent-Journal have been reported by the Marin County elections office.

Mark Riordan is a candidate for the county Democratic Central Committee in the first district, not the Republican Central Committee.

Susan M. Bailey is the correct name of a candidate for the Democratic Central Committee in the third district. Her name was given incorrectly as Bradley in the article.

Volunteers For Peace Corps, VISTA Are Sought In Marin

By BILL ROBERTS

Representatives of Peace Corps and Volunteers In Service To America (VISTA) yesterday began their first recruiting drive in Marin and drew applicants from both young and old.

A 27-year-old man with shoulder-length hair sat near a 50-year-old man in a business suit as both filled out applications for the federally funded volunteer service programs.

"I'm encouraged, especially after looking at all this," said Robert O. Bracken of San Rafael, the younger man, as he looked across a table filled with brochures and pamphlets at the Holiday Inn.

"I get (more) excited every day, I really want to do this," he said as he told of his hopes to serve in Hawaii, Samoa or on an American Indian reservation.

The recent graduate of Sonoma State College outlined several volunteer programs he had worked with which he hopes will help net him a position with VISTA. His service tutoring children, helping at drug centers and a bachelor degree in psychology make his chances of selection excellent, according to the recruiters.

Prospects also seemed good for 50-year-old Bill, who lives in San Rafael but refused to give his last name.

Unlike Bracken, who will give up a postal service job if selected, Bill has been unemployed for six months and said he went to the recruiting session as just another job possibility after reading a newspaper advertisement.

"I'm exploring all kinds of job possibilities," he said. "I could be very excited by this. I feel it's time for me to do something that is vastly different from what I've done before," Bill said.

A former high school English teacher, he also has worked on the college level as a financial aide advisor and counselor.

He came to the recruitment headquarters accompanied by a friend, 53-year-old Mary. She said she also has teaching experience and some medical training which she hopes will help in landing a job offer from the volunteer programs.

Recruiters Darline Cowley, 25, and Brooks Thorlaksson, 26, will continue the campaign at room 126 of the Holiday Inn through Thursday. Their room is filled with neat stacks of recruitment pamphlets and applications which may be obtained from noon to 8 p.m. daily.

The two women work out of the volunteer service headquarters in San Francisco and make recruiting trips throughout northern California and Nevada.

They said their visitors in San Rafael, and the several who inquired by telephone, are fairly typical of the enquirers on recruiting trips. They expect about 30 applicants.

Of the 30, about one-fourth are usually successful in their attempt to enter the program, according to Miss Thorlaksson.

"But if 10 more like him (Bracken) come through the door they will probably all get in," she said.

Miss Cowley said most persons are filled with questions about the program and, as was the case yesterday, lengthy questioning can proceed the completion of an application.

"A lot of the questions are what can the program offer me," Miss Cowley said.

By midafternoon, the recruiters had received inquiries from about a dozen persons, had two applications in hand and had been promised two more.

"It's a good start, especially with the rain," Miss Thorlaksson said.

BART Will Bring Suit Against Rohr Industries

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The directors of Bay Area Rapid Transit will bring a lawsuit against Rohr Industries, Southern California builders of BART's $150 million fleet of rail cars.

The directors also voted yesterday to end BART's embargo against deliveries from the firm, pledging to make normal payments for the equipment if Rohr would waive claims for losses during the embargo.

The city's largest law firm of Pillsbury, Madison and Sutro will be hired to prepare the suit against Rohr, it was reported after the directors' private meeting.

They rejected a proposal to turn the complaint against Rohr over to the state attorney general's office.

BART officials have complained that the Rohr cars break down far too frequently, an average car requiring an unscheduled repair job in the shop once a week.

Glen Grove Vote Set In Sausalito

Sausalito voters will be given a chance June 4 to decide whether to permit the building of the 12-unit Glen Grove condominium project, the Sausalito City Council decided last night. (Another Sausalito City Council story, page 1.)

The cost of placing the measure on the ballot will be "under $2,000," City Mgr. T. P. McKenzie estimated. Costs are reduced because polls will be open that day for a primary election.

The project, previously approved by the council, was protested in a referendum petition signed by 611 citizens.

The council said it would be willing to rescind its approval, allowing the developer to submit another proposal, but a spokesman for the developer said "we would rather go to the people."

The Sausalito City Council also:

PLANTERS — Voted 4-to-1 (Mayor Robin Sweeny dissenting) to direct staff to provide within 30 days a plan to remove the planter boxes from Bridgeway.

SESSION — Met in closed session to consider the hiring of a city employee.

MEETING — Set its next meeting for tonight at 8 o'clock in the council chambers.

Mills Not Backing Down On Nixon Tax Statement

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the face of direct White House criticism, Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, one of the most influential House Democrats, declined to back away from his prediction that a congressional report on President Nixon's tax dealings would prompt him to resign.

Returning to his office after being hospitalized because of back surgery, Mills told reporters: "I'm not accusing the President of fraud. But I am of the opinion that the report we will file will be more cause for him deciding to resign than anything that came out of Watergate."

Mills, as chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, is a co-chairman of a joint House-Senate tax group which is studying Nixon's handling of his income taxes, including deductions for donating his vice presidential papers to the national archives. It will report its findings, Mills indicated, in 30 to 40 days.

The Arkansas Democrat was strongly criticized by a top Nixon adviser, Bryce Harlow, last night for expressing belief Nixon would resign because of disclosures about the tax situation. Harlow termed Mills had subjected Nixon to "guilt by innuendo" by suggesting tax fraud on the President's part.

Of Harlow's criticism, Mills commented: "That's common language someone says when somebody says something they don't like. Bryce and I have been friends for years and I consider him still a friend."

Harlow said Mills should "put up or shut up."

"If he has some facts on which to base his statements, he should make them known," said Harlow.

Harlow accused the Arkansas Democrat of "engaging in the old game of guilt by innuendo," and in a reference to the McCarthy era, said "20 years ago the press got very upset about a campaign by innuendo."

Mills told reporters Friday he believed Nixon would resign over disclosures about his taxes by a congressional committee. Asked for details, Mills said, "I know, but I won't say. You'll know about it in some 30 or 40 days."

The Post noted that Mills had been "privy to information made available to him" as co-chairman of the joint committee studying Nixon's tax returns and "should refrain from making unsupported and unspecified charges of such monumental gravity."

The Times said of Mills: "It is manifestly unfair to the President to hint broadly at damaging conclusions and then hold back the evidence to support those conclusions for a month or more."

In a separate article the New York Times said today that Nixon suggested in June 1969, that members of his staff be given access to the tax returns of former presidents so he could learn what deductions his predecessors had taken. Federal law prohibits disclosure of information from any tax return for other than specified, authorized purposes. The Times said a White House memorandum on Nixon suggestion is now in the hands of congressional investigators.

Harlow decried Mills' statement aboard a presidential flight back to Washington from Key Biscayne, Fla., where Nixon had spent the last four days working and relaxing in the warm sunshine. A light snow was falling when Nixon landed here.

HUNGER HIKER

Bob Kennedy, 18-year-old sophomore at the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle Campus, has his back pack, hiking boots and feet ready as he plans a 4,000-mile hike from his home in Cicero, Ill., to Fairfbanks, Alaska. Kennedy checked his route on a map of Alaska yesterday in planning the hike to raise money for the American Freedom from Hunger Foundation. Contributors will pay a certain amount for each mile covered. Last year Kennedy rode his bicycle from Anchorage, Alaska, to Key West, Fla., a distance of more than 5,500 miles, and raised $12,000 for the American Cancer Society.

Suit Filed For 50-Cent Span Toll

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The City of San Francisco filed suit yesterday to get the Golden Gate Bridge toll rolled back to 50 cents.

The roundtrip toll on the bridge was increased on March 1 to 75 cents, despite opposition of San Francisco's Board of Supervisors.

City Atty. Thomas M. O'Connor filed suit in superior court contending that three of the bridge district's board of directors represented San Francisco and illegally voted contrary to the "policy" of the city in approving the toll increase.

The suit says if the San Francisco representatives had not voted in favor of the increase it would not have passed. The increase will damage the city by diminishing traffic from Marin County, according to O'Connor.

CROWE

Bales said his investigators now have full statements from Crowe and Davidson. The teenager was interviewed at his home, where he is confined to a wheelchair, Bales said.

Although a Fairfax police report said both men may have been intoxicated, Bales was unable to say if blood alcohol tests had been run on the combatants.

According to police, the fight erupted when Crowe and Mrs. Laidley arrived at her house and found a "for sale" sign in her front yard.

Assuming it to have been put there by partygoers from the house of Frank J. Egger, who won reelection to the Fairfax Town Council last Tuesday, Mrs. Laidley took the sign and threw it over Egger's fence.

Davidson — according to what Crowe told police — followed Mrs. Laidley back to her house a block away shouting obscenities. Crowe then armed himself with a double-bladed ax and met Davidson in the street. The exchange of blows followed, police reported.

Two town councilmen available for comment today expressed mixed reactions to the charges filed by the district attorney's office.

"I am surprised because in all the police reports they couldn't seem to get a straight story from anybody," said Councilman-elect Priscilla C. Gray. "I thought the whole thing was going to go by the board," she said.

Councilman Albert E. Gately, however, said he is not surprised at the charges.

Gately said the matter will be dealt with in closed session by the council at 8 p.m. today in the Fairfax Women's Club, and said he will recommend that the council suspend Crowe "until this matter is cleared up."

Meanwhile, Fairfax Police Chief Charles A. Grasso said he is not surprised at the charges. "I expected charges on both sides," he said.

Large holdings in the Terra Linda-Sleepy Hollow area escaped rezoning pending completion of that study to merge zoning designations.

They included the 1,000-acre Luiz property and will be considered again April 8.

The proposed rezoning covers 2,250 acres of mostly ridgeland south of Lucas Valley Road between Terra Linda and San Rafael, San Anselmo and Sleepy Hollow.

The planning staff said the rezonings were needed to make the zoning consistent with the county general plan, which designates the areas as ridge and upland greenbelts.

Rezoning of some 65 small holdings on the Sleepy Hollow Ridge was delayed pending further study of an appropriate density for the area. It will be considered again April 22.

The delay came after several property owners complained that the recommended rezoning amounted to confiscation of their land for open space.

Approximately 650 acres at the northern end of the Sleepy Hollow community, including a 630-acre parcel owned by San Domenico School for Girls, was rezoned to lower density.

The school property, zoned for two-acre lots depending on slope, was changed to allow one home for every 10 acres.

Scattered parcels in the Los Ranchitos area near San Rafael also were rezoned to a density allowing one home for every two acres, a zoning similar to surrounding lands.

In other action yesterday, the commission approved a master plan for a new Bank of America branch near the Ignacio Boulevard-Entrada Drive intersection at Ignacio.

The commission will hold a special meeting March 21 at 9 a.m. to discuss housing matters.

unions, especially for permitting 100 million gallons of raw sewage to be dumped daily into San Francisco Bay and the Pacific Ocean because disposal plants are closed by the strike.

"We are so morally outraged by the refusal of the unions to stop polluting the bay that we think further negotiations would be futile."

He said no further talks were scheduled although he would be glad to "meet with anyone" today.

The strike has shut down public transportation, hospitals, the Opera House, museums and libraries. In addition, less than one-third of the city's children are going to school.

Supervisor Dianne Feinstein said that the unions were offered an across-the-board 5 per cent raise and also noted that they will get $4 million in improved health benefits July 1 under a measure already passed. She placed the value of the package at around $12 million.

The unions, representing 12,000 employees, are asking an 8 per cent raise and a fully paid dental plan pegged at $15 million or $16 million.

Picketing which halted Municipal Railway streetcars, buses and cable cars Friday spread to the San Francisco portion of the new Bay Area Rapid Transit District yesterday, leaving about 360,000 transit riders stranded.

The chamber of commerce filed a $1 billion lawsuit asking that the walkout be declared illegal and that an injunction be issued to halt the strike. The suit asked actual damages of $500 million and punitive damages of $500 million.

San Francisco General Hospital, largest public hospital in the area, was ordered closed because of the strike, but Health Director Dr. Francis Curry said he would fight to keep its emergency and trauma units open and operating.

Flights in and out of San Francisco International Airport were on normal schedules, but litter piled up knee-deep because the strikers included the airport's 89-man janitorial staff.

The State Attorney General's office, at the request of the Regional Water Quality Control Board, filed a suit asking for an injunction to keep the city's four sewage plants open.

even plan and are finding customers cooperative.

"We have had no problems" with motorists, said an attendant at a Shell station in Ignacio. Another dealer said he had had only two cars in two days which had come on the wrong day. In these instances, the drivers were cooperative and agreed to come back the next day, he said.

Meanwhile, motorists throughout the county continued to express frustration over various effects of the gasoline shortage. There were widespread complaints over many dealers' practice of pumping gasoline during closed hours for lubrication and oil change customers — a practice that the Internal Revenue Service says is legal.

There were also complaints about rudeness in some instances, stations which had only one variety of gasoline available and gripes about varying high prices for gasoline.

A Novato man complained there is no provision under the plan for those who need gasoline for an emergency.

Elsewhere in the state, Ventura yesterday became the ninth county to join the Governor's mandatory odd-even plan, and a state official said about 12,500 of the state's 20,000 stations are now involved.

The system has been particularly effective in Los Angeles and Contra Costa counties, according to Herb Temple, state emergency services director, where staggered hours of service also have been adopted.

Temple said, though, that all of the counties in the mandatory plan have reported a reduction in gas station waiting lines.

In Sacramento, an official of the California School Boards Association said there were inadequate allocations of gasoline for school buses in the state.

He said that among the hardest hit areas, where growth has occurred in school population, are the districts of Antioch, San Ramon and Brentwood.

City Clerk's Resignation Is Accepted

The resignation of City Clerk Lillian Nommsen was accepted last night by Petaluma city councilmen as they met in adjourned session at city hall.

Mrs. Nommsen first submitted the resignation a year ago but had been persuaded to stay on an additional year because of the press of municipal business.

Mrs. Nommsen said the new clerk will be Marjorie Wilson, currently secretary to City Mgr. Robert H. Meyer. The office will change hands Aug. 1.

A former stenographer in the public works department, Mrs. Nommsen became city clerk in June of 1964.

The city council also approved the purchase of five police cars, two general use sedans and five trucks for low bids totalling $42,000 from Sanderson Ford, Western Motors and Jim Rose Chrysler-Plymouth, all Petaluma dealers.

It approved a resolution urging local gasoline retailers to adopt the odd-even marketing plan and to post their hours of operation in plain view.

A Survey Shows Space Liked In Marinwood

District Mgr. Genevieve T. Bolding said 276 of 407 residents responding to a district open space survey want to keep local lands in an unimproved condition. Some 1,440 surveys were mailed out, she added.

Other residents responding said portions of 350 acres eyed for acquisition with funds from the district's $600,000 bond issue should be developed into camping areas, hiking trails or nature paths.

She said the board set a special meeting for 8 p.m., March 25, in the community center to analyze results of the survey.

Washington Sites Aren't Plentiful

NEW YORK (UPI) — The only "Washington slept here" site that has survived in New York City is the elegant Jumel Mansion in upper Manhattan which Washington occupied briefly during the Revolutionary War.

However, tourists may visit two other sites associated with Washington — Fraunces Tavern where he bid farewell to his officers at the conclusion of the war and St. Paul's Chapel where he worshiped immediately after his first inaugural ceremony.

Rohnert Park Studies 'Dial-A-Cab' Plan

A weekend "dial-a-cab" system may be tried out in Rohnert Park soon as the result of a decision last night by the city council.

Under the plan, residents under 62 years of age would be able to ride taxicabs for 25 cents between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. Residents older than 62 would ride free of charge.

Mrs. Faus said the city has worked out a plan with the Abco Cab Co. so the firm will be reimbursed for costs not covered by the lower-than-usual fares.

Although the council indicated it wishes to give the plan a one-month trial, no starting date was set, Mrs. Faus said.

Mill Valley Business Policy Set

The Mill Valley Planning Commission has doubled a list of businesses which the city would not deem tourist oriented in enforcing a new ordinance designed to halt the proliferation of such shops in Mill Valley.

Associate Planner Robert J. Hanna said that the changes were approved unanimously Monday and the ordinance was passed on to the city council for final action.

Any type of business not listed in the ordinance would need a permit and special hearings before the planning commission. Businesses requiring permits would include such things as leather goods shops, ceramics stores, curio shops.

The commission also deleted a section which would have required businesses without separate street entrances to apply for a permit. This section had been meant to thwart the building of any new shopping complexes on the order of the controversial Old Brown's Store project.

Changes were made in the proposed ordinance after members of the city chamber of commerce had protested at a recent council meeting that the new ordinance was too strict and would penalize many businesses without a tourist orientation.

The plan is to serve as an interim measure while councilmen study other types of mass transit, according to secretary Sandra Faus.

Use Of Parking Lot For School Is On Agenda

A request that St. Anselm's Church parking lot be used as a drop off point for students attending the San Anselmo Montessori School will be considered by the Ross Town Council when it meets Thursday at 8 p.m. in town hall.

The San Anselmo City Council recently denied a request that the school be allowed to operate in a residential area in San Anselmo.

T. J. Robbins, San Anselmo senior planner, said the Montessori School hopes to reduce traffic and parking problems through use of the Ross site as a drop-off point and would then resubmit its application to San Anselmo.

51 Pct. Back Year-Round Daylight Time

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A survey of California finds 51 per cent of those polled favor year-round daylight saving time.

The California Poll released Sunday said 36 per cent favored a return to Standard Time and 13 per cent had no opinion.

But the survey found that 58 per cent of the 1,179 persons questioned did not think DST saved enough energy to be worthwhile.

Fifty-one per cent of parents of school-age children said they felt they would not vote to change back to Standard Time if they had the opportunity.

The findings were from a survey made by Field Research Corp. for the Los Angeles Times in February.

Reagan Accepts Hill Resignation

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan formally accepted the resignation yesterday of A. Alan Hill, deputy secretary of the Agricultural and Services Agency.

The San Rafael Republican resigned effective last Friday to run for the 9th Assembly District seat of Marin and Sonoma counties. The incumbent, William T. Bagley, is running for the GOP nomination for controller.

Reagan said Hill provided expert advice to his cabinet on conservation and ecology issues.

Next Medical Leader's Stand On 'Euthanasia'

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Dr. Malcolm C. Todd of Long Beach, the president-elect of the American Medical Association, says he believes in "passive euthanasia."

Todd told reporters yesterday there came a time when hopelessly ill patients being kept alive by artificial means should be allowed to die.

"I personally do not object to withholding treatment in some cases—to passive euthanasia," he said. "There comes a time to let God Almighty make the decision." Todd said "active euthanasia" was when a physician decided to kill a patient by administering a drug or providing fatal treatment.

Photography Aid To Many Students

NEW YORK (UPI) — Growing numbers of students will add an extra dimension to their studies this year by using photography in classwork.

Through photography a student can demonstrate initiative and creativity that earn higher grades. Photography can help in courses such as government, English and art or be an aid on class trips.

Letter Out To Nine Teachers

Mill Valley School Supt. Peter Palches told the school board last night that letters have been sent to nine district teachers advising them that they will not be rehired for next fall.

Unless there are many resignations and retirements, Palches said, the district probably will have to hold to those letters.

Notified were: from Old Mill School, Donna Lifshin; from the Mill Valley Middle School, Bruce Kuschner, Marianne Lustig, Lynea Katayama, Johnny Gentry and Sarah Toughill; from Alto School, Jean Temple; and from Strawberry Point School, Sherman Glenn and Marilyn Brawman.

Palches said that the board also asked the district staff to begin drawing up plans for a retirement incentive program which would encourage teachers to leave their jobs before age 65.

HUNGER HIKER

Bob Kennedy, 18-year-old sophomore at the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle Campus, has his back pack, hiking boots and feet ready as he plans a 4,000-mile hike from his home in Cicero, Ill., to Fairfbanks, Alaska. Kennedy checked his route on a map of Alaska yesterday in planning the hike to raise money for the American Freedom from Hunger Foundation. Contributors will pay a certain amount for each mile covered. Last year Kennedy rode his bicycle from Anchorage, Alaska, to Key West, Fla., a distance of more than 5,500 miles, and raised $12,000 for the American Cancer Society.

Suit Filed For 50-Cent Span Toll

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The City of San Francisco filed suit yesterday to get the Golden Gate Bridge toll rolled back to 50 cents.

The roundtrip toll on the bridge was increased on March 1 to 75 cents, despite opposition of San Francisco's Board of Supervisors.

City Atty. Thomas M. O'Connor filed suit in superior court contending that three of the bridge district's board of directors represented San Francisco and illegally voted contrary to the "policy" of the city in approving the toll increase.

The suit says if the San Francisco representatives had not voted in favor of the increase it would not have passed. The increase will damage the city by diminishing traffic from Marin County, according to O'Connor.

CROWE

Bales said his investigators now have full statements from Crowe and Davidson. The teenager was interviewed at his home, where he is confined to a wheelchair, Bales said.

Although a Fairfax police report said both men may have been intoxicated, Bales was unable to say if blood alcohol tests had been run on the combatants.

According to police, the fight erupted when Crowe and Mrs. Laidley arrived at her house and found a "for sale" sign in her front yard.

Assuming it to have been put there by partygoers from the house of Frank J. Egger, who won reelection to the Fairfax Town Council last Tuesday, Mrs. Laidley took the sign and threw it over Egger's fence.

Davidson — according to what Crowe told police — followed Mrs. Laidley back to her house a block away shouting obscenities. Crowe then armed himself with a double-bladed ax and met Davidson in the street. The exchange of blows followed, police reported.

Two town councilmen available for comment today expressed mixed reactions to the charges filed by the district attorney's office.

"I am surprised because in all the police reports they couldn't seem to get a straight story from anybody," said Councilman-elect Priscilla C. Gray. "I thought the whole thing was going to go by the board," she said.

Councilman Albert E. Gately, however, said he is not surprised at the charges.

Gately said the matter will be dealt with in closed session by the council at 8 p.m. today in the Fairfax Women's Club, and said he will recommend that the council suspend Crowe "until this matter is cleared up."

Meanwhile, Fairfax Police Chief Charles A. Grasso said he is not surprised at the charges. "I expected charges on both sides," he said.

Large holdings in the Terra Linda-Sleepy Hollow area escaped rezoning pending completion of that study to merge zoning designations.

They included the 1,000-acre Luiz property and will be considered again April 8.

The proposed rezoning covers 2,250 acres of mostly ridgeland south of Lucas Valley Road between Terra Linda and San Rafael, San Anselmo and Sleepy Hollow.

The planning staff said the rezonings were needed to make the zoning consistent with the county general plan, which designates the areas as ridge and upland greenbelts.

Rezoning of some 65 small holdings on the Sleepy Hollow Ridge was delayed pending further study of an appropriate density for the area. It will be considered again April 22.

The delay came after several property owners complained that the recommended rezoning amounted to confiscation of their land for open space.

Approximately 650 acres at the northern end of the Sleepy Hollow community, including a 630-acre parcel owned by San Domenico School for Girls, was rezoned to lower density.

The school property, zoned for two-acre lots depending on slope, was changed to allow one home for every 10 acres.

Scattered parcels in the Los Ranchitos area near San Rafael also were rezoned to a density allowing one home for every two acres, a zoning similar to surrounding lands.

In other action yesterday, the commission approved a master plan for a new Bank of America branch near the Ignacio Boulevard-Entrada Drive intersection at Ignacio.

The commission will hold a special meeting March 21 at 9 a.m. to discuss housing matters.

unions, especially for permitting 100 million gallons of raw sewage to be dumped daily into San Francisco Bay and the Pacific Ocean because disposal plants are closed by the strike.

"We are so morally outraged by the refusal of the unions to stop polluting the bay that we think further negotiations would be futile."

He said no further talks were scheduled although he would be glad to "meet with anyone" today.

The strike has shut down public transportation, hospitals, the Opera House, museums and libraries. In addition, less than one-third of the city's children are going to school.

Supervisor Dianne Feinstein said that the unions were offered an across-the-board 5 per cent raise and also noted that they will get $4 million in improved health benefits July 1 under a measure already passed. She placed the value of the package at around $12 million.

The unions, representing 12,000 employees, are asking an 8 per cent raise and a fully paid dental plan pegged at $15 million or $16 million.

Picketing which halted Municipal Railway streetcars, buses and cable cars Friday spread to the San Francisco portion of the new Bay Area Rapid Transit District yesterday, leaving about 360,000 transit riders stranded.

The chamber of commerce filed a $1 billion lawsuit asking that the walkout be declared illegal and that an injunction be issued to halt the strike. The suit asked actual damages of $500 million and punitive damages of $500 million.

San Francisco General Hospital, largest public hospital in the area, was ordered closed because of the strike, but Health Director Dr. Francis Curry said he would fight to keep its emergency and trauma units open and operating.

Flights in and out of San Francisco International Airport were on normal schedules, but litter piled up knee-deep because the strikers included the airport's 89-man janitorial staff.

The State Attorney General's office, at the request of the Regional Water Quality Control Board, filed a suit asking for an injunction to keep the city's four sewage plants open.

even plan and are finding customers cooperative.

"We have had no problems" with motorists, said an attendant at a Shell station in Ignacio. Another dealer said he had had only two cars in two days which had come on the wrong day. In these instances, the drivers were cooperative and agreed to come back the next day, he said.

Meanwhile, motorists throughout the county continued to express frustration over various effects of the gasoline shortage. There were widespread complaints over many dealers' practice of pumping gasoline during closed hours for lubrication and oil change customers — a practice that the Internal Revenue Service says is legal.

There were also complaints about rudeness in some instances, stations which had only one variety of gasoline available and gripes about varying high prices for gasoline.

A Novato man complained there is no provision under the plan for those who need gasoline for an emergency.

Elsewhere in the state, Ventura yesterday became the ninth county to join the Governor's mandatory odd-even plan, and a state official said about 12,500 of the state's 20,000 stations are now involved.

The system has been particularly effective in Los Angeles and Contra Costa counties, according to Herb Temple, state emergency services director, where staggered hours of service also have been adopted.

Temple said, though, that all of the counties in the mandatory plan have reported a reduction in gas station waiting lines.

In Sacramento, an official of the California School Boards Association said there were inadequate allocations of gasoline for school buses in the state.

He said that among the hardest hit areas, where growth has occurred in school population, are the districts of Antioch, San Ramon and Brentwood.

Letter Out To Nine Teachers

Mill Valley School Supt. Peter Palches told the school board last night that letters have been sent to nine district teachers advising them that they will not be rehired for next fall.

City Clerk's Resignation Is Accepted

The resignation of City Clerk Lillian Nommsen was accepted last night by Petaluma city councilmen as they met in adjourned session at city hall.

Mrs. Nommsen first submitted the resignation a year ago but had been persuaded to stay on an additional year because of the press of municipal business.

Mrs. Nommsen said the new clerk will be Marjorie Wilson, currently secretary to City Mgr. Robert H. Meyer. The office will change hands Aug. 1.

A former stenographer in the public works department, Mrs. Nommsen became city clerk in June of 1964.

The city council also approved the purchase of five police cars, two general use sedans and five trucks for low bids totalling $42,000 from Sanderson Ford, Western Motors and Jim Rose Chrysler-Plymouth, all Petaluma dealers.

It approved a resolution urging local gasoline retailers to adopt the odd-even marketing plan and to post their hours of operation in plain view.

A Survey Shows Space Liked In Marinwood

District Mgr. Genevieve T. Bolding said 276 of 407 residents responding to a district open space survey want to keep local lands in an unimproved condition. Some 1,440 surveys were mailed out, she added.

Other residents responding said portions of 350 acres eyed for acquisition with funds from the district's $600,000 bond issue should be developed into camping areas, hiking trails or nature paths.

She said the board set a special meeting for 8 p.m., March 25, in the community center to analyze results of the survey.

Washington Sites Aren't Plentiful

NEW YORK (UPI) — The only "Washington slept here" site that has survived in New York City is the elegant Jumel Mansion in upper Manhattan which Washington occupied briefly during the Revolutionary War.

However, tourists may visit two other sites associated with Washington — Fraunces Tavern where he bid farewell to his officers at the conclusion of the war and St. Paul's Chapel where he worshiped immediately after his first inaugural ceremony.

Rohnert Park Studies 'Dial-A-Cab' Plan

A weekend "dial-a-cab" system may be tried out in Rohnert Park soon as the result of a decision last night by the city council.

Under the plan, residents under 62 years of age would be able to ride taxicabs for 25 cents between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. Residents older than 62 would ride free of charge.

Mrs. Faus said the city has worked out a plan with the Abco Cab Co. so the firm will be reimbursed for costs not covered by the lower-than-usual fares.

Although the council indicated it wishes to give the plan a one-month trial, no starting date was set, Mrs. Faus said.

Mill Valley Business Policy Set

The Mill Valley Planning Commission has doubled a list of businesses which the city would not deem tourist oriented in enforcing a new ordinance designed to halt the proliferation of such shops in Mill Valley.

Associate Planner Robert J. Hanna said that the changes were approved unanimously Monday and the ordinance was passed on to the city council for final action.

Any type of business not listed in the ordinance would need a permit and special hearings before the planning commission. Businesses requiring permits would include such things as leather goods shops, ceramics stores, curio shops.

The commission also deleted a section which would have required businesses without separate street entrances to apply for a permit. This section had been meant to thwart the building of any new shopping complexes on the order of the controversial Old Brown's Store project.

Changes were made in the proposed ordinance after members of the city chamber of commerce had protested at a recent council meeting that the new ordinance was too strict and would penalize many businesses without a tourist orientation.

The plan is to serve as an interim measure while councilmen study other types of mass transit, according to secretary Sandra Faus.

Use Of Parking Lot For School Is On Agenda

A request that St. Anselm's Church parking lot be used as a drop off point for students attending the San Anselmo Montessori School will be considered by the Ross Town Council when it meets Thursday at 8 p.m. in town hall.

The San Anselmo City Council recently denied a request that the school be allowed to operate in a residential area in San Anselmo.

T. J. Robbins, San Anselmo senior planner, said the Montessori School hopes to reduce traffic and parking problems through use of the Ross site as a drop-off point and would then resubmit its application to San Anselmo.

51 Pct. Back Year-Round Daylight Time

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A survey of California finds 51 per cent of those polled favor year-round daylight saving time.

The California Poll released Sunday said 36 per cent favored a return to Standard Time and 13 per cent had no opinion.

But the survey found that 58 per cent of the 1,179 persons questioned did not think DST saved enough energy to be worthwhile.

Fifty-one per cent of parents of school-age children said they felt they would not vote to change back to Standard Time if they had the opportunity.

The findings were from a survey made by Field Research Corp. for the Los Angeles Times in February.

Reagan Accepts Hill Resignation

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan formally accepted the resignation yesterday of A. Alan Hill, deputy secretary of the Agricultural and Services Agency.

The San Rafael Republican resigned effective last Friday to run for the 9th Assembly District seat of Marin and Sonoma counties. The incumbent, William T. Bagley, is running for the GOP nomination for controller.

Reagan said Hill provided expert advice to his cabinet on conservation and ecology issues.

Next Medical Leader's Stand On 'Euthanasia'

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Dr. Malcolm C. Todd of Long Beach, the president-elect of the American Medical Association, says he believes in "passive euthanasia."

Todd told reporters yesterday there came a time when hopelessly ill patients being kept alive by artificial means should be allowed to die.

"I personally do not object to withholding treatment in some cases—to passive euthanasia," he said. "There comes a time to let God Almighty make the decision." Todd said "active euthanasia" was when a physician decided to kill a patient by administering a drug or providing fatal treatment.

Photography Aid To Many Students

NEW YORK (UPI) — Growing numbers of students will add an extra dimension to their studies this year by using photography in classwork.

Through photography a student can demonstrate initiative and creativity that earn higher grades. Photography can help in courses such as government, English and art or be an aid on class trips.

DOG SLED ON WHEELS

Lack of snow doesn't deter the Siberian Husky Club when it decides to hold dog sled races. That happened Sunday at West Glocester, R.I., and the contestants simply used special wheeled carts. Tom Carter (above) finished third in the race in which he competed. (UPI Telephoto)

Tiburon Delays On Condominium Policy

Action on an ordinance to require apartment building owners to upgrade their projects before converting them to condominiums was delayed last night by the Tiburon City Council. (Another Tiburon City Council story, page 1.)

Councilman Albert H. Sennett, who was assigned to study the ordinance written by the planning commission, said he thought that the measure could not pass until the city building code was changed to agree with the new legislation.

"Without changes in the building code, we couldn't enforce the ordinance," he said.

Councilman Allan N. Littman objected that action on the condominium issue had been postponed long enough, but the rest of the council decided to save the problem for the next council which will be seated tonight.

While the city has debated the issue, there has been a moratorium on condominium conversions.

The Tiburon City Council Also:

COMMISSIONS — Asked residents to begin applying for openings on the planning commission and board of adjustments created when commissioners and board members were recently elected to the city council.

HACIENDA DRIVE — Accepted the deed to lower Hacienda Drive and acknowledged that the city would have to make some repairs in the road to bring it up to city standards.

JOINT COMMITTEE — Agreed to join with the City of Belvedere and Reed Union School District in doing a study of how the three government agencies can share buildings and equipment.

MEMORIAL — Passed a resolution paying tribute to the work of Ebbtide Newspaper editor John Luc, who died Sunday.

CLOSED MEETING — Held a closed session to discuss possible litigation involving lands which the city wants to acquire as open space.

MEETING — Agreed to meet today at 7:30 p.m. at city hall to seat three new city council members.

Information Meeting Set On Institute

A meeting to form a Marin County chapter of the A. Philip Randolph Institute will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Manzanita Community Center, Marin City.

One of the new chapter's first efforts will be to increase voter registration in the county, according to Nancy Willner of San Rafael, interim publicity chairman.

The institute provides funding and knowledge to "help citizens influence their government and quality of life," she said.

The institute was founded by Asa Philip Randolph, founder of the pioneering Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and one of the most influential civil rights leaders in the United States.

Board Will Discuss Watershed Protection

Methods for protecting the watershed around Nicasio Lake will be discussed by directors of the Marin Municipal Water District at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow at district offices, 220 Nellen Avenue, Corte Madera, according to J. Dietrich Stroeh, acting general manager.

Discussion will center around land use planning and future use of the watershed, Stroeh said.

Tentative Parks Budget Set In Mill Valley

The Mill Valley Parks and Recreation Commission last night agreed on a tentative budget of $406,262 for 1974-75, up $71,288 from the current budget of $334,974.

According to Parks and Recreation Director Don L. Dimitratos, the new budget includes $145,100 in capital improvements including such projects as a new roof for the city golf clubhouse, two new tennis courts at Boyle Park, a new bridge at the golf course, filling Edgewood Avenue reservoir, improving drainage at Old Mill Park and landscaping the Camino Alto Media islands.

The entire budget must be approved by the city council before it becomes final. Last year the commission asked that $100,900 be budgeted for capital improvements and was granted only $10,000.

Tam High Trustees Set Teacher Talks

Tamalpais High School District trustees will meet in special session tomorrow at 8 p.m. to decide if some teachers will be notified that they may not be rehired next year because of a projected budget deficit.

Teachers who may not be rehired must be notified before Friday.

Reeves Attacks Burton Policy

Alan F. Reeves of San Francisco, candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Fifth Congressional District, today charged another candidate in the race, Assemblyman John L. Burton, of "creating an atmosphere of unfounded distrust" toward the management of the Golden Gate Bridge District.

The assemblyman's recent call for a state audit of the district, Reeves said, "is merely another grandstand play for publicity." Burton's move came after district directors voted to increase tolls.

Reeves said the March 1 toll increase "only reflects inflation and the soaring expense of operating costs."

The bridge district's mounting transit deficits, Reeves declared, will not be solved "by flinging irresponsible charges, but by taking full advantage of the resources at hand." He cited the availability of federal mass transit funds, a source already being tapped by the district.

McGUIRE — Terrence V. McGuire, also a candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Fifth Congressional District, has urged a 10-year limit on federal office holders "to open up the political process." He also has called upon his fellow candidates to limit campaign expenditures to $25,000 each for the June primary election "to demonstrate to the voting public that this congressional seat is not controlled by special interest groups, big business or labor bosses."

HOLLIS — Virgil S. Hollis, candidate for reelection as Marin County superintendent of schools, has urged expansion of teaching the metric system to kindergarten classes. Education should lead the inevitable conversion, not simply react when the change is ordered by federal law, Hollis said. Hollis's headquarters also announced the following coffees: 3 p.m. Sunday at the San Anselmo home of Valerie M. Ansel, 245-A Crescent Road; 8 p.m. next Tuesday at the Larkspur home of Charles Amudsen, 25 Piedmont Road; 8 p.m. on March 20 at the Novato home of Jeanette O. Transit Board Bus Counter Offer Made

The Marin County Transit District board today tendered a counter offer to the Golden Gate Bridge District in an attempt to resolve differences over how much the county should pay for bus service.

The counter offer, in effect, says the county will pay $205,000 to subsidize local passengers who board and get off transbay buses without leaving Marin.

Under a formula approved last year, the financially troubled transit district could be billed $350,000 by the bridge district for these passengers.

The transit district board's counter offer leaves open the question of how Marin's share of state gas tax revenues — earmarked for transit — will be used.

The bridge district had offered the $205,000 compromise figure on condition that Marin's share of the gas taxes be used in the same manner as last year, mainly for equipment purchases and operation of the bus fleet.

But transit directors said today the two matters should be separated and the gas tax issue resolved later, once the county voters decide whether to increase the tax rate for more local bus service.

If the voters opt for the June tax rate hike, from a nickel to 25 cents per $100 assessed valuation, the county will seek to have a portion of the gas tax revenues used to purchase buses for strictly local service, directors agreed.

The proposed $205,000 settlement includes about $120,000 of sales tax revenues expected to come to Marin from bridge district purchase of buses and ferries. The remaining $85,000 would come from local property taxes.

Mill Valley Council To Pick New Mayor

The Mill Valley City Council will seat reelected incumbent, Jean S. Barnard, and newly elected member, Ivan S. Poutiatine, today at 8 p.m. at city hall and also will pick a new mayor for 1974-75.

Also on the agenda is a proposal to require gas station owners to police the lines of cars backing up next to their business.

Operational Budget Is Approved

A $155,511 planning department budget for 1974-75, down $3,269 from this year, was approved last night by the Novato Planning Commission.

The budget doesn't include any additions to the staff, but contains a 5 per cent pay raise granted in a two-year agreement last year.

The budget has a decrease in capital outlay, $285 as compared to $2,265 last year; operating expenses, $39,550, as compared to $39,940, and contracts and professional services, $23,000 as compared to $30,500.

The increases are in personnel, $118,686 as compared to $113,686, and travel and transportation, $5,820 as compared to $3,755. Maintenance expenses are the same, $170.

The commission also recommended prezoning the Nunes property, 375 acres the northwest corner of San Marin Drive and Highway 101, to planned residential development. The land is now zoned for limited agriculture.

It approved a tentative map of Willow Creek, a 14-lot subdivision by Robert Hune on 3.8 acres at 1833 Center Road.

Bagley Will Introduce Funding Plan

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assemblyman William T. Bagley of San Rafael asserted today that Gov. Ronald Reagan and the Legislature don't have the "faintest idea" how local governments spend federal revenue sharing funds.

Bagley, a Republican candidate for state controller, announced he would introduce a bill to establish a program to monitor federal revenue sharing money in the controller's office.

He noted that annually $450 million in federal revenue sharing flows into California cities and counties, "but at this time neither the governor nor the legislature has the faintest idea as to where this money is going."

In a speech prepared for a California Chamber of Commerce tax conference, Bagley observed that the state now pumps another $6.6 billion each year into local government.

"We need to know where duplication and excesses are being created by joint funding or misspending," he said. Bagley said the monitoring program would turn over its findings to the governor and legislature for use during the writing of the state budget.

Sausalito To Seat A New Councilman

The Sausalito City Council will seat newly elected councilman Violeta Autumn and pick a new mayor for 1974-75 at 8 p.m. today in council chambers on Bridgeway.

Leonard F. Rappa, an attorney who was elected along with Mrs. Autumn, has declined to accept his seat until a decision on possible conflict of interest is given by the state Supreme Court.

McCord Says He's Asked House To Impeach Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — James W. McCord Jr., a convicted Watergate conspirator, said today he had formally asked the House to impeach President Nixon on grounds he failed to inform law officials that money had been paid to buy the silence of the original defendants.

McCord sent a six-page document to the House Judiciary Committee, which is conducting an impeachment inquiry. He made a similar statement in an open letter to the news media Friday and he confirmed today a report in the Washington Post that he had petitioned the committee Monday.

The Judiciary Committee's chairman, Rep. Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N. J., said today his panel had asked the White House for more than 40 tapes covering six days of conversations relating to the Watergate coverup.

UPI learned yesterday that 43 tapes were involved and that the scope of the request surrounded March 21, 1973 — the day Nixon said he first learned of the Watergate coverup.

The White House said it would be "constitutionally irresponsible" for President Nixon to agree to provide further material to the House Judiciary Committee until the panel defines its charges against the President.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler repeated Nixon's contention that the committee, now considering impeachment resolutions, already has sufficient White House tapes and documents "to conclude their inquiry and complete it quickly."

Ziegler stopped short of flatly rejecting the panel's request for additional tape recordings. But he declared the fact an impeachment inquiry is under way "does not give Congress the right to back a truck up and haul off the executive files it wants."

Rep. Edward Hutchinson of Michigan, ranking Republican on the committee, said he was told by the chief GOP counsel, Albert Jenner, that tapes covering three of the six dates were delivered to the committee staff yesterday. Rodino said he was not aware of that.

McCord, a security officer for the Committee to Re-elect the President at the time of the Watergate burglary June 17, 1972, told the committee Nixon "may have ... engaged in the conspiracy as the principal ... (and) engaged in a further conspiracy to impede and hinder those holding office ... from the proper discharge of their duties."

McCord referred to a news conference by Nixon last Wednesday in which he said John W. Dean, White House counsel until fired last April 30, told him on March 21 "that payments had been made to defendants for the purpose of keeping them quiet, not simply for their defenss."

Nixon had said last summer that he was told money was spent only for the defense of the seven persons charged in the Watergate break-in.

McCord claims his conviction would have been overturned if it had been known hush money was paid.

Rodino said the tapes sought from the White House were of presidential conversations on Feb. 20, Feb. 27, March 17, March 20, March 27 and March 30, 1973, with Dean and two other former White House aides, H.R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman.

In addition Rodino said his staff had asked for tapes of conversations Nixon had April 14-18, 1973, with Haldeman, Ehrlichman, then Attorney General Richard D. Kleindienst and the former top Justice Department official in charge of Watergate investigators, Henry Petersen.

Rodino said the April tapes were requested because they concern "very important matters and matters that leave a lot of questions unanswered."

Rodino criticized the White House for suggesting the committee was "on a fishing expedition" when it sent a letter to Nixon's attorney, James D. St. Clair, Feb. 25, seeking the tapes.

A public opinion poll published yesterday by Louis Harris said 54 per cent of persons surveyed thought the committee should recommend impeachment if Nixon does not provide information it wants. Thirty-two per cent opposed such action. Seventy-one per cent said they doubted Nixon had been "frank and honest" on Watergate matters and 18 per cent said they thought he had.

Reeves Attacks Burton Policy

Alan F. Reeves of San Francisco, candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Fifth Congressional District, today charged another candidate in the race, Assemblyman John L. Burton, of "creating an atmosphere of unfounded distrust" toward the management of the Golden Gate Bridge District.

The assemblyman's recent call for a state audit of the district, Reeves said, "is merely another grandstand play for publicity." Burton's move came after district directors voted to increase tolls.

Reeves said the March 1 toll increase "only reflects inflation and the soaring expense of operating costs."

The bridge district's mounting transit deficits, Reeves declared, will not be solved "by flinging irresponsible charges, but by taking full advantage of the resources at hand." He cited the availability of federal mass transit funds, a source already being tapped by the district.

McGUIRE — Terrence V. McGuire, also a candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Fifth Congressional District, has urged a 10-year limit on federal office holders "to open up the political process." He also has called upon his fellow candidates to limit campaign expenditures to $25,000 each for the June primary election "to demonstrate to the voting public that this congressional seat is not controlled by special interest groups, big business or labor bosses."

HOLLIS — Virgil S. Hollis, candidate for reelection as Marin County superintendent of schools, has urged expansion of teaching the metric system to kindergarten classes. Education should lead the inevitable conversion, not simply react when the change is ordered by federal law, Hollis said. Hollis's headquarters also announced the following coffees: 3 p.m. Sunday at the San Anselmo home of Valerie M. Tiburon Delays On Condominium Policy

Action on an ordinance to require apartment building owners to upgrade their projects before converting them to condominiums was delayed last night by the Tiburon City Council. (Another Tiburon City Council story, page 1.)

Councilman Albert H. Sennett, who was assigned to study the ordinance written by the planning commission, said he thought that the measure could not pass until the city building code was changed to agree with the new legislation.

"Without changes in the building code, we couldn't enforce the ordinance," he said.

Councilman Allan N. Littman objected that action on the condominium issue had been postponed long enough, but the rest of the council decided to save the problem for the next council which will be seated tonight.

While the city has debated the issue, there has been a moratorium on condominium conversions.

The Tiburon City Council Also:

COMMISSIONS — Asked residents to begin applying for openings on the planning commission and board of adjustments created when commissioners and board members were recently elected to the city council.

HACIENDA DRIVE — Accepted the deed to lower Hacienda Drive and acknowledged that the city would have to make some repairs in the road to bring it up to city standards.

JOINT COMMITTEE — Agreed to join with the City of Belvedere and Reed Union School District in doing a study of how the three government agencies can share buildings and equipment.

MEMORIAL — Passed a resolution paying tribute to the work of Ebbtide Newspaper editor John Luc, who died Sunday.

CLOSED MEETING — Held a closed session to discuss possible litigation involving lands which the city wants to acquire as open space.

MEETING — Agreed to meet today at 7:30 p.m. at city hall to seat three new city council members.

Information Meeting Set On Institute

A meeting to form a Marin County chapter of the A. Philip Randolph Institute will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Manzanita Community Center, Marin City.

One of the new chapter's first efforts will be to increase voter registration in the county, according to Nancy Willner of San Rafael, interim publicity chairman.

The institute provides funding and knowledge to "help citizens influence their government and quality of life," she said.

The institute was founded by Asa Philip Randolph, founder of the pioneering Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and one of the most influential civil rights leaders in the United States.

Board Will Discuss Watershed Protection

Methods for protecting the watershed around Nicasio Lake will be discussed by directors of the Marin Municipal Water District at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow at district offices, 220 Nellen Avenue, Corte Madera, according to J. Dietrich Stroeh, acting general manager.

Discussion will center around land use planning and future use of the watershed, Stroeh said.

Tentative Parks Budget Set In Mill Valley

The Mill Valley Parks and Recreation Commission last night agreed on a tentative budget of $406,262 for 1974-75, up $71,288 from the current budget of $334,974.

According to Parks and Recreation Director Don L. Dimitratos, the new budget includes $145,100 in capital improvements including such projects as a new roof for the city golf clubhouse, two new tennis courts at Boyle Park, a new bridge at the golf course, filling Edgewood Avenue reservoir, improving drainage at Old Mill Park and landscaping the Camino Alto Media islands.

The entire budget must be approved by the city council before it becomes final. Last year the commission asked that $100,900 be budgeted for capital improvements and was granted only $10,000.

Tam High Trustees Set Teacher Talks

Tamalpais High School District trustees will meet in special session tomorrow at 8 p.m. to decide if some teachers will be notified that they may not be rehired next year because of a projected budget deficit.

Teachers who may not be rehired must be notified before Friday.

Annex Of Campus Is Slated

The 330-acre Indian Valley Colleges campus at the end of Ignacio Boulevard is slated to be annexed to the Novato Sanitary District.

Directors last night applied to the Marin County Local Agency Formation Commission to annex the campus and Dist. Mgr. Charles A. Joseph said the college district has consented to annexation.

Directors also awarded Pacific Pipe Tool Co. of Sacramento, low bidder, a contract to supply a replacement rodding machine at a cost of $6,067 and the Boat Shop of Novato a contract to supply a boat and trailer, to be used in sampling water, at a cost of $4,700.

Putting A Damper On Your Drinking

PITTSBURGH (AP) — If you had to buy water by the ton, you'd be getting a pretty good bargain, according to Rockwell International Corp., largest producer of domestic water meters in the U.S.

Municipal water sells for about 20 cents a ton. If you bought soda pop the same way, it would cost you $210 per ton. Beer by the ton sells for $405 per ton, while 100 proof whisky sells for the equivalent of $6,144 a ton.

Plea Made To Cut Sewage Dumping Till Strike Ends

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Regional Water Quality Control Board's chairman appealed to San Franciscans yesterday to cut back in their water usage while sewage disposal plants are closed by a strike.

Sydney Lippow, the chairman, pointed out that since the strike by municipal employes started last Thursday, the city has been pouring upwards of 100 million gallons of untreated sewage into San Francisco Bay and the Pacific Ocean.

Saying he was outraged by the "lack of responsibility by supposedly responsible parties," Lippow declared, "The bay is not and cannot be a pawn in this struggle."

The city's three sewage disposal plants are operated by 100 members of the Stationary Engineers Union who voted not to cross the picket lines of the Service Employes Union, which is striking the city in a pay dispute.

Lippow urged San Franciscans to minimize the use of garbage disposals, to avoid dumping grease, fats and oily materials down drains, to wash dishes only once daily and to put off doing laundry.

Dr. Francis J. Curry, the city's health director, said the dumping does not as yet present a health hazard as long as the public stays off the beaches.

"The situation is aesthetically unpleasant and the beaches are unsafe for human use."

But Dr. George Pickett, health director for San Mateo County to the south of San Francisco, declared the dumping was causing a "distinct public health hazard" there.

At the request of the state attorney general's office, Judge Clayton W. Horn in Superior Court issued an order requiring the city to continue operating the plants.

If the city fails, it could be fined as much as $40,000 daily.

As yet, the city has taken no legal action against the strikers.

30-Year World War II Holdout Returns To A Hero's Welcome

TOKYO (UPI) — Lt. Hiroo Onoda, a Japanese soldier who hid in the Philippine jungles for 30 years, refusing to surrender, returned today to a hero's welcome and reunion with his aged parents.

"My parents had told me that you should do your best at any moment. I've never thought of surrendering without orders," the 52-year-old Onoda told a news conference.

Wearing a dark suit, white shirt, and striped tie, the World War II holdout stiffened when a reporter asked if he thought he should surrender when fellow holdout Kinshichi Kozuka was shot to death in an encounter with a Filipino patrol on Lubang Island in 1972.

Onoda said, "Never! How can I think so! I just intensified my determination to avenge him."

He said he was only convinced of Japan's surrender when told of it by his former commander, Yoshimi Taniguchi, a few days before he came out of the jungles.

Taniguchi had ordered Onoda on a World War II intelligence mission in 1944 on Lubang, 75 miles south of Manila, with orders to stay put "no matter what happened."

On Sunday, Onoda, after being convinced to give in by Taniguchi and Japanese welfare ministry officials, handed his rusty Samurai sword to Maj. Gen. Jose Rancudo, Philippine Air Force chief of staff. Rancudo handed Onoda back the sword to symbolize his freedom.

Onoda, looking haggard but standing straight, stepped down the ramp of a special Japan Air Lines flight to a warm welcome by his father, Tanejiro, 86, and mother, Tamae, 88, and relatives of friends who were killed in action.

The mother, in a wheelchair, burst into tears as her son reached out to take her hands.

TV Time Sought For Pair As Demanded By Hearst Kidnapers

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — An attorney for one of two imprisoned Symbionese Liberation Army members said today negotiations were underway to permit them to appear on national television, as demanded by the kidnapers of Patricia Hearst.

"We're trying earnestly to arrange the interview," said Alameda County Public Defender James Jenner, who represents Russell Little, 26, who along with Joseph Remiro, 27, is being held on charges of slaying Oakland Schools Superintendent Dr. Marcus Foster last November.

The demand that the pair be allowed to appear on a live televised news conference was one of two made in their last communique by the SLA, which kidnaped Patricia Feb. 4.

The kidnapers also demanded that the $2 million "People in Need" food program established by Patricia's father, Randolph Hearst, be totally revamped. Hears said yesterday he would "do exactly as they say."

Jenner said there were still "a number of details to be worked out." He declined to discuss them, but said he hoped agreement could be reached soon.

Hearst said Monday he would do everything he could to get Remiro and Little on television. But he said the decision was up to the attorneys.

After the televised news conference proposal was first made in a letter from Remiro and Little made public last week, Jenner and Remiro's attorney, Edward Merrill, said they were opposed because of the affect it might have on trial of the Foster case.

The PIN food distribution scheduled for today was canceled to give program officials time to improve the quality of the food, criticized by the SLA as "hog feed" and "unfit for human consumption."

He said that the $1 million remaining from the $2 million committed to the program would be poured into enough food to be distributed in, at most, three more distributions.

Hearst has expended a little more than $1 million in five distributions. He had planned on spending a total of $2 million, spread over another month. Now, however, he said he would spend the rest of the money in from one to three days of food distribution to the poor.

A. Ludlow Kramer, his PIN program director, said he hoped to begin the final phase of the food program on Friday.

Remiro, 27, and Little, 26, were held in the Alameda County Jail in Oakland on murder charges in the slaying of Oakland School Superintendent Marcus A. Foster on Nov. 6. They had asked for an opportunity to appear on TV to detail a plan for Miss Hearst's release.

"They might say something that would help us in our future negotiations," Hearst said.

Hearst also said it was "idiotic" to think his daughter was connected with the SLA before her kidnap or was a willing victim.

He made the statement because Patty criticized him and his family in the weekend tape recordings for not putting up enough money for the food program for the poor.

"Anyone who listened to her on that first tape (after her kidnap) and believes she was a part of this has got to be a February dum-dum," he said.

Charles Bates, the FBI agent in charge of the kidnap investigation, told newsmen he thought it was "a logical assumption that, since she is being held by these people, she's saying what they tell her to say." He added that the weekend tape recording appeared to be "something she is reading ... It's obviously something she was told to say."

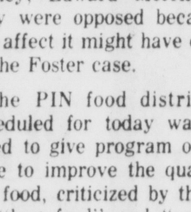

The attorneys for Remiro and Little met with their clients yesterday but did not disclose the outcome of the conference on the TV appearance.

Final approval will have to come from the court and the prosecuting attorneys.

Annex Of Campus Is Slated

The 330-acre Indian Valley Colleges campus at the end of Ignacio Boulevard is slated to be annexed to the Novato Sanitary District.

Directors last night applied to the Marin County Local Agency Formation Commission to annex the campus and Dist. Mgr. Charles A. Joseph said the college district has consented to annexation.

Directors also awarded Pacific Pipe Tool Co. of Sacramento, low bidder, a contract to supply a replacement rodding machine at a cost of $6,067 and the Boat Shop of Novato a contract to supply a boat and trailer, to be used in sampling water, at a cost of $4,700.

Putting A Damper On Your Drinking

PITTSBURGH (AP) — If you had to buy water by the ton, you'd be getting a pretty good bargain, according to Rockwell International Corp., largest producer of domestic water meters in the U.S.

Municipal water sells for about 20 cents a ton. If you bought soda pop the same way, it would cost you $210 per ton. Beer by the ton sells for $405 per ton, while 100 proof whisky sells for the equivalent of $6,144 a ton.

Plea Made To Cut Sewage Dumping Till Strike Ends

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Regional Water Quality Control Board's chairman appealed to San Franciscans yesterday to cut back in their water usage while sewage disposal plants are closed by a strike.

Sydney Lippow, the chairman, pointed out that since the strike by municipal employes started last Thursday, the city has been pouring upwards of 100 million gallons of untreated sewage into San Francisco Bay and the Pacific Ocean.

Saying he was outraged by the "lack of responsibility by supposedly responsible parties," Lippow declared, "The bay is not and cannot be a pawn in this struggle."

The city's three sewage disposal plants are operated by 100 members of the Stationary Engineers Union who voted not to cross the picket lines of the Service Employes Union, which is striking the city in a pay dispute.

Lippow urged San Franciscans to minimize the use of garbage disposals, to avoid dumping grease, fats and oily materials down drains, to wash dishes only once daily and to put off doing laundry.

Dr. Francis J. Curry, the city's health director, said the dumping does not as yet present a health hazard as long as the public stays off the beaches.

"The situation is aesthetically unpleasant and the beaches are unsafe for human use."

But Dr. George Pickett, health director for San Mateo County to the south of San Francisco, declared the dumping was causing a "distinct public health hazard" there.

At the request of the state attorney general's office, Judge Clayton W. Horn in Superior Court issued an order requiring the city to continue operating the plants.

If the city fails, it could be fined as much as $40,000 daily.

As yet, the city has taken no legal action against the strikers.

30-Year World War II Holdout Returns To A Hero's Welcome

TOKYO (UPI) — Lt. Hiroo Onoda, a Japanese soldier who hid in the Philippine jungles for 30 years, refusing to surrender, returned today to a hero's welcome and reunion with his aged parents.

"My parents had told me that you should do your best at any moment. I've never thought of surrendering without orders," the 52-year-old Onoda told a news conference.

Wearing a dark suit, white shirt, and striped tie, the World War II holdout stiffened when a reporter asked if he thought he should surrender when fellow holdout Kinshichi Kozuka was shot to death in an encounter with a Filipino patrol on Lubang Island in 1972.

Onoda said, "Never! How can I think so! I just intensified my determination to avenge him."

He said he was only convinced of Japan's surrender when told of it by his former commander, Yoshimi Taniguchi, a few days before he came out of the jungles.

Taniguchi had ordered Onoda on a World War II intelligence mission in 1944 on Lubang, 75 miles south of Manila, with orders to stay put "no matter what happened."

On Sunday, Onoda, after being convinced to give in by Taniguchi and Japanese welfare ministry officials, handed his rusty Samurai sword to Maj. Gen. Jose Rancudo, Philippine Air Force chief of staff. Rancudo handed Onoda back the sword to symbolize his freedom.

Onoda, looking haggard but standing straight, stepped down the ramp of a special Japan Air Lines flight to a warm welcome by his father, Tanejiro, 86, and mother, Tamae, 88, and relatives of friends who were killed in action.

The mother, in a wheelchair, burst into tears as her son reached out to take her hands.

TV Time Sought For Pair As Demanded By Hearst Kidnapers

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — An attorney for one of two imprisoned Symbionese Liberation Army members said today negotiations were underway to permit them to appear on national television, as demanded by the kidnapers of Patricia Hearst.

"We're trying earnestly to arrange the interview," said Alameda County Public Defender James Jenner, who represents Russell Little, 26, who along with Joseph Remiro, 27, is being held on charges of slaying Oakland Schools Superintendent Dr. Marcus Foster last November.

The demand that the pair be allowed to appear on a live televised news conference was one of two made in their last communique by the SLA, which kidnaped Patricia Feb. 4.

The kidnapers also demanded that the $2 million "People in Need" food program established by Patricia's father, Randolph Hearst, be totally revamped. Hears said yesterday he would "do exactly as they say."

Jenner said there were still "a number of details to be worked out." He declined to discuss them, but said he hoped agreement could be reached soon.

Hearst said Monday he would do everything he could to get Remiro and Little on television. But he said the decision was up to the attorneys.

After the televised news conference proposal was first made in a letter from Remiro and Little made public last week, Jenner and Remiro's attorney, Edward Merrill, said they were opposed because of the affect it might have on trial of the Foster case.

Earns eagle award

Three Troop 59 Scouts To Get Eagle Rank In Friday Ceremony

Three Scouts — two of them brothers — will receive eagle awards in a court of honor for Boy Scout Troup 59 at 8 p.m. Friday in the Little Theater at Redwood High School.

The recipients will be David M. Dougherty, 15, of Kentfield, and Mark D. Molinari, 15, and Steven C. Molinari, 16, of Greenbrae.

Dougherty is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel P. Dougherty of 3 Mann Drive. He is a sophomore at Redwood High, where he is in the cast of the school's production of "Guys and Dolls."

He joined Troop 59 three years ago; his father now is scoutmaster. He has participated in two 50-mile hikes, two Sierra summer camps and the international Scout Jamboree in Idaho last year. He was a senior patrol leader.

Dougherty's Eagle project was to make photographic portraits of new members of the First Presbyterian Church of San Anselmo for display on the church bulletin board and for church records.

The Molinari brothers are sons of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Molinari of 57 Corte Gracitas.

The two brothers worked together on their Eagle project — building two combination benches and planter boxes for the courtyard of Marin Catholic High School, from lumber donated by the school. The brothers donated the plants and the labor.

A third brother, Peter Molinari, earned his Eagle rank in December 1972.

Steven Molinari, 16, is a junior at Marin Catholic High and a five-year member of Troop 59. He took part in two 50-mile hikes and the 1973 Jamboree in Idaho, and has served as patrol leader, quartermaster and senior patrol leader in the troop.

Mark Molinari, 15, is a freshman at Marin Catholic High and a four-year member of Troop 59. He also attended the Jamboree and went on 50-mile hikes with the troop, while serving as quartermaster. His hobby is hunting.

A Former Manson Member Has Kidnap Plot Hearing

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Maria Theresa Alonzo, 22, a former Manson family member who has the cult's "X-mark" cut into her forehead, yesterday was arraigned on charges of plotting to kidnap a foreign diplomat.

U.S. Magistrate Veneta S. Tassopoulos set bail at $350,000 and scheduled a preliminary hearing for March 23.

"The facts alleged under oath apparently have quite a bit of substantiation and are not just hearsay," said the magistrate, who was given an 11-page affidavit from the U.S. attorney's office supporting the charge. The affidavit was ordered sealed.

Miss Alonzo, also known as Karen Marie Forbes, allegedly plotted to kidnap the consul general here of one of eight nations—Canada, France, Germany, Switzerland, Haiti, Paraguay, Uruguay or Estonia.

"The kidnaping of a foreign official was imminent," said U.S. Attorney Robert Perry. "They came perilously close."

The plot allegedly involved kidnaping the diplomat and demanding a ransom of $250,000, political asylum in Sweden, and the release of two inmates of the county jail, Robert B. Hedburg, 36, also known as Bobby Forbes, and Garrett Brock Trapnell.

Forbes is awaiting trial on charges of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution following a gun battle with police in Calexico, Calif. Trapnell was shot by an FBI agent after hijacking a airliner, demanding a $306,000 ransom and the release of black militant Angela Davis, who was then in jail.

Miss Alonzo was arrested Friday by FBI agents who said they confiscated a loaded revolver, a wig and a tape recorder that were to be used in the kidnap. The FBI said it found out about the scheme from an informer who was supposed to take part in the kidnap.

CAMP FIRE PROJECT

Annual Spring Festival To Be Saturday

The fifth-grade Camp Fire Adventurers from Dixie Elementary School in Lucas Valley are just one Camp Fire group of some 40 who will participate in the annual Spring Festival and Camp-o-Rama Saturday at Terra Linda High School gymnasium.

The girls will exhibit or sell the articles they have made, run games they have planned, put on performances and learn about summer camping opportunities during the public festival from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The Camp Fire Adventurers display many aspects of the Camp Fire program in their weekly activities. The busy 26 young Adventurers, led by Connie Turner of Lucas Valley, have been into many things since fall.

IN ROUNDTABLE discussions, they decided to raise money for a trip for the whole group.

"They wanted to go around the world," said Mrs. Turner, but now have set their sights on Washington, D.C.

Along with games and putting on plays, making invitations and planning their Mother-Daughter Tea, they have learned to make and have created fire starters of cardboard tubes, sawdust and paper, and have made small decoupage wall-decorations.

They also wrote and presented a play for the mother-daughter tea in January and now are planning to write and make a series of short films which they will show to other groups or parent organizations to earn trip money.

The articles they have made will be among those displayed for sale at the festival, also for their travel fund. So far the girls have earned $150 from their creations.

They do their own planning at business and committee meetings and roundtable discussions.

But it isn't always business for the Adventurers. They like to play games and enjoy outdoor sports, and have a songfest with the group's assistant, Jennifer Olson, a freshman at Terra Linda High School, who plays guitar and sings.

The Adventurers will take a typical and active part in the spring festival Saturday with the other second grade through junior high school girls in the San Rafael Camp Fire Girls District.

All the groups have been invited to have booths for display of their activities and articles or to put on a performance.

AT NOON, the camp director from Golden Gate District of Camp Fire in San Francisco, Harold Kuhlman, will tell the girls about the resident camp programs for summer and show slides of camp life.

The activities displayed at the festival will illustrate the result of the new updated Camp Fire program designed for the 1970s and implemented nationally last fall to provide a more flexible structure for the growth and development of girls today.

And San Rafael District is just one of the three in Marin. Novato District is planning a fashion show in April and Southern Marin District will have its Camp Fire activities.

THE SUBURBAN SCENE

'Newsmakers' Fashion Show Theme

By MOLLY MARIN

Each of the 10 sequences Friday at the Junior League of San Francisco's 38th annual fashion show will be played against a back drop depicting the newspaper world.

"The Newsmakers" is the theme for the show, which will be given twice on Friday in the Grand Ballroom of the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco. The first show will follow a noon luncheon. The second will be at 8 p.m. prior to a 9 p.m. dinner dance. Chairman is Mrs. Michael Hall of San Francisco, assisted by Mmes. Peter Charles and Thomas A. Belshe of Kentfield.

Marin women who will model are Mmes. Blaine Boyden of Greenbrae, Kirk Frederick of San Rafael, James Phelps, Roger Cook and James E. Munson of Tiburon, Gene M. Edwards and Lee M. Gammill Jr. of Mill Valley, McKenzie Moss of Kentfield and Gilbert Powers, of Ross.

The model's runway will come alive by use of rear screen projection slides on a 13 by 8 foot screen, opening with rolling presses, trucks waiting to pick up newspaper bundles and newspaper boys getting ready for morning deliveries.

Projections will change with each sequence, depicting a section or column from the newspaper. Clothes have been coordinated to the various sequences: want ads, 'Top of the News," comics, weather, "Postcard From . . .", sporting green, T.V. log, datebook, "My Town" and this day in history.

The final sequence will feature Mrs. Alice Wiley Potts of Mill Valley sparking in a million dollars worth of jewels, dancing with Lee M. Gammill of Mill Valley. Explosions of light emanating from diamonds will appear on the screen. Other dancers from Marin in the sequence will be Mr. and Mrs. Howard Banks and Dr. Walter Coulson of Kentfield.

Proceeds from the shows will be used to replenish the league's community trust fund, which supports the organization's projects and community services. The league's current programs are an art appreciation program, the China Town after school program, the Exploratorium, the Forum of Environmental Quality, the San Mateo Directory, a school area coordinator project, Madrigal singers, symphony, opera and ballet previews and a volunteer in college and career information program.

Also modeling from Marin will be Charles McDaneld of San Rafael, eight Marin children and five Marin teen-agers.

AT NOON, the camp director from Golden Gate District of Camp Fire in San Francisco, Harold Kuhlman, will tell the girls about the resident camp programs for summer and show slides of camp life.

The activities displayed at the festival will illustrate the result of the new updated Camp Fire program designed for the 1970s and implemented nationally last fall to provide a more flexible structure for the growth and development of girls today.

And San Rafael District is just one of the three in Marin. Novato District is planning a fashion show in April and Southern Marin District will have its Camp Fire activities.

THE SUBURBAN SCENE

'Newsmakers' Fashion Show Theme

By MOLLY MARIN

Each of the 10 sequences Friday at the Junior League of San Francisco's 38th annual fashion show will be played against a back drop depicting the newspaper world.

"The Newsmakers" is the theme for the show, which will be given twice on Friday in the Grand Ballroom of the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco. The first show will follow a noon luncheon. The second will be at 8 p.m. prior to a 9 p.m. dinner dance. Chairman is Mrs. Michael Hall of San Francisco, assisted by Mmes. Peter Charles and Thomas A. Belshe of Kentfield.

Marin women who will model are Mmes. Blaine Boyden of Greenbrae, Kirk Frederick of San Rafael, James Phelps, Roger Cook and James E. Munson of Tiburon, Gene M. Edwards and Lee M. Gammill Jr. of Mill Valley, McKenzie Moss of Kentfield and Gilbert Powers, of Ross.

The model's runway will come alive by use of rear screen projection slides on a 13 by 8 foot screen, opening with rolling presses, trucks waiting to pick up newspaper bundles and newspaper boys getting ready for morning deliveries.

Projections will change with each sequence, depicting a section or column from the newspaper. Clothes have been coordinated to the various sequences: want ads, "Top of the News," comics, weather, "Postcard From . . .", sporting green, T.V. log, datebook, "My Town" and this day in history.

The final sequence will feature Mrs. Alice Wiley Potts of Mill Valley sparking in a million dollars worth of jewels, dancing with Lee M. Gammill of Mill Valley. Explosions of light emanating from diamonds will appear on the screen. Other dancers from Marin in the sequence will be Mr. and Mrs. Howard Banks and Dr. Walter Coulson of Kentfield.

Proceeds from the shows will be used to replenish the league's community trust fund, which supports the organization's projects and community services. The league's current programs are an art appreciation program, the China Town after school program, the Exploratorium, the Forum of Environmental Quality, the San Mateo Directory, a school area coordinator project, Madrigal singers, symphony, opera and ballet previews and a volunteer in college and career information program.

Also modeling from Marin will be Charles McDaneld of San Rafael, eight Marin children and five Marin teen-agers.

Windows Are Atop The Problem List

If I made a list of the architectural oddities I hate, poorly placed windows take first place in a walk. I think that windows in the wrong place, can often lead to the kind of quiet desperation that defeats even an old decorating hand like me.

And the room most architects and builders single out for this kind of hopeless window is what is commonly called the second bedroom. This room, always a poor relative in the planning phase, usually ends up with a window smacked straight in the middle of the only conceivable bed wall, due, no doubt, to the architect's interest in preserving a regular window pattern on the exterior. The interior is bequeathed to us of course.

I have had this problem in so many homes that I have a handy list of happy answers. One of the most satisfying solutions for a bewindowed second bedroom was to convert the window itself into a headboard.

The idea was simple. The window, as are many of this type, was four feet wide, not much wider than a single bed, and high enough from the floor to leave plenty of head room.

I used a plain white window shade in a modern plastic finish, then painted a blue outline around fluffy clouds and a green hill. I used acrylic, quick-drying paint for a washable surface; it's easy: just draw the outlines with a light pencil line and fill in around them. Like the funnies.

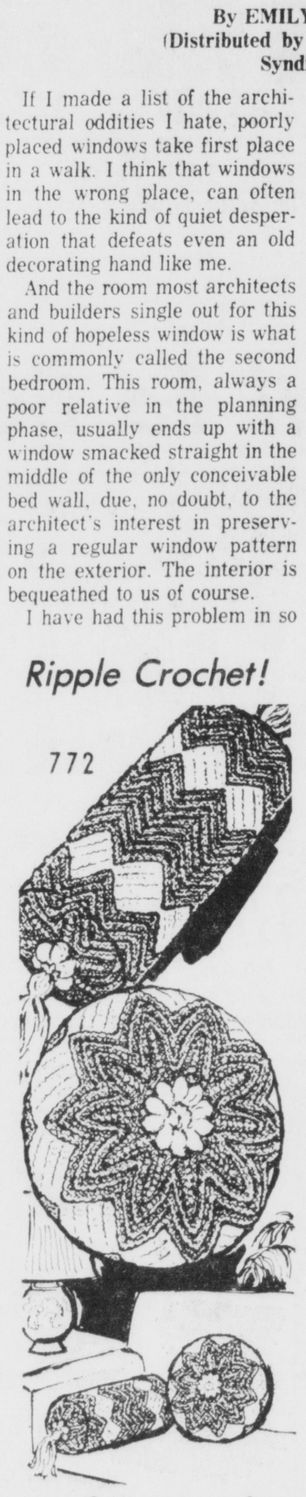

The bedspread is the same blue, in corduroy, with appliqued white clouds of terry-toweling stitched to it at random intervals, extending the feeling of sky into the room, and making the window seem larger and more important.

The top of the bed is actually about 12 inches from the bottom of the window providing a safe resting place for the hard head of the busy boy who lives here, but to cushion the blow, I made additional cumulus cloud pillows in the same terry cloth and added a big red round dot covered in felt.

Wood siding in a natural finish makes a durable wall covering and the work shelf and storage units are finished the same way, with plenty of room to display any number of tennis rackets or model sailboats.

The wall-mounted lamp and recessed platform holding the mattress combine with the other durable washables to make housekeeping a minor matter, and also convert the window shade headboard into the center of attraction in spite of the anonymous window of this typical second bedroom.

Britain Is Given More Socialism

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson's week-old Labor party minority government today handed Britons a strong new dose of Socialist policies, including food subsidies, redistribution of wealth and renegotiation of Britain's Common Market membership terms.

But, treading the perilous tightrope of minority rule, it avoided pledges such as nationalization of large new areas of industry that could topple it at once.

The government's program was read by Queen Elizabeth in the traditional Queen's speech at the opening session of the new parliament elected Feb. 28. It represented an outline of the policies of the new Wilson government.

Because of the haste with which the Feb. 28 election was held, the usual pomp and ceremony of the opening was scrapped, and instead of riding to parliament in a gilded state coach in her ceremonial robes, the queen wore a simple dress and hat and drove in a Buckingham Palace car.

Among principal measures announced were food subsidies and control of food prices, higher pensions, a state takeover of land for home building, improved education, and repeal of the former Conservative party government's controversial Industrial Relations Act.

This was designed to curb wildcat strikes and limit labor union powers. It was deeply resented by the labor unions and the Labor party promised its immediate repeal as a top election pledge.

Prominent among the new government's pledges was "a fundamental renegotiation" of Britain's Common Market membership terms, to be followed by a referendum.

But the speech contained no pledge to pull Britain out of the Common Market if the referendum vote is against continued membership.

Contrary to expectation, the speech also did not pledge nationalization of Britain's huge North Sea and other offshore oil resources, which are being developed largely by American and other foreign companies.

It promised merely "to ensure that oil and gas from the Continental shelf are exploited in ways and on terms which will confer maximum benefit on the community."

In another indication of caution, the government did not promise immediate scrapping of the anti-inflation Pay Board set up by the former Conservative government or an immediate return to free wage bargaining.

It promised merely to "consult" with the 10 million-member Trades Union Congress (TUC), the Confederation of Britain Industry "and others concerned" about methods of securing "an orderly growth of incomes on a voluntary basis."

Political informants said the program appeared designed to satisfy the Labor party's left wing without unnecessarily antagonizing the Conservative and Liberal parties and challenging them to topple the new minority government at once.

The omission of pledges to nationalize large new sectors of industry, including 50 major firms, also appeared designed not to frighten foreign bankers, from whom Britain soon must borrow up to $5 billion to shore up the pound.

ART REVIEW

Serigraphs: Joy Of Being Alive

By ADA GARFINKEL

"The Joy of Being Alive" is the theme of Fairfax artist Beatrice Darwin's exhibit of serigraph prints and black-and-white drawings at the Social Security Gallery at 549 Northgate Drive in San Rafael.

As an illustrator for a number of children's books, Mrs. Darwin has learned to see the natural world through the eyes of a child — directly and joyously.

Rain, for example, is to be seen, touched, felt, splashed, and to make friends with. Small, contributory sketches and notations in several prints tell you that "Trees are for climbing, for swinging, for sitting in the shade, for beauty, and for fun."

The latter prints in olive greens and aqumarine blue also show that trees are for building tree-houses in, for picking cherries, and for watching squirrels and owls hopping about. Side sketches include tapping trees for maple sap, boiling the syrup, and finally, enjoying it with pancakes.

Texture and motion are qualities which can be really experienced in Mrs. Darwin's work. One sees this, for example, in a silkscreen print of an immense moon hovering behind the black, barren branches of a close-up section of a tree. Shown not as a solid mass, but in broad, white linear strokes against a midnight blue background, the effect is one of vibration.

Equally intriguing are several prints which show a 5-year-old boy in a bright red raincoat, hat, and boots splashing through a large, glistening puddle; exploring the colorful reflections in it of himself, a picket fence, his home; making friends with a worm, and, finally, with the frog whom he had dislodged from his puddle-home.

Small black-and-white drawings of a silhouetted portrait of an oaktree joined to its inverted, semi-circular cast-shadow, and two women scurrying through a downpour of rain under a huge sombrero are the most interesting of Mrs. Darwin's drawings.

This display will continue through April 12.

Composer Maganini Dies At 77

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — Quinto Maganini, a composer, conductor and educator who won a Pulitzer Prize for music in 1927, died Sunday at Greenwich Hospital after a brief illness. He was 77.

Born in Fairfield (Solano County) Maganini lived in Greenwich for 40 years. His family had moved from Genoa, Italy, to California during the 1850 gold rush.

At the age of 19, while playing flute and piccolo with the John Philip Souza band in San Francisco, he was discovered by Walter Damrosch who took him to New York to join the New York Symphony.

He then studied with Madia Boulanger in Paris and Fontainebleau. He subseqquently became president of the American Schools at Fontainebleau, a post he held until his death.

"The Argonauts," his opera about the California gold rush, won the Pulitzer Prize in 1927.

As a conductor he made guest appearances with symphony orchestras in Paris, New York and San Francisco and was conductor of the Norwalk Symphony for 25 years.

He is survived by his widow, a daughter, a brother and two grandchildren.

Film Planned On Discouraging Alaskan Influx

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — When a state is considering spending $150,000 to produce a film, it usually is with the hope of drawing more people to the state. Alaska seems about ready to do the opposite.

The Alaska House has approved a bill to produce a documentary to discourage job seekers from coming to Alaska with hopes of getting jobs on the trans-Alaska pipeline project. The bill, approved 27 to 7, now goes to the Senate.

The chief sponsor of the bill, Anchorage Democrat Russ Meekins, says he thinks people outside Alaska have been misled into believing that lucrative jobs will be available on the pipeline project set to begin this spring.

Police said the man picked up the girl as she was hitchiking in San Rafael and drove her to Tamalpais Avenue in San Anselmo. The girl was able to kick open a door and flee after he grabbed her by the throat and tried to pull off her clothes.

Police described the man as having short blond hair, blue eyes and a husky build.

The $500 scholarship perpetuates the memory of Archie Culpepper, a long-time member of the Marin County Board of Realtors and a past president of the board. The award was established by the board in 1957, under the administration of the late Neil Brodsgar.

Lyle Newberry of Home & Land Co. of San Rafael is chairman of the scholarship subcommittee of the Board of Realtors' public relations committee.

Bush Sees Hope In Fall Voting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Things have a way of changing, says Republican National Chairman George Bush, and that is why he is not as pessimistic as many colleagues are about GOP chances in the fall congressional races.

So far this year, Democrats have won three Republican seats in special elections, with two of the winners basing their campaigns against President Nixon and the Watergate scandals.

"These things have a way of changing," Bush said, advising "Don't judge the fall elections by the facts as you see them today."

85 Pct. Hike In Apartment Rents Reported

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Apartment rents rose 85 per cent in San Francisco during the last 10 years, more than any other major U.S. city.

The figures were released over the weekend by the Department of City Planning. The report said the increase almost tripled the overall cost of living increases for the same period.

The study said one third of the city's apartment dwellers pay 35 per cent of their income for rent.

The steep rise was attributed to inflation, higher taxes and operating costs and increased demand for housing.

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson's week-old Labor party minority government today handed Britons a strong new dose of Socialist policies, including food subsidies, redistribution of wealth and renegotiation of Britain's Common Market membership terms.

But, treading the perilous tightrope of minority rule, it avoided pledges such as nationalization of large new areas of industry that could topple it at once.

The government's program was read by Queen Elizabeth in the traditional Queen's speech at the opening session of the new parliament elected Feb. 28. It represented an outline of the policies of the new Wilson government.

Because of the haste with which the Feb. 28 election was held, the usual pomp and ceremony of the opening was scrapped, and instead of riding to parliament in a gilded state coach in her ceremonial robes, the queen wore a simple dress and hat and drove in a Buckingham Palace car.

Among principal measures announced were food subsidies and control of food prices, higher pensions, a state takeover of land for home building, improved education, and repeal of the former Conservative party government's controversial Industrial Relations Act.

Prominent among the new government's pledges was "a fundamental renegotiation" of Britain's Common Market membership terms, to be followed by a referendum.

But the speech contained no pledge to pull Britain out of the Common Market if the referendum vote is against continued membership.

Contrary to expectation, the speech also did not pledge nationalization of Britain's huge North Sea and other offshore oil resources, which are being developed largely by American and other foreign companies.

It promised merely "to ensure that oil and gas from the Continental shelf are exploited in ways and on terms which will confer maximum benefit on the community."

In another indication of caution, the government did not promise immediate scrapping of the anti-inflation Pay Board set up by the former Conservative government or an immediate return to free wage bargaining.

It promised merely to "consult" with the 10 million-member Trades Union Congress (TUC), the Confederation of Britain Industry "and others concerned" about methods of securing "an orderly growth of incomes on a voluntary basis."

Political informants said the program appeared designed to satisfy the Labor party's left wing without unnecessarily antagonizing the Conservative and Liberal parties and challenging them to topple the new minority government at once.

The omission of pledges to nationalize large new sectors of industry, including 50 major firms, also appeared designed not to frighten foreign bankers, from whom Britain soon must borrow up to $5 billion to shore up the pound.

ART REVIEW

Serigraphs: Joy Of Being Alive

By ADA GARFINKEL

"The Joy of Being Alive" is the theme of Fairfax artist Beatrice Darwin's exhibit of serigraph prints and black-and-white drawings at the Social Security Gallery at 549 Northgate Drive in San Rafael.

As an illustrator for a number of children's books, Mrs. Darwin has learned to see the natural world through the eyes of a child — directly and joyously.

The latter prints in olive greens and aqumarine blue also show that trees are for building tree-houses in, for picking cherries, and for watching squirrels and owls hopping about. Side sketches include tapping trees for maple sap, boiling the syrup, and finally, enjoying it with pancakes.

Equally intriguing are several prints which show a 5-year-old boy in a bright red raincoat, hat, and boots splashing through a large, glistening puddle; exploring the colorful reflections in it of himself, a picket fence, his home; making friends with a worm, and, finally, with the frog whom he had dislodged from his puddle-home.

Small black-and-white drawings of a silhouetted portrait of an oaktree joined to its inverted, semi-circular cast-shadow, and two women scurrying through a downpour of rain under a huge sombrero are the most interesting of Mrs. Darwin's drawings.

This display will continue through April 12.

Composer Maganini Dies At 77

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — Quinto Maganini, a composer, conductor and educator who won a Pulitzer Prize for music in 1927, died Sunday at Greenwich Hospital after a brief illness. He was 77.

Born in Fairfield (Solano County) Maganini lived in Greenwich for 40 years. His family had moved from Genoa, Italy, to California during the 1850 gold rush.

At the age of 19, while playing flute and piccolo with the John Philip Souza band in San Francisco, he was discovered by Walter Damrosch who took him to New York to join the New York Symphony.

He then studied with Madia Boulanger in Paris and Fontainebleau. He subseqquently became president of the American Schools at Fontainebleau, a post he held until his death.

"The Argonauts," his opera about the California gold rush, won the Pulitzer Prize in 1927.

As a conductor he made guest appearances with symphony orchestras in Paris, New York and San Francisco and was conductor of the Norwalk Symphony for 25 years.

He is survived by his widow, a daughter, a brother and two grandchildren.

Apprentice Ballet Spring Concert Set

The 24-member apprentice group of the Marin Civic Ballet School will give its annual spring concert in two performances, one at 7:30 p.m. March 23 and the other, at 2 p.m. March 24.

Three new works will be performed as well as excerpts from "Alice Through the Looking Glass."

Connie Ayers of Mill Valley, who formerly danced with the Kopachka Dancers in San Francisco, is preparing two suites of ethnic dances, which will include dances representative of Israel and Romania.

Ruth Syndon is choreographing a semi-classical work, "In the Spring, a Young Man's Fancy . . ." and Jan Herst of San Francisco, a teacher at Dominican College, is preparing a classical study set to Debussy's Petite Suite.

Carnival De Mexico Sets A Performance in Marin

Carnival de Mexico, with a company of 37 performers, will present the "Jarana," one of the most complicated of Mexican dances, in a program being presented at 8:15 p.m. March 26 at the Marin Veteran's Memorial Building.

The performance is part of the 1974-75 Marin Concert Association series.

Dancers, singers and a mariachi orchestra as well as rope spinners, a skating duo, acrobats, jugglers and one of Mexico's leading toreros, will be featured in the colorful production.

Membership in the association is limited to the seating capacity of the auditorium. Those who join now will receive a pass to the Carnival de Mexico performance, according to an association spokesman.

Those interested in joining may contact President Ben Farlatti of Tiburon, Ann Sylie of Mill Valley, Esther Dearth of Greenbrae, Jo Mulaskey of Fairfax or Billie Garl of Novato.

Film Planned On Discouraging Alaskan Influx

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — When a state is considering spending $150,000 to produce a film, it usually is with the hope of drawing more people to the state. Alaska seems about ready to do the opposite.

The Alaska House has approved a bill to produce a documentary to discourage job seekers from coming to Alaska with hopes of getting jobs on the trans-Alaska pipeline project. The bill, approved 27 to 7, now goes to the Senate.

The chief sponsor of the bill, Anchorage Democrat Russ Meekins, says he thinks people outside Alaska have been misled into believing that lucrative jobs will be available on the pipeline project set to begin this spring.

Girl Repulses An Attacker

A 15-year-old Novato girl repulsed a would-be rapist in San Anselmo Friday after he attacked her in his car, police reported yesterday.

Police said the man picked up the girl as she was hitchiking in San Rafael and drove her to Tamalpais Avenue in San Anselmo. The girl was able to kick open a door and flee after he grabbed her by the throat and tried to pull off her clothes.

Police described the man as having short blond hair, blue eyes and a husky build.

Seniors Can Apply For Scholarship

Graduating high school seniors from throughout Marin County are eligible to apply for the 17th annual Archie Culpepper Scholarship Award sponsored by the Marin County Board of Realtors.

Bruce Wrisley, president of the Marin Board of Realtors, announced that applications were mailed to high schools and are also available at the realty board's headquarters at 255 West End Avenue in San Rafael. Deadline for submitting applications is April 5.

The $500 scholarship perpetuates the memory of Archie Culpepper, a long-time member of the Marin County Board of Realtors and a past president of the board. The award was established by the board in 1957, under the administration of the late Neil Brodsgar.

Lyle Newberry of Home & Land Co. of San Rafael is chairman of the scholarship subcommittee of the Board of Realtors' public relations committee.

Bush Sees Hope In Fall Voting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Things have a way of changing, says Republican National Chairman George Bush, and that is why he is not as pessimistic as many colleagues are about GOP chances in the fall congressional races.

So far this year, Democrats have won three Republican seats in special elections, with two of the winners basing their campaigns against President Nixon and the Watergate scandals.

"These things have a way of changing," Bush said, advising "Don't judge the fall elections by the facts as you see them today."

Irish Coffee Art Auction Is Saturday

Fourteen Marin County artists have received awards for paintings among those to be auctioned off Saturday at the Terra Linda Art Association's 11th annual Irish Coffee Art Auction.

The Irish-flavored affair will be held from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. in the Marin Veterans Memorial Building in San Rafael, according to Jon Caver, president of the art association.

The paintings that will be auctioned are on display in the association gallery, 4172 Redwood Highway daily from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. through Friday.

The award winners included Marion Thorne, P.A. Wolters, Mary Ellen Mahrli, Maggie Leitner, Barbara Williams and Carol Zogg, all of San Rafael; Victor De Beck, Sandy Gravitch and Jane Santucci, all of San Anselmo; Alla Allsman and Ray Stone Taub of Tiburon; Pat Smallman of Kentfield, Peg Benedict of Mill Valley and Mary Bonner of Novato.

Judges were Gill Wheat of Mill Valley and Jim Short of Belvedere, both art instructors.

85 Pct. Hike In Apartment Rents Reported

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Apartment rents rose 85 per cent in San Francisco during the last 10 years, more than any other major U.S. city.

The figures were released over the weekend by the Department of City Planning. The report said the increase almost tripled the overall cost of living increases for the same period.

The study said one third of the city's apartment dwellers pay 35 per cent of their income for rent.

The steep rise was attributed to inflation, higher taxes and operating costs and increased demand for housing.

Turkey Will Again Grow Opium Poppy

ANKARA (UPI) — The government of Premier Bulent Ecevit has sent official word to the United States that Turkey will resume cultivation of the opium poppy, government sources said today.

They said Turkey's Washington ambassador, Melih Esenbel, left for the United States with the message yesterday after several days of consultations in Ankara.

Laws Alone Won't Purify Elections

President Nixon has added his voice to those calling for campaign reform through limiting candidates' spending and shortening the campaign period.

The reforms for which the president called Friday resemble quite closely those embodied in the Common Cause-backed Proposition 9 on the California ballot for the June 4 primary. Of course, if enacted into California law they would apply to candidates in this state only. The president urged the limitations for all those running for positions in the federal government.

There are special reasons why Richard Nixon is unusually qualified to recognize the need for limiting campaign expenditures. If such limits as he suggests had been in effect in 1972, there would have been no provision for a Committee To Re-elect the President to stage its own huge fund-raising campaign apart from that conducted by the Republican Party. And with such "war chests" eliminated, there might have been no Watergate.

THERE MIGHT not, but . . .

The surreptitious money-passing brought to light by the Watergate investigation was all outside the law that then existed.

The campaign "dirty tricks" disclosed in the investigation were illegal enough that the Republican Party paid damages to the Democratic Party in an out-of-court settlement of a suit brought because of them.

Other offenses in the '72 campaign — surreptitious tape-recording, "bugging" of telephones and offices, burglary, etc. — would not be covered by the proposed campaign reform law, for a simple reason: There already are laws against them. But they occurred anyhow.

CAMPAIGN REFORMS are needed. Laws limiting campaign expenditures and requiring disclosure of contributors will help. But political organizations and individuals, intent on winning elections, will find ways to skirt the laws — as they have found ways to skirt the existing ones.

It is easy for a candidate and his campaign workers to convince themselves that his election quest is a holy crusade, that victory for his opponent would be a disaster. And, once in that frame of mind, "the end justifies the means."

When it comes right down to it, purity of the election process will be what the people force it to be. Laws can help. But if we shrug off the need to do our own investigating, our own policing, by saying "oh, well, there's a law to cover that" — well, we'll just be fooling ourselves, and to our eventual sorrow.

Gardening From Scratch

Cooks who disdain pre-packaged ingredients, frozen dinners, and the various mixes are now known as scratch cooks. In Marin, we have an analagous situation among our tillers of the soil, which we will call scratch gardening. A good scratch gardener grows his own plants from seed. And a very good one saves his own seeds from the previous season.

By composting and knowing their insects and how to get rid of them with ordinary household compounds, these green thumbers save money and, equally important, have a feeling of accomplishment more deep than other gardeners. Most of us will never achieve the status of true scratch gardeners. But we admire those who are that able.

He Can't Be President, But McCarthy's On Rise

By EARL G. WATERS

Gov. Ronald Reagan continues to show more and more interest in things more distant than the business of running the state. But he is only the latest of the state's governors to show signs of being striken by Potomac fever. Pat Brown, Goodie Knight and Earl Warren also had the bug.

It is almost inescapable that whoever the biggest state elects as its governor will become an instant candidate for president. Still, the business of the state gets something less than the full attention it deserves from its governor because of it.

So it is encouraging to see a young legislator on the rise who, if he ever becomes a gubernatorial candidate, will not be thinking about becoming president.

THAT PERSON is Leo McCarthy, an assemblyman from San Francisco, who is engaged in a battle for the speakership with Ways and Means chairman Willie Brown, also of San Francisco.

McCarthy has lived in San Francisco since the age of three. He received his education there. He served on the board of supervisors there. An attorney, he has had an interest in and been active in politics all of his adult life. He first came to Sacramento as an aide to the late Sen. Eugene McAteer, then got himself elected to the Assembly in 1968.

The reason McCarthy would not aspire to the White House is plain. He can't become president. He was born in New Zealand and, unfortunately for him, the Constitution requires the president to be a natural-born citizen.

NEVERTHELESS, McCarthy is a comer in state politics. Not as flamboyant as his rival for the speaker's post, he is every bit as smart and just as industrious. And he has a quiet manner which has enabled him to be agreeably persuasive and most effective. His ability has earned him the respect of legislative observers and the strong support of many of his colleagues.

This ability to act calmly in the center of heated controversy won him the praise of Gov. Ronald Reagan and his staff in the bitter negotiations which transpired between legislature and governor over the welfare issue in 1971. McCarthy was given full credit by those on the inside for keeping the conferences going.

He has also been effective in other areas where the fury of battle threatened to impede all chances of progress. In fact, in the environmental conflicts of the 1971 session, McCarthy emerged with the only successful legislation of consequence. His bills regulating wildcat subdivisions became law. Ironically, the environmentalists played little part in their passage.

WHILE HE RELISHES his role as a mediator he has demonstrated a crusader's courage and firmness in his efforts to strengthen the laws governing nursing care homes. It was the McCarthy interim committee work which exposed the unwholesome conditions in many of the licensed homes and brought about a reform.

Unlike his opponent he has maintained an aloofness from the Moretti brand of politics. And, although he has not been on the Moretti team or bandwagon, he was still favored with a committee chairmanship by the speaker.

WORTH SAYING AGAIN

If a man talks of his misfortunes there is something in them that is not disagreeable to him; for where there is nothing but pure misery there never is any recourse to the mention of it. — Samuel Johnson.

Opinion On Why Sewer Bonds Lost

In view of the excellent work done by the Stinson Beach County Water District board in presenting to its electorate the bonding for a town sewer — and its defeat — a retrospective analysis is in order.

Two years ago when the Stinson Beach voters removed the water district personnel who had proposed an unbelievable multi-million dollar sewer project for the village, the paramount issue was that of the cost of the sewer. This cost was so outlandish that any other aspect of the sewer was pretty much ignored.

And so, two years later, Stinson Beach was offered by its new water district board a sewage disposal plan that was remarkably moderate in cost. Financially everyone could afford the bonding, and the research, time and energy expended by this board to produce it should not go without commendation . . .

However, we had a lot of time to think — many weeks. And we began at the beginning. Why was this tiny community being considered for a sewer? Larger communities in California are unmolested as they continue to install septic tanks and leaching fields. Evidently it was because Bolinas, our close neighbor, was enjoined by the state to cease and desist from poluting the Bolinas Lagoon with its existing sewer (!). The cost to Bolinas was heavy and to ease its financial burden the county pulled Stinson Beach into a joint-service agency program. That communal program was short-lived but the damage was done. . .

Individual septic tank or leaching problems here have always been handled by individual property owners; such separate problems do not warrant a massive change in the entire area. For example, when some of our elderly citizens are frightened by speeding cars on the hills we do not decide to have curbs and sidewalks installed throughout the town — we ask the sheriff to control the speeders.

. . . If a sewer were introduced into this hamlet we all know that the scene would be changed in a few years — destroyed, as Sausalito was destroyed . . .

And that is why the sewer bonds were rejected.

What's President To Do About Streaking At The Watergate?

WASHINGTON — "Mr. President, you know those seven people who were arrested for streaking through the Watergate fountain last week?"

"I read about it in the newspaper, John."

"It turns out several of them worked for the White House."

"Why didn't I know about this sooner?"

"Well, Mr. President, we thought we could keep it from you. It is our belief that it would be unwise to have the President of the United States involved with streaking and all its implications."

"I AM VERY disturbed that anyone on my staff would run nude through the Watergate fountain. Why did they do it, John?"

"They thought it would help you in the polls. The problem now, Mr. President, is that the people arrested say if we don't help them they're going to reveal that we've been streaking in the White House for the last six months. If that gets out, we're going to be in a lot of trouble."

"That's blackmail, John. What are our options?"

"We could pay the money to them to hush them up."

"How much would it cost, John?"

"Taking into consideration their lawyers' fees and what it would cost to care for their families, I would say $1 million."

"WE COULD RAISE that easily, John. What are our other options?"

"We could say we streaked in the White House for national security reasons. We had to hire streakers because the FBI refused to streak for us, and the CIA under their mandate could streak only in a foreign country. Our streakers were hired to find out what other streakers were up to. As president it was your constitutional duty to see that the people in this country did not discard all their clothes and run around in their birthday suits."

"I see. Do we have any other options?"

"We could refuse to pay the money to the defendants and let them reveal the streaking that went on here. We could say that a few members of your staff did run nude through the halls, but no one had ever streaked through the Oval Office. As soon as you heard about it you ordered an investigation of the streaking and insisted that those who did it had to resign!"

"WHAT IF IT TURNS out that my closest aides were involved in the streaking, John?"

"There's that possibility, Mr. President. I saw two of the men you hold in the highest esteem run naked through Rose Mary Woods' office the other night."

"Have you ever streaked, John?"

"Yes sir, I have, Mr. President. One afternoon while I was working on some legislation for you, I suddenly took off all my clothes and went running on the White House lawn. The Secret Service caught me just as I was going over the fence."

"YOU HAD BETTER go to Camp David, John, and write a full report for me."

"I'll do that, Mr. President. Now to get back to the people who were caught streaking at the Watergate. We do have another option. We could offer them executive clemency."

"How could we justify that, John?"

"We could say they were nudists on their way to sunbathe on the Potomac, and they cut through the Watergate complex to save time."

"Sure we could, John. But if I start giving executive clemency for streaking I could lose my mandate."

"THEN WHAT should we do, Mr. President?"

"I could try to hush the whole thing up. Or I could tough it out. But I have a third option, John. Pat and I could streak down Pennsylvania Avenue tomorrow at high noon — BUT THAT, JOHN, WOULD BE WRONG."

CAPITOL QUIPS

By PHIL DESSAUER

A national boycott of income taxes on April 15 won't work, mainly because the IRS is too stuffy to enter into the spirit of the thing.

In California the Republicans finally won a congressional election, giving some assurance that it's still GOP and not RIP.

The streaking fad on college campuses is almost as sure a sign of spring as the annual stirring of the Wallace for President movement.

Congress will move speedily on the fate of President Nixon just as soon as any two lawyers agree on what is an impeachable offense.

Seniority System Works In Case Of Senator Fulbright

WASHINGTON — Few states in the Union have the political clout of Arkansas. It has a population under two million, yet three key committee chairmanships are held by Arkansas men whose influence extends far beyond the borders not only of their state but of the nation.

Rep. Wilbur Mills, as chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, is one of the three or four most powerful men in Washington. He rules his committee with his unflagging determination and his considerable ability. It is hardly an exaggeration to say that he also rules the federal tax structure.

"Don't make a move without seeing Wilbur" is the cautionary word running through the Treasury, the banking community and the Congress.

THE SENIOR SENATOR from Arkansas, John McClellan, is chairman of the appropriations committee which exercises authority over the entire federal government. His zeal as an investigator, his relentless digging into crime, corruption and waste have made him the scourge of the unrighteous. His service in the Senate began in 1942.

J. William Fulbright, the junior senator, became chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee 15 years ago. One of the sternest critics of the Vietnam war and its offshoots in Cambodia and Laos, and often at odds with the State Department over the politics of diplomatic appointments, he has achieved a good working relationship with Sec. of State Henry Kissinger.

It is a case of two specialists, each with a broad grounding in the intricacies of foreign policy, yet each with his own contribution to make to the conduct of foreign affairs in a time of troubles.

This year Senator Fulbright is up for re-election to a sixth term. Back in Arkansas a challenger is testing the water to see how far the swing toward isolationism might carry him. Those striped-pants diplomats are fine, but what have you done for Arkansas?

POTENTIAL CHALLENGER is Gov. Dale Bumpers. Arkansas is one of the states which has never moved out of the two-year cycle that keeps a governor running for re-election almost from the first day he takes office. And the salary of $10,000 a year is the lowest in the country.

Completing his second two-year term, Bumpers, a shrewd campaigner with a wide following, could beyond doubt be re-elected governor. Although he has independent means, the contrast in salary, $10,000 as against $42,500 for the Senate, not to mention perquisites, cannot be ignored.

As a candidate for the Senate, Bumpers would get a big lift in money and skilled advice from important interests eager to see Fulbright retired. Foremost are the ardent Zionists who feel the senator has failed to give Israel sufficient support in his key position as foreign relations chairman.

Fulbright's skepticism about military air programs around the world has hardly been a secret. He has been more detached than many of his colleagues about the large sums voted for Israel.

At the same time, however, he proposed an open alliance between Israel and the United States, providing American military support should Israel be attacked.

Presumably if such an alliance had been in force when the Arabs launched the Yom Kippur war in October, the United States would have been at Israel's side. At one point during his Middle East shuttle diplomacy, Kissinger hinted that he might favor an alliance of the type Fullbright proposed.

THE SENIORITY SYSTEM can put indifferent and incompetent men on the escalator until they arrive in positions of power they are unfitted to hold. On the other hand, it can bring knowledge and expertise into a post such as the chairmanship of foreign relations.

In the opinion of this observer, Fulbright is in the latter category. For all the sniping of his critics in and out of government, he is equipped with his friendship with Kissinger to advance a negotiated peace.

This may be one of those revolutionary years when anyone out of the old order, whether Democrat or Republican, is due for the ax. But government during the next two critical years would be the poorer for the loss of men like Fulbright.

JOSEPH C. HARSCH

Economic Difficulties Inhibit Foreign Policies In Europe

LONDON — It is customary when writing about foreign affairs these days to complain of the friction in relations of the western industrial democracies, as though by some firm act of self-discipline they could put it all to rights again.

Here in Britain is an example of why it is not so easy as all that.

THE BRITISH are loyal to the concepts of the Atlantic community. They have within the month risked a severe strain on their relations with the French (in Washington) to protect their relations with the Americans. They certainly value the NATO alliance as much as do the Germans, perhaps more — certainly very much more than do the French.

Yet they must now concetrate on a domestic problem so grave and difficult of solution that is absorbs all their attention. Can a runaway inflation be checked and brought under control so that Britain's economy can once more be a stable and suficient base for any foreign policy?

No country can have anything but a passive and even submissive foreign policy if its economic base is unsound.

One British Foreign Office official notes ruefully that time and time again they have trimmed their overseas commitments down to balance what they thought was their capacility, only to find that the economic base had again grown smaller in the meanwhile. As far back as 1956, then Prime Minister Anthony Eden would complain that no one talked about anything in cabinet meetings but economics.

PERHAPS THE MOST important, if least noted, feature of the world today is that there are only three powers with world-wide interest. Europeans sometimes complain that Washington is more interested in talking to Russians and Chinese than to Europeans. But isn't it natural that this should be the case?

Washington is deeply involved in Europe, the Middle East, Southeast Asia, and the balance of power in northern Asia. So, too, is Russia. The fact that American and Russian interests are usually competitive and often in conflict does not remove the other fact that Moscow is interested in the same subjects which interest Washington.

When Secretary of State Kissinger sits down with Mr. Brezhnev, or with anyone else from Moscow, they have a lot to talk about. It is the counterpart in world affairs of an often noted sociological fact — that millionaires have more to discuss with other millionaires than with poor folk. They do have a lot in common.

The Chinese are not so rich as Russians or Americans, and their interests in the Middle East and Africa are marginal rather than major. Yet the Chinese have wide-ranging interests, too, which make for a lot of mutually interesting conversation whenever Kissinger runs over to Peking for another round of chats. They are building a railroad in Africa. What happens in the Middle East concerns them because it affects the Moscow-Washington relationship, which in turn, bears on the amount of pressure Moscow is free to deploy against China.

But western Europeans no longer are vividly concerned with events far afield, unless those events touch their own economic well-being, as did the latest Middle East war and its resultant oil embargo and multiplication of oil prices.

That rise in the price of oil has been an infuriating irritation to a lot of Americans, but it has threatened to undermine the economic viability of much of Western Europe. Britain, for example, was running a dangerous trade imbalance before the sudden rise in the price of oil. That rise doubled the imbalance to the point where Britina's ability to borrow enough to keep its economy afloat is the top question in Harold Wilson's new cabinet.

Wilson talks cheerfully about holding office for a year before seeking a new mandate. That is just whistling in the dark unless he can borrow somewhere around at least $5 billion.

A new and productive transatlantic dialogue will begin not because someone says this is to be a new year of Europe, but when and if the Europeans have their economies back on a sound basis and their relations among themselves worked out so that they can be able once more to think in terms of the whole world.

Laws Alone Won't Purify Elections

President Nixon has added his voice to those calling for campaign reform through limiting candidates' spending and shortening the campaign period.

The reforms for which the president called Friday resemble quite closely those embodied in the Common Cause-backed Proposition 9 on the California ballot for the June 4 primary. Of course, if enacted into California law they would apply to candidates in this state only. The president urged the limitations for all those running for positions in the federal government.

There are special reasons why Richard Nixon is unusually qualified to recognize the need for limiting campaign expenditures. If such limits as he suggests had been in effect in 1972, there would have been no provision for a Committee To Re-elect the President to stage its own huge fund-raising campaign apart from that conducted by the Republican Party. And with such "war chests" eliminated, there might have been no Watergate.

THERE MIGHT not, but . . . The surreptitious money-passing brought to light by the Watergate investigation was all outside the law that then existed.

The campaign "dirty tricks" disclosed in the investigation were illegal enough that the Republican Party paid damages to the Democratic Party in an out-of-court settlement of a suit brought because of them.

Other offenses in the '72 campaign — surreptitious tape-recording, "bugging" of telephones and offices, burglary, etc. — would not be covered by the proposed campaign reform law, for a simple reason: There already are laws against them. But they occurred anyhow.

CAMPAIGN REFORMS are needed. Laws limiting campaign expenditures and requiring disclosure of contributors will help. But political organizations and individuals, intent on winning elections, will find ways to skirt the laws — as they have found ways to skirt the existing ones.

It is easy for a candidate and his campaign workers to convince themselves that his election quest is a holy crusade, that victory for his opponent would be a disaster. And, once in that frame of mind, "the end justifies the means."

When it comes right down to it, purity of the election process will be what the people force it to be. Laws can help. But if we shrug off the need to do our own investigating, our own policing, by saying "oh, well, there's a law to cover that" — well, we'll just be fooling ourselves, and to our eventual sorrow.

Gardening From Scratch

Cooks who disdain pre-packaged ingredients, frozen dinners, and the various mixes are now known as scratch cooks. In Marin, we have an analagous situation among our tillers of the soil, which we will call scratch gardening. A good scratch gardener grows his own plants from seed. And a very good one saves his own seeds from the previous season.

By composting and knowing their insects and how to get rid of them with ordinary household compounds, these green thumbers save money and, equally important, have a feeling of accomplishment more deep than other gardeners. Most of us will never achieve the status of true scratch gardeners. But we admire those who are that able.

He Can't Be President, But McCarthy's On Rise

By EARL G. WATERS

Gov. Ronald Reagan continues to show more and more interest in things more distant than the business of running the state. But he is only the latest of the state's governors to show signs of being striken by Potomac fever. Pat Brown, Goodie Knight and Earl Warren also had the bug.

It is almost inescapable that whoever the biggest state elects as its governor will become an instant candidate for president. Still, the business of the state gets something less than the full attention it deserves from its governor because of it.

So it is encouraging to see a young legislator on the rise who, if he ever becomes a gubernatorial candidate, will not be thinking about becoming president.

THAT PERSON is Leo McCarthy, an assemblyman from San Francisco, who is engaged in a battle for the speakership with Ways and Means chairman Willie Brown, also of San Francisco.

McCarthy has lived in San Francisco since the age of three. He received his education there. He served on the board of supervisors there. An attorney, he has had an interest in and been active in politics all of his adult life. He first came to Sacramento as an aide to the late Sen. Eugene McAteer, then got himself elected to the Assembly in 1968.

The reason McCarthy would not aspire to the White House is plain. He can't become president. He was born in New Zealand and, unfortunately for him, the Constitution requires the president to be a natural-born citizen.

NEVERTHELESS, McCarthy is a comer in state politics. Not as flamboyant as his rival for the speaker's post, he is every bit as smart and just as industrious. And he has a quiet manner which has enabled him to be agreeably persuasive and most effective. His ability has earned him the respect of legislative observers and the strong support of many of his colleagues.

This ability to act calmly in the center of heated controversy won him the praise of Gov. Ronald Reagan and his staff in the bitter negotiations which transpired between legislature and governor over the welfare issue in 1971. McCarthy was given full credit by those on the inside for keeping the conferences going.

He has also been effective in other areas where the fury of battle threatened to impede all chances of progress. In fact, in the environmental conflicts of the 1971 session, McCarthy emerged with the only successful legislation of consequence. His bills regulating wildcat subdivisions became law. Ironically, the environmentalists played little part in their passage.

WHILE HE RELISHES his role as a mediator he has demonstrated a crusader's courage and firmness in his efforts to strengthen the laws governing nursing care homes. It was the McCarthy interim committee work which exposed the unwholesome conditions in many of the licensed homes and brought about a reform.

Unlike his opponent he has maintained an aloofness from the Moretti brand of politics. And, although he has not been on the Moretti team or bandwagon, he was still favored with a committee chairmanship by the speaker.

Opinion On Why Sewer Bonds Lost

In view of the excellent work done by the Stinson Beach County Water District board in presenting to its electorate the bonding for a town sewer — and its defeat — a retrospective analysis is in order.

Two years ago when the Stinson Beach voters removed the water district personnel who had proposed an unbelievable multi-million dollar sewer project for the village, the paramount issue was that of the cost of the sewer. This cost was so outlandish that any other aspect of the sewer was pretty much ignored.

And so, two years later, Stinson Beach was offered by its new water district board a sewage disposal plan that was remarkably moderate in cost. Financially everyone could afford the bonding, and the research, time and energy expended by this board to produce it should not go without commendation . . .

However, we had a lot of time to think — many weeks. And we began at the beginning. Why was this tiny community being considered for a sewer? Larger communities in California are unmolested as they continue to install septic tanks and leaching fields. Evidently it was because Bolinas, our close neighbor, was enjoined by the state to cease and desist from poluting the Bolinas Lagoon with its existing sewer (!). The cost to Bolinas was heavy and to ease its financial burden the county pulled Stinson Beach into a joint-service agency program. That communal program was short-lived but the damage was done. . .

Individual septic tank or leaching problems here have always been handled by individual property owners; such separate problems do not warrant a massive change in the entire area. For example, when some of our elderly citizens are frightened by speeding cars on the hills we do not decide to have curbs and sidewalks installed throughout the town — we ask the sheriff to control the speeders.

. . . If a sewer were introduced into this hamlet we all know that the scene would be changed in a few years — destroyed, as Sausalito was destroyed . . .

And that is why the sewer bonds were rejcted.

What's President To Do About Streaking At The Watergate?

WASHINGTON — "Mr. President, you know those seven people who were arrested for streaking through the Watergate fountain last week?"

"I read about it in the newspaper, John."

"It turns out several of them worked for the White House."

"Why didn't I know about this sooner?"

"Well, Mr. President, we thought we could keep it from you. It is our belief that it would be unwise to have the President of the United States involved with streaking and all its implications."

"I AM VERY disturbed that anyone on my staff would run nude through the Watergate fountain. Why did they do it, John?"

"They thought it would help you in the polls. The problem now, Mr. President, is that the people arrested say if we don't help them they're going to reveal that we've been streaking in the White House for the last six months. If that gets out, we're going to be in a lot of trouble."

"That's blackmail, John. What are our options?"

"We could pay the money to them to hush them up."

"How much would it cost, John?"

"Taking into consideration their lawyers' fees and what it would cost to care for their families, I would say $1 million."

"WE COULD RAISE that easily, John. What are our other options?"

"We could say we streaked in the White House for national security reasons. We had to hire streakers because the FBI refused to streak for us, and the CIA under their mandate could streak only in a foreign country. Our streakers were hired to find out what other streakers were up to. As president it was your constitutional duty to see that the people in this country did not discard all their clothes and run around in their birthday suits."

"I see. Do we have any other options?"

"We could refuse to pay the money to the defendants and let them reveal the streaking that went on here. We could say that a few members of your staff did run nude through the halls, but no one had ever streaked through the Oval Office. As soon as you heard about it you ordered an investigation of the streaking and insisted that those who did it had to resign!"

"WHAT IF IT TURNS out that my closest aides were involved in the streaking, John?"

"There's that possibility, Mr. President. I saw two of the men you hold in the highest esteem run naked through Rose Mary Woods' office the other night."

"Have you ever streaked, John?"

"Yes sir, I have, Mr. President. One afternoon while I was working on some legislation for you, I suddenly took off all my clothes and went running on the White House lawn. The Secret Service caught me just as I was going over the fence."

"YOU HAD BETTER go to Camp David, John, and write a full report for me."

"I'll do that, Mr. President. Now to get back to the people who were caught streaking at the Watergate. We do have another option. We could offer them executive clemency."

"How could we justify that, John?"

"We could say they were nudists on their way to sunbathe on the Potomac, and they cut through the Watergate complex to save time."

"Sure we could, John. But if I start giving executive clemency for streaking I could lose my mandate."

"THEN WHAT should we do, Mr. President?"

"I could try to hush the whole thing up. Or I could tough it out. But I have a third option, John. Pat and I could streak down Pennsylvania Avenue tomorrow at high noon — BUT THAT, JOHN, WOULD BE WRONG."

CAPITOL QUIPS

By PHIL DESSAUER

A national boycott of income taxes on April 15 won't work, mainly because the IRS is too stuffy to enter into the spirit of the thing.

In California the Republicans finally won a congressional election, giving some assurance that it's still GOP and not RIP.

The streaking fad on college campuses is almost as sure a sign of spring as the annual stirring of the Wallace for President movement.

Congress will move speedily on the fate of President Nixon just as soon as any two lawyers agree on what is an impeachable offense.

Seniority System Works In Case Of Senator Fulbright

WASHINGTON — Few states in the Union have the political clout of Arkansas. It has a population under two million, yet three key committee chairmanships are held by Arkansas men whose influence extends far beyond the borders not only of their state but of the nation.

Rep. Wilbur Mills, as chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, is one of the three or four most powerful men in Washington. He rules his committee with his unflagging determination and his considerable ability. It is hardly an exaggeration to say that he also rules the federal tax structure.

"Don't make a move without seeing Wilbur" is the cautionary word running through the Treasury, the banking community and the Congress.

THE SENIOR SENATOR from Arkansas, John McClellan, is chairman of the appropriations committee which exercises authority over the entire federal government. His zeal as an investigator, his relentless digging into crime, corruption and waste have made him the scourge of the unrighteous. His service in the Senate began in 1942.

J. William Fulbright, the junior senator, became chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee 15 years ago. One of the sternest critics of the Vietnam war and its offshoots in Cambodia and Laos, and often at odds with the State Department over the politics of diplomatic appointments, he has achieved a good working relationship with Sec. of State Henry Kissinger.

It is a case of two specialists, each with a broad grounding in the intricacies of foreign policy, yet each with his own contribution to make to the conduct of foreign affairs in a time of troubles.

This year Senator Fulbright is up for re-election to a sixth term. Back in Arkansas a challenger is testing the water to see how far the swing toward isolationism might carry him. Those striped-pants diplomats are fine, but what have you done for Arkansas?

POTENTIAL CHALLENGER is Gov. Dale Bumpers. Arkansas is one of the states which has never moved out of the two-year cycle that keeps a governor running for re-election almost from the first day he takes office. And the salary of $10,000 a year is the lowest in the country.

Completing his second two-year term, Bumpers, a shrewd campaigner with a wide following, could beyond doubt be re-elected governor. Although he has independent means, the contrast in salary, $10,000 as against $42,500 for the Senate, not to mention perquisites, cannot be ignored.

As a candidate for the Senate, Bumpers would get a big lift in money and skilled advice from important interests eager to see Fulbright retired. Foremost are the ardent Zionists who feel the senator has failed to give Israel sufficient support in his key position as foreign relations chairman.

Fulbright's skepticism about military air programs around the world has hardly been a secret. He has been more detached than many of his colleagues about the large sums voted for Israel.

At the same time, however, he proposed an open alliance between Israel and the United States, providing American military support should Israel be attacked.

Presumably if such an alliance had been in force when the Arabs launched the Yom Kippur war in October, the United States would have been at Israel's side. At one point during his Middle East shuttle diplomacy, Kissinger hinted that he might favor an alliance of the type Fullbright proposed.

THE SENIORITY SYSTEM can put indifferent and incompetent men on the escalator until they arrive in positions of power they are unfitted to hold. On the other hand, it can bring knowledge and expertise into a post such as the chairmanship of foreign relations.

In the opinion of this observer, Fulbright is in the latter category. For all the sniping of his critics in and out of government, he is equipped with his friendship with Kissinger to advance a negotiated peace.

This may be one of those revolutionary years when anyone out of the old order, whether Democrat or Republican, is due for the ax. But government during the next two critical years would be the poorer for the loss of men like Fulbright.

Economic Difficulties Inhibit Foreign Policies In Europe

LONDON — It is customary when writing about foreign affairs these days to complain of the friction in relations of the western industrial democracies, as though by some firm act of self-discipline they could put it all to rights again.

Here in Britain is an example of why it is not so easy as all that.

THE BRITISH are loyal to the concepts of the Atlantic community. They have within the month risked a severe strain on their relations with the French (in Washington) to protect their relations with the Americans. They certainly value the NATO alliance as much as do the Germans, perhaps more — certainly very much more than do the French.

Yet they must now concetrate on a domestic problem so grave and difficult of solution that is absorbs all their attention. Can a runaway inflation be checked and brought under control so that Britain's economy can once more be a stable and suficient base for any foreign policy?

No country can have anything but a passive and even submissive foreign policy if its economic base is unsound.

One British Foreign Office official notes ruefully that time and time again they have trimmed their overseas commitments down to balance what they thought was their capacility, only to find that the economic base had again grown smaller in the meanwhile. As far back as 1956, then Prime Minister Anthony Eden would complain that no one talked about anything in cabinet meetings but economics.

PERHAPS THE MOST important, if least noted, feature of the world today is that there are only three powers with world-wide interest. Europeans sometimes complain that Washington is more interested in talking to Russians and Chinese than to Europeans. But isn't it natural that this should be the case?

Washington is deeply involved in Europe, the Middle East, Southeast Asia, and the balance of power in northern Asia. So, too, is Russia. The fact that American and Russian interests are usually competitive and often in conflict does not remove the other fact that Moscow is interested in the same subjects which interest Washington.

When Secretary of State Kissinger sits down with Mr. Brezhnev, or with anyone else from Moscow, they have a lot to talk about. It is the counterpart in world affairs of an often noted sociological fact — that millionaires have more to discuss with other millionaires than with poor folk. They do have a lot in common.

The Chinese are not so rich as Russians or Americans, and their interests in the Middle East and Africa are marginal rather than major. Yet the Chinese have wide-ranging interests, too, which make for a lot of mutually interesting conversation whenever Kissinger runs over to Peking for another round of chats. They are building a railroad in Africa. What happens in the Middle East concerns them because it affects the Moscow-Washington relationship, which in turn, bears on the amount of pressure Moscow is free to deploy against China.

But western Europeans no longer are vividly concerned with events far afield, unless those events touch their own economic well-being, as did the latest Middle East war and its resultant oil embargo and multiplication of oil prices.

That rise in the price of oil has been an infuriating irritation to a lot of Americans, but it has threatened to undermine the economic viability of much of Western Europe. Britain, for example, was running a dangerous trade imbalance before the sudden rise in the price of oil. That rise doubled the imbalance to the point where Britina's ability to borrow enough to keep its economy afloat is the top question in Harold Wilson's new cabinet.

Wilson talks cheerfully about holding office for a year before seeking a new mandate. That is just whistling in the dark unless he can borrow somewhere around at least $5 billion.

A new and productive transatlantic dialogue will begin not because someone says this is to be a new year of Europe, but when and if the Europeans have their economies back on a sound basis and their relations among themselves worked out so that they can be able once more to think in terms of the whole world.

Not Enough Voter Turnout? Then Create Ballot Shortage

During the Novato municipal election last Tuesday, precinct workers jokingly reported there were more people in gasoline lines than there were voting.

The light turnout alarmed county clerks throughout the state and they hired the consulting firm of Tim and Tom to come up with a plan to revitalize voting.

THE PLAN STARTED with the announcement by the clerks that it appeared there would be a shortage of ballots for the next election, because Canadian pulp makers were mad at the U.S.

Stories were leaked to the press that a ballot crisis was imminent and ballot rationing was possible, one to a voter.

The Independent Precinct Workers Association charged the county clerks had artificially produced the ballot shortage to cut their hours and reduce their pay checks.

Clerks throughout the state reported a run on absentee ballots, an obvious attempt by alert voters to beat the shortage at the polls.

Government officials, especially those up for re-election, assured voters there would be enough ballots for all, although there might be some delays and some long lines.

MOUNTAIN COUNTY Clerk Clyde Writer said he was going to drop two bond measures and a city council election from the ballot because he was going to get only 60 per cent of his ballot allotment.

When the first tests of the plan came at the polls, the results were beyond expectation. Lines two blocks long in the one-block town of Windy Corner, Tex., and police called out to quell rioting voters in Stony Rock, Ark.

"Here it is," he said at a press conference. "Voters with names ending in vowels will vote on even numbered days, and voters with names ending in consonants will vote on odd-numbered days. Voters whose names end in numbers vote with vowels."

Clerks, uncertain that the "name plan" would work, cut the voting hours to 7 a.m. to 9 a.m. and said voters could vote on only 50 per cent of the ballot at one time.

In a short time voting became more popular than gasoline and Tim and Tom became famous.

"The best way to create a demand is to create a shortage," Tom said.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

By PETER STUART

LONDON — In the glare of lights switching back on across Britain, many are asking whether the nation's dark and cold winter of power austerity was really necessary.

The five-day work week went back into effect at midnight Friday.

And the electricity-crippling industrial action by coal miners was settled — under the looser bargaining policy of the 48-hour old Labor government — in just one day of negotiaitons.

THE FINANCIAL COST of the one-year pay package, 103 million pounds, or about $237 million, more than doubles the top offer under the anti-inflation limits of the just-departed Conservative government, and falls just 10 million pounds (about $22 million) short of the miners' full claim.

But the economic and social cost of the 17-week overtime ban and strike dwarfs the cost of settlement:

— Britain settled with its miners for the cost of one week of lost production in manufacturing alone under government-ordered three-day working, estimates the Confederation of British Industry. The country suffered nine power-saving short work weeks each costing some 100 million pounds to 120 million pounds ($220 million to $264 million).

— The coal industry itself lost more money in nonproduction (120 million pounds) than it will pay the miners.

— The three-day week threw an estimated 1.6 million Britons out of work, swelling unemployment rolls to the highest levels since the depression (2.3 million, or about 10 per cent of the work force).

— The lingering dispute precipitated a "who governs Britain?" election which unseated Prime Minister Edward Heath and installed Harold Wilson. Mr. Wilson's winning campaign slogan: "Back to work with Labor."

THE NEW PAY RATES, moreover, only lift British miners to the lower wage ranges of their European colleagues, which soar as high as 77 pounds ($77) per week for the average West German miner. Pay raises range from $16 to $21 a week to a top of $103.

Besides the three-day work week, other power restrictions — darkened street lights and show windows, and voluntarily unheated rooms in homes — are likely to disappear soon.

Britons have been spared, however, the nationwide power blackouts of the miners' seven-week strike in 1972 — thanks to the other power-saving measures and the mildest winter in a generation. Power plants still have enough coal stockpiled to last to the end of March.

EVEN SO, a clear majority of Britons favored letting the miners breach the Heath government's inflationary guidelines as early in the dispute as mid-February, according to public-opinion pollsters.

The ultimate deadlock-breaker, say those involved, was the "free collective bargaining" approach of the new Labor government.

"What it does prove," says mine workers union leader Joseph Gormley, "is that when there is the spirit and willingness to reach a positive settlement, it could be achieved in one day rather than the long-drawn-out exercise in which we have been engaged."

Three Vehicles For Every Four Persons

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — There were about three vehicles registered for every four Californians at the end of 1973 — a total of 15.7 million cars, motorcycles, trucks and trailers — state figures showed yesterday.

The Department of Motor Vehicles said the total was 684,761 more vehicles than on the highways in 1972, or an increase of 4.54 per cent.

Los Angeles County had more than four times the number of registered vehicles of any other county — 4.9 million compared to second-place Orange County with 1.2 million. San Diego was third with almost 1.1 million.

The growth during 1973 surpassed the rate during the previous year by three-tenths of a per cent, or 72,261 vehicles.

The department said 1.6 million new vehicles were registered last year for highway use, 128,000 for off-road use and 408,777 out-of-state owners switched to California registration.

Total registrations broke down this way: 11.1 million cars, 2.1 million trucks, 1.6 million trailers and 624,695 motorcycles.

Samaritan Award Goes To Sacramento Boy, 16

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — State Controller Houston I. Flournoy yesterday expressed California's "pride and respect" in presenting a $2,079 good samaritan award to Michael H. Zangers, 16 of Sacramento.

The teen-ager was critically wounded last August while fighting off three youths who were beating and robbing two 12-year-old boys. The compensation award was made by the State Board of Control under the state's Good Samaritan Act.

In ceremonies at Luther Burbank High School, Flournoy said, "This monetary award barely covers the medical expenses resulting from Michael's injuries, but with this check goes my personal pride and respect, and I speak for all the people of California."

Not Enough Voter Turnout? Then Create Ballot Shortage

During the Novato municipal election last Tuesday, precinct workers jokingly reported there were more people in gasoline lines than there were voting.

The light turnout alarmed county clerks throughout the state and they hired the consulting firm of Tim and Tom to come up with a plan to revitalize voting.

THE PLAN STARTED with the announcement by the clerks that it appeared there would be a shortage of ballots for the next election, because Canadian pulp makers were mad at the U.S.

Stories were leaked to the press that a ballot crisis was imminent and ballot rationing was possible, one to a voter.

The Independent Precinct Workers Association charged the county clerks had artificially produced the ballot shortage to cut their hours and reduce their pay checks.

Clerks throughout the state reported a run on absentee ballots, an obvious attempt by alert voters to beat the shortage at the polls.

Government officials, especially those up for re-election, assured voters there would be enough ballots for all, although there might be some delays and some long lines.

MOUNTAIN COUNTY Clerk Clyde Writer said he was going to drop two bond measures and a city council election from the ballot because he was going to get only 60 per cent of his ballot allotment.

When the first tests of the plan came at the polls, the results were beyond expectation. Lines two blocks long in the one-block town of Windy Corner, Tex., and police called out to quell rioting voters in Stony Rock, Ark.

"Here it is," he said at a press conference. "Voters with names ending in vowels will vote on even numbered days, and voters with names ending in consonants will vote on odd-numbered days. Voters whose names end in numbers vote with vowels."

Clerks, uncertain that the "name plan" would work, cut the voting hours to 7 a.m. to 9 a.m. and said voters could vote on only 50 per cent of the ballot at one time.

In a short time voting became more popular than gasoline and Tim and Tom became famous.

"The best way to create a demand is to create a shortage," Tom said.

Memberships Are Limited In Planning Council

Marin County Estate Planning Council, an inter-professional group of persons who assist clients on their personal estates, has limited memberships open in each professional group.

That announcement came from Richard F. Barry, San Rafael attorney, who is president of the organization. The council includes accountants, attorneys, certified life underwriters, bank and trust officers and persons in securities and investment businesses who share the common aim of assisting clients in creating and preserving their personal estates.

Barry said those interested in membership should contact Richard H. Carter, secretary of the Marin County Estate Planning Council, at 1050 Northgate Drive, San Rafael, Calif. 94903.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

By PETER STUART

LONDON — In the glare of lights switching back on across Britain, many are asking whether the nation's dark and cold winter of power austerity was really necessary.

The five-day work week went back into effect at midnight Friday.

And the electricity-crippling industrial action by coal miners was settled — under the looser bargaining policy of the 48-hour old Labor government — in just one day of negotiaitons.

THE FINANCIAL COST of the one-year pay package, 103 million pounds, or about $237 million, more than doubles the top offer under the anti-inflation limits of the just-departed Conservative government, and falls just 10 million pounds (about $22 million) short of the miners' full claim.

But the economic and social cost of the 17-week overtime ban and strike dwarfs the cost of settlement:

— Britain settled with its miners for the cost of one week of lost production in manufacturing alone under government-ordered three-day working, estimates the Confederation of British Industry. The country suffered nine power-saving short work weeks each costing some 100 million pounds to 120 million pounds ($220 million to $264 million).

— The coal industry itself lost more money in nonproduction (120 million pounds) than it will pay the miners.

— The three-day week threw an estimated 1.6 million Britons out of work, swelling unemployment rolls to the highest levels since the depression (2.3 million, or about 10 per cent of the work force).

— The lingering dispute precipitated a "who governs Britain?" election which unseated Prime Minister Edward Heath and installed Harold Wilson. Mr. Wilson's winning campaign slogan: "Back to work with Labor."

THE NEW PAY RATES, moreover, only lift British miners to the lower wage ranges of their European colleagues, which soar as high as 77 pounds ($77) per week for the average West German miner. Pay raises range from $16 to $21 a week to a top of $103.

Besides the three-day work week, other power restrictions — darkened street lights and show windows, and voluntarily unheated rooms in homes — are likely to disappear soon.

Britons have been spared, however, the nationwide power blackouts of the miners' seven-week strike in 1972 — thanks to the other power-saving measures and the mildest winter in a generation. Power plants still have enough coal stockpiled to last to the end of March.

EVEN SO, a clear majority of Britons favored letting the miners breach the Heath government's inflationary guidelines as early in the dispute as mid-February, according to public-opinion pollsters.

The ultimate deadlock-breaker, say those involved, was the "free collective bargaining" approach of the new Labor government.

"What it does prove," says mine workers union leader Joseph Gormley, "is that when there is the spirit and willingness to reach a positive settlement, it could be achieved in one day rather than the long-drawn-out exercise in which we have been engaged."

Three Vehicles For Every Four Persons

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — There were about three vehicles registered for every four Californians at the end of 1973 — a total of 15.7 million cars, motorcycles, trucks and trailers — state figures showed yesterday.

The Department of Motor Vehicles said the total was 684,761 more vehicles than on the highways in 1972, or an increase of 4.54 per cent.

Los Angeles County had more than four times the number of registered vehicles of any other county — 4.9 million compared to second-place Orange County with 1.2 million. San Diego was third with almost 1.1 million.

The growth during 1973 surpassed the rate during the previous year by three-tenths of a per cent, or 72,261 vehicles.

The department said 1.6 million new vehicles were registered last year for highway use, 128,000 for off-road use and 408,777 out-of-state owners switched to California registration.

Total registrations broke down this way: 11.1 million cars, 2.1 million trucks, 1.6 million trailers and 624,695 motorcycles.

Samaritan Award Goes To Sacramento Boy, 16

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — State Controller Houston I. Flournoy yesterday expressed California's "pride and respect" in presenting a $2,079 good samaritan award to Michael H. Zangers, 16 of Sacramento.

The teen-ager was critically wounded last August while fighting off three youths who were beating and robbing two 12-year-old boys. The compensation award was made by the State Board of Control under the state's Good Samaritan Act.

In ceremonies at Luther Burbank High School, Flournoy said, "This monetary award barely covers the medical expenses resulting from Michael's injuries, but with this check goes my personal pride and respect, and I speak for all the people of California."

MEETING TOMORROW — Member nations of the Organization of Arab Oil Exporting Countries, noted on this UPI Telephoto map, will meet tomorrow in Tripoli, Libya, to consider easing the oil embargo against the United States. It was reported today a possible solution might emerge from the conference.

Easing Of Oil Embargo Expected

TRIPOLI, Libya (UPI) — Diplomatic sources said today Egypt and Saudi Arabia would propose easing the oil embargo against the United States at this week's meeting of Arab petroleum ministers.

The sources said, however, the attitude of Syria, a hardline Arab state, was crucial in determining whether the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries (OAPEC) agrees at tomorrow's Tripoli session to relax the boycott.

They said the ministers would likely base their final decision on whether Syria felt Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has made sufficient progress in getting Israel to pull back from occupied Arab territory.

Kissinger flew to Syria and Israel last month during his fourth Middle East peace mission, getting both nations to agree to start indirect troop pullback talks in Washington.

The Syrian government greeted Kissinger warmly during the visit, but has yet to make any public statement on whether it wishes the embargo lifted.

Oil experts in Tripoli said the Arab ministers might take one of two measures at tomorrow's meeting:

Lift the embargo, but threaten to reimpose the "oil weapon" if Kissinger fails to get Syria and Israel to separate their forces within a specified period.

Announce plans to lift the embargo as soon as Israel begins to withdraw from Syrian territory.

The Arab oil boycott was imposed during last October's Middle East War with the aim of pressuring the United States into modifying its pro-Israeli policy.

Kissinger Takes European Allies To Task On Separate Oil Deals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has sharply criticized European allies for seeking their own oil deal with the Arabs.

"The United States has no objection whatever to an independent European policy," Kissinger said yesterday. "It does have an objection when independence takes the form of basic hostility to the United States. It does have an objection when, in a crisis which can only be dealt with cooperatively, the Europeans deliberately adopt a competitive posture."

And he warned: "...we are going to win that competition if it takes place becuse we have infinitely more resources."

He made the statement in a private briefing for wives of congressmen. But the State Department made public a transcript, saying it had learned a reporter was present at the session.

Kissinger's strongly worded statement came as his efforts to get Syria and Israel together in Washington for talks on disengaging their forces in the Golan Heights appeared to hit a snag.

Undersecretary of State Joseph Sisco told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday it would be at least two weeks before an Israeli representative arrives and that Syria will not send a negotiator until even later.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban is due in Washington Thursday, but only to work on arrangements for those talks.

Progress in separating the Israelis and Syrians, who have been fighting in the Golan area, is considered by diplomats to be important in efforts to end the Arab oil embargo.

Kissinger has long been urging major oil consuming nations to work with the United States in dealing with Arab oil producers. But European Common Market nations recently voted to seek their own cooperative agreement with the Arabs.

Kissinger charged that European governments have "never fully regained public confidence" after causing the devastation of World War I. "The deepest problem in Europe today which we still see is that there have been very rarely, fully legitimate governments in any European country since World War I," he said.

Ford Inspects Self-Help Center

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Vice President Gerald R. Ford yesterday toured a self-help training program for minorities run by Rev. Leon H. Sullivan, a black Baptist minister and a board member of the General Motors Co. Ford said he was "tremendously impressed."

The vice president spent about two hours touring the facilities of the Opportunities Industrialization Center a program founded by Sullivan, which has 100 branches in 46 cities and four in Africa.

Former POW And Wife Split

REDWOOD CITY (UPI) — Army Lt. Col. Robert L. Stirm, 39, a former prisoner of war in Vietnam, and his wife, Loretta, 47, were divorced yesterday.

San Mateo County Superior Court Judge Melvin E. Cohn granted the dissolution of marriage and awarded each parent the custody of two children.

Lorie, 16, and Robert, 15, will live with Stirm while Roger, 13, and Cynthia, 12, will reside with Mrs. Stirm. Both parents live in Foster City.

Cohn ordered the officer to pay $300 a month in child support.

Witnesses at a divorce hearing said Mrs. Stirm had accepted marriage proposals from three men during the five years Stirm was a POW. They said she was now engaged to a San Mateo attorney.

Jailed Deserter's Views On Amnesty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A jailed military deserter has told a House subcommittee that only an unconditional amnesty can end "the vicious cycle of victimization" brought on by the Vietnam War.

Pvt. Lewis Simon, held in the stockade at Fort Dix, N.J., made his comments in a letter to the House subcommittee on courts, civil liberties and the administration of justice yesterday during the subcommittee's second day of hearings on several amnesty proposals.

Wreck Thought Driver's Fault

EL CENTRO, Calif. (UPI) — A U.S. Border Patrol van, carrying illegal aliens for deportation back to Mexico, slammed into a parked truck, killing 13 men, because the driver "apparently fell asleep at the wheel," the Imperial County coroner's office said yesterday.

Deputy Coroner Leonard Speer said he had definitely ruled out the possibility that the driver suffered a heart attack. Highway Patrol investigators said it appeared the driver made no attempt to brake before the van slammed into the truck at about 40 miles an hour.

The driver, Albert Feld of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, died in the crash. Six aliens were injured.

Bishop's Attackers Thought Strangers

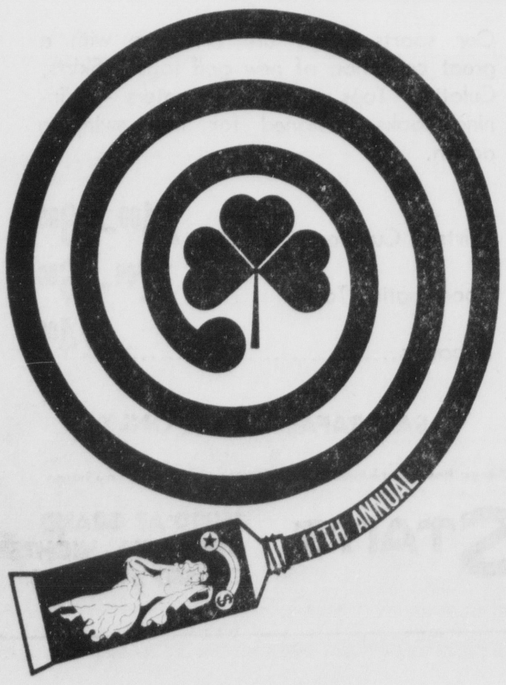

HOUSTON (UPI) — The two robbers who beat Roman Catholic Bishop L. Morkosvky, causing him to lose his left eye, apparently did not know who their victim was, Msgr. Joseph A. Fiorenza said yesterday.

"I asked him if he thought the two men knew he was the bishop, but he said they gave no indication they did know," Fiorenza, chancellor of the Galveston-Houston Diocese, said.

Service Would Cover North, Central State

By FRANK FARRARA

If Richard T. Duste of San Rafael has his way, Marin's Gnoss Field will become the hub of a network of air routes connecting the Bay Area with cities throughout Northern and Central California.

California Air Commuter plans to start a short-haul airline out of Gnoss Field, and Duste, president of the parent firm, Marin Aviation, foresees 5,000 passengers a month, such as the Marinite flying to San Francisco airport and the Crescent City businessman headed for Sacramento.

In Northern California, the airline would provide service to places thus far unserved by air or losing service by major lines, Duste said.

Initial flights out of Gnoss Field would be north to Crescent City and south to San Jose, including hauls to San Francisco and Oakland airports.

Then, in increments, the flights would be extended to Sacramento, Lake Tahoe and Stockton, southward to Bakersfield and northward to Redding.

California Air Commuter is seeking "almost the same routes as Golden Pacific" had, Duste said. "I've been working on this plan ever since Golden Pacific folded."

"I took a long look at Golden Pacific and, basically, I concluded they were using the wrong plane, an 18-passenger plane. They needed 15 passengers to break even and they couldn't hack it. You need a plane half that size."

His firm will fly a Piper Navajo Chieftain, a plane "built specially for commuter service," Duste said. The twin-engine, propeller-powered plane, valued at $210,000, seats nine passengers. It has a range of 1,500 miles and a speed of 250 miles an hour.

Duste said "We have 25 planes ranging in capacity from one to nine passengers and have a purchase order for another Chieftain," pending route approval by the California Public Utilities Commission.

Duste said all the firm's planes can operate at the existing Gnoss Field, but "we could use a better runway . . . it's too rough. It should be wider and a little longer." He said he has pushed for instrument approach facilities but it appeared "that's a way down the road."

Several short haul airlines are operating successfully in the state, "Swift Air from San Francisco down the coast, Golden West in the Los Angeles Basin, and Norcal from Sacramento to Redding," he said.

Air travel has increased with the fuel shortage and "big airlines want to get out of small towns" because there aren't enough passengers to warrant the expense of stops by large jets, he said.

Duste views the gasoline shortage as a further boon to small airlines, bringing customers reluctant to use their cars as much as formerly. "Our air taxi business has almost doubled since the fuel crisis came upon us," he said. "We're now boarding about 40 passengers a day. The biggest problem is to get people to us. There is a reluctance to drive north to fly south and it has nothing to do with time."

About 600 Marin residents a day use San Francisco International Airport and he hopes to attract passengers from that group. Duste also hopes to gain some passengers from the ranks of Marinites who drive to Sacramento fairly regularly. "It's a heck of a drive," he said. "We've already gotten support for flight to Lake Tahoe."

The proposed fares for the airline range from $15 a person to San Francisco to $35 to the farthest destination. (SFO Helicopter charges $13.50 from Waldo Point, but the rate is less if connecting to a scheduled airline flight in San Francisco.)

Duste said the term "commuter" doesn't really describe the proposed airline, since it will carry inter-city travelers who aren't necessarily commuters. "Neither is short haul but it's better," he said.

"It will serve the businessman in the small cities."

The only protest so far to the plan has been from STOL Air of Santa Rosa, a commuter airline that has a flagstop at Gnoss Field. William J. Connolly, president of STOL Air, said approving California air commuter flights would spread the passenger market too thin and cause both to fail.

Duste counters that while STOL offers only feeder service, getting people to airport connections with major lines, his short haul operation is also a "commuter airline, on an intercity basis."

Plans for the California Air Commuter Inc. operation are scheduled to be presented to the Marin County Aviation Commission at 8 p.m. April 2, at the Marin Civic Center.

FLAGSHIP OF THE FLEET — The twin-engined Pipe Navajo Chieftain poised outside a hangar at Gnoss Field with Richard T. Duste, president of Marin Aviation Inc., at the controls, was constructed especially for commuter airline service. California Air Commuter, a subsidiary of Marin Aviation, seeking air commuter routes in northern and central California, would have the Chieftain as the largest plane in its fleet.

Paving Material Strands A Jet

Vibrations from the engine damaged the right wing in the mishap yesterday, and an American Airlines spokesman said damage might be as high as $1 million.

Judge Ponders School Song Case

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — Superior Court Judge Joseph P. Murphy Jr. yesterday took under advisement a legal challenge by the American Civil Liberties Union against the Cotati-Rohnert Park School District.

Subject of the dispute is a song sung by Waldo Rohnert School kindergarten students which contains the line, "Thank you, God, for everything."

Martin M. Spiegel, attorney for the Sonoma ACLU, acting on behalf of a 5-year-old Waldo Rohnert student, told the court yesterday the song is an unconstitutional "establishment of religion."

State law allows Judge Murphy 90 days to decide the case.

In the meantime, "We'll continue to use the song until the judge tells us not to," said James H. Davidson, school district superintendent.

"Our position is that this song is permissible because it is contained in a state-adopted kindergarten teachers' manual," he said.

Davidson said he believes the ACLU should sue the state Department of Education, rather than the local school district.

Activity Can Be Key To Survival

The body cannot be divorced from the awesome power of the mind. Every emotion, mental conflict and fear we experience affects in some way the body and its organs. Fear of growing old, fear of rejection by a younger society, fear of isolation in old age — fears encountered at one time or another by older people — may trigger physical pain, even death, without actual disease existing in the body.

The term is "psychosomatic," which means, simply, "mind-body." Doctors use it to describe conditions and diseases often found in their older patients which are brought on by mental or emotional factors.

Some illnesses are created through a subliminal fear of growing old, through feelings of inadequacy and anxiety about the future. Sickness may offer a convenient and acceptable escape. It may even cause a certain amount of joy because younger people may become very solicitous and caring.

The mind can cure a psychosomatic illness as quickly as it can bring it on. Removing the basic cause of worry or depression often results in what could be taken as a "miraculous" cure.

Take the case of Elizabeth Barrett Browning, dominated by her tyrannical father for the first 40 years of her life. For a quarter of a century, Elizabeth was confined to her couch because of a slight back injury suffered at age 15. Then she met Robert Browning, fell in love, and married. Almost overnight, she "recovered" well enough to climb mountains, to travel through Europe and to bear a child. The psychosomatic illnesses which are so common in older people can be prevented by their taking a real interest in life, in people, in every conceivable facet of living. One of the surest ways is by remaining active physically and mentally.

Many retirees actively seek activity and new interests at a time of life when many others are throwing in the sponge. But for many more, age 65 still seems a time of "end" rather than a time of fulfilment. They feel that their goals — if not achieved by middle age — will never be achieved. For them life with any meaning is over. Feelings of emptiness of purpose, uselessness and isolation take over.

Life can be a dead end. But it doesn't have to be. The "golden years" of retirement can bring a new meaning to life, to creativity and many years of enjoyable living. It can be, if one is willing to cultivate new interests and work toward new goals using all of the skills, interests, experience, abilities, judgement and maturity acquired through the years.

Doctors and psychiatrists all agree that the person who has managed to keep up his interests can make retirement one of the happiest of times.

This does not imply that you must fill every waking hour with activity. You have earned a rest. You have a right to relax. But not to the point where relaxation leads to boredom, frustration and vegetation.

Plan your activities. This will help to maintain a positive attitude and will keep you from becoming a burden to your friends, your spouse and yourself. On the other hand, planning your activities should not lead to a regimen so rigid that you become a slave to routine. You've probably had enough of that during your career. But a plan will give you a sense of purpose and should enable you to invest your time and energy wisely.

If you still have 10, 15 or 20 years before age 65, begin today to broaden your horizons. Involve yourself in activities which will interest you in your later years. Plan in a manner that does not bring too drastic a change in your activities. After all, your main interest must still be to provide for your family. But the transition from employment to retirement should include building interest in those things you want to do after retirement. Keeping busy in these pursuits will also help to fend off the middle-age "blues" and will help to open new and exciting vistas for pursuit.

Millions before you have made a successful transition. Keep their example in mind as you approach that inevitable day. Live with the urge to experiment, to discover, to enjoy life to its fullest, and you will be on the way to a rich and rewarding phase of your life.

No Jail Time If Program Carried Out

A Waldo Point man, who pleaded guilty to passing 14 bad checks totaling $550 in Mill Valley last May and June, was sentenced to one year in jail yesterday.

But Superior Court Judge Charles Read Best said Gary Lee Howard, 24, may continue in Pathways House, a San Jose drug treatment center where he has been living for seven months.

If Howard completes the program there, he will not have to spend any time in jail, Judge Best said.

Best also fined Howard $500 and ordered him to repay the merchants he defrauded. He also must spend two years on probation, Best ruled.

Redevelopment Session Set For Saturday

The regular meeting of the Marin County Redevelopment Agency scheduled for tonight has been postponed to 9 a.m. Saturday, according to Collie B. Gaines, chairman.

The adjourned session will be held in the student center at Tamalpais High School, Mill Valley, she reported.

The board members will discuss a proposed redevelopment study for Richardson Bay from Sausalito city limits to the shoreline of Mill Valley.

Agency members also will adopt a resolution changing the board's meetings from the second Tuesday each month to the first Thursday, Mrs. Gaines said.

Coal Strike Injunction Is Sought

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — U.S. Steel Corp. will seek an injunction to break a coal miners' strike which has seriously reduced the No. 1 steel producer's coal supplies, according to a company spokesman.

The miners failed yesterday in their own court bid to remove gasoline sales restrictions which they said prompted a continuation of the strike, now in its third week.

The West Virginia Supreme Court rejected by a 4-0 vote a suit seeking removal of an order by Gov. Arch Moore banning sales to customers whose autos contain more than a quarter tank of gas.

United Mine Workers President Arnold Miller contended in the suit that Moore had to declare a state of emergency before imposing the quarter tank regulation, enacted last Feb. 22 because of critical gasoline shortages throughout the state.

Scattered walkouts prompted by the shortage blossomed into a strike by more than 24,000 miners in seven southern counties who contend the quarter tank rule subjects them to undue hardship because many commute long distances each day.

Moore has exempted any person who drives at least 250 miles to work every week from the quarter tank order, but miners have rejected that compromise.

U.S. Steel claims the strike has reduced its stockpiles of high grade bituminous coal used in the iron making process and has forced production cutbacks at plants in Chicago, Youngstown, Ohio, Clairton, Pa., and Gary, Ind. About 600 employes have been furloughed.

A spokesman said the firm would appeal an injunction petition which was rejected by a federal court when the strike began. U.S. Steel owns seven mines in McDowell County, the center of the strike.

The spokesman said those mines produce 16,000 tons of coal daily, but that U.S. Steel relys on additional tonnage from other mines closed by the walkout.

Spokesmen for Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. and Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel said the strike has reduced their firms' coal supplies, but said there was no immediate possibility of shutdowns.

Nice People Don't Peek, But Bidding Often Does The Job

A peek is worth two finesses, according to the folklore of bridge. This isn't much help, of course, since nice people don't peek. Sometimes the bidding takes the place of a peek, however, and then you can tell how much a finesse is worth.

Opening lead — ♠ J

West opens the jack of spades, and you win with the queen. Where do you go from here?

If you like finesses, you lead a club to dummy and try the heart finesse. This will make you popular with the oponents, but it won't help your bridge score.

West will win with the king of hearts and will drive out the ace of spades. You are in position to take two spades, two hearts, and four clubs. As soon as you try for a diamond trick, West will step up with the ace of diamonds and will defeat the contract with the rest of his spades.

READ THE CARDS

Now go back to the first trick. West needs the king of hearts and the ace of diamonds for his bid. This information, as good as a peek, tells you that the heart finesse is worthless.

The way to make the contract is to lead any low red card at the second trick.

Suppose you lead a low heart. If West steps up with the king, you will have three sure heart tricks. You don't need a diamond trick. If West fails to take the king of hearts, you win with dummy's jack and then switch to diamonds for your ninth trick.

You are equally safe if you lead a low diamond at the second trick. If West takes the ace you will be sure of two diamonds, and game is then sure with only one heart trick. If West fails to take the ace of diamonds you win with dummy's king and switch at once to hearts to make sure of two heart tricks.

ANSWER:

Bid two spades with a reliable, conservative partner. Otherwise bid one notrump. A light raise in a major suit, especially spades, tends to make life difficult for the opponents.

Coal Strike Injunction Is Sought

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — U.S. Steel Corp. will seek an injunction to break a coal miners' strike which has seriously reduced the No. 1 steel producer's coal supplies, according to a company spokesman.

The miners failed yesterday in their own court bid to remove gasoline sales restrictions which they said prompted a continuation of the strike, now in its third week.

The West Virginia Supreme Court rejected by a 4-0 vote a suit seeking removal of an order by Gov. Arch Moore banning sales to customers whose autos contain more than a quarter tank of gas.

United Mine Workers President Arnold Miller contended in the suit that Moore had to declare a state of emergency before imposing the quarter tank regulation, enacted last Feb. 22 because of critical gasoline shortages throughout the state.

Scattered walkouts prompted by the shortage blossomed into a strike by more than 24,000 miners in seven southern counties who contend the quarter tank rule subjects them to undue hardship because many commute long distances each day.

Moore has exempted any person who drives at least 250 miles to work every week from the quarter tank order, but miners have rejected that compromise.

U.S. Steel claims the strike has reduced its stockpiles of high grade bituminous coal used in the iron making process and has forced production cutbacks at plants in Chicago, Youngstown, Ohio, Clairton, Pa., and Gary, Ind. About 600 employes have been furloughed.

A spokesman said the firm would appeal an injunction petition which was rejected by a federal court when the strike began. U.S. Steel owns seven mines in McDowell County, the center of the strike.

The spokesman said those mines produce 16,000 tons of coal daily, but that U.S. Steel relys on additional tonnage from other mines closed by the walkout.

Spokesmen for Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. and Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel said the strike has reduced their firms' coal supplies, but said there was no immediate possibility of shutdowns.

Police arrested strike leader Bill Sparks, of Bull Creek, W. Va., yesterday during a protest march here by miners demanding federal food stamps.

W. Marin Blood Bank Scheduled

The Black Point Improvement Association plans to establish a blood bank for Black Point residents.

Directors on Friday set April 27 for a mobile blood unit to visit the area and urged residents to donate blood.

The hours and location of the bloodmobile will be announced after the board's next meeting April 12, according to Rosalie F. Hope, club secretary.

ALMANAC

By U.P. International

Today is Tuesday, March 12, the 71st day of 1974 with 294 to follow.

The moon is approaching its last quarter. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus and Jupiter. The evening stars are Mars and Saturn.

American astrologer Simon Newcomb was born March 12, 1835.

On this day in history:

In 1912, the first Girl Scout of America troop was organized in Savannah, Ga., by Mrs. Juliette Gordon Law.

In 1938, Germany invaded Austria.

In 1963, the House of Representatives voted to grant former british prime minister Sir Winston Churchill honorary U.S. citizenship.

A thought for the day: American writer John Marquand said, "It is worthwhile for anyone to have behind him a few generations of honest, hard-working ancestry."

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE
By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Nice People Don't Peek, But Bidding Often Does The Job

A peek is worth two finesses, according to the folklore of bridge. This isn't much help, of course, since nice people don't peek. Sometimes the bidding takes the place of a peek, however, and then you can tell how much a finesse is worth.

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	2 ◇	Pass	2 NT
Pass	3 NT	All Pass

Opening lead — ♠ J

West opens the jack of spades, and you win with the queen. Where do you go from here?

If you like finesses, you lead a club to dummy and try the heart finesse. This will make you popular with the oponents, but it won't help your bridge score.

West will win with the king of hearts and will drive out the ace of spades. You are in position to take two spades, two hearts, and four clubs. As soon as you try for a diamond trick, West will step up with the ace of diamonds and will defeat the contract with the rest of his spades.

READ THE CARDS

Now go back to the first trick. West needs the king of hearts and the ace of diamonds for his bid. This information, as good as a peek, tells you that the heart finesse is worthless.

The way to make the contract is to lead any low red card at the second trick.

Suppose you lead a low heart. If West steps up with the king, you will have three sure heart tricks. You don't need a diamond trick. If West fails to take the king of hearts, you win with dummy's jack and then switch to diamonds for your ninth trick.

You are equally safe if you lead a low diamond at the second trick. If West takes the ace you will be sure of two diamonds, and game is then sure with only one heart trick. If West fails to take the ace of diamonds you win with dummy's king and switch at once to hearts to make sure of two heart tricks.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one spade, and the next player passes. You hold:

♥ - J 2
♦ - K 8 5 2
♣ - Q J 10 6.

What do you say?

ANSWER:

Bid two spades with a reliable, conservative partner. Otherwise bid one notrump. A light raise in a major suit, especially spades, tends to make life difficult for the opponents.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

African Bushman Is Found To Have 18 Different Physicial Ills

How many ailments can a person have without developing symptoms or becoming disabled? To my knowledge, no one has researched this question, but Dr. Robert D. Courteau who spent three years in Rhodesia recently wrote about an African bushman with 18 different disorders. His report appeared in the medical journal, "Postgraduate Medicine."

The patient, a 60-year-old man, complaind of pricking chest pains and a cough that produced yellowish sputum. He had been bothered for two months and requested admission to the hospital because he was getting no better and was developing fatigue and occasional headache.

WHEN QUESTIONED, he denied having fever, sweats, chills, weight loss, difficulty sleeping, or anything else. There were no cardiac, gastronitestinal, or urinary tract symptoms and he was sexually active.

When examined, he had no fever and his blood pressure was normal. Dr. Courteau could hear rales (abnormal breath sounds) in the lungs and the prostate gland was enlarged. The real abnormalities showed up when X-rays and laboratory tests were done. Stool specimens uncovered four different types of intestinal parasites, including those responsible for amebic dysnetery. All were eliminated with appropriate medicines.

THE CHEST X-ray showed pneumonia in one part of the lung and pulmonary tuberculosis in another. A peculiar tumor-like shadow turned out to be a decomposing adult cockroach. Apparently, he had unknowingly inhaled the insect which created the irritation that triggered the peneumonia. And it had to be removed before the pneumonia responded to the antibiotics.

The urine was loaded with pus cells and contained blood. When the usual treatments failed, the kidneys and bladder were X-rayed. A large stone was found in the urinary bladder along with dilation of the tube leading to the right kidney, which was also enlarged. The bladder was small and the wall was thickened. An operation was necessary to remove the stone. The man is now in a tuberculosis sanitarium undergoing further treatment.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request c/o the Independent-Journal, PO Box 330, 1040 B St., San Rafael, Ca. 94902. Telephone inquiries will not be answered.

MONGOLISM TESTS

A reader writes: Are there any tests to determine if a newborn baby is suffering from mongolism?

REPLY

The child may have a mongoloid appearance along with shorter and less well-developed hands, feet neck, torso, arms, and legs. A "simian" crease is often noted in the palm point. Muscle flabbiness is pronounced. Chromosomal tests show abnormalities. These youngsters have an extra chromosome — 47 instead of 46. Many birth defects can now be diagnosed early in pregnancy and tests along this line are available should this child prove to have mongolism. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on this condition.

WHEN COUSINS WED

B.G. writes: Would the children of second cousins be born deformed or mentally incapable?

REPLY

They could be but they might also be perfect or just normal children. Inbreeding may accentuate the good as well as the bad characteristics of a family.

Information On Panther Party To Be Released

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Justice Department yesterday agreed to surrender "a truckload" of documents pertaining to the FBI's role in gathering intelligence on the Black Panther Party before a 1969 raid that left two Panther leaders dead.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Sheldon Waxman announced in U.S. District Court that the records, which could amount to "as much as a semi-truck load," would likely include memorandanda from Eugene O'Neal, an informant, to FBI agent Roy Mitchell.

Waxman's concession came during a hearing on a $3.8 million damage suit brought by relatives of the slain panthers, Fred Hampton and Mark Clark, against former Cook County state's attorney Edward V. Hanrahan, 17 other persons, the City of Chicago and Cook County.

Visitor Says Few Favor Impeaching

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — A Japanese editor who has been touring the United States said yesterday he has found Americans much less eager for impeachment of President Nixon than news stories had led him to expect.

Masanobu Shimizu, deputy editor of the West Japan Daily, said, "Your eastern papers seem to be constantly calling for impeachment and their stories sent to my nation reflect this attitude. These papers seem to indicate the entire United States feels the same way.

"But in my travels I have found no evidence of this. In other parts of this country there is much divided opinion on your President and many people feel he should be allowed to finish his term."

He said, "In Japan we have been given to believe that the American public was solidly for the President's impeachment or his resignation, but I have not found this to be true at all."

He said Japan probably will not return to a normal economic condition for several years as a result of the fuel crisis. He said the nationwide shortage has caused a slowdown of the entire Japanese economy.

Food Shortage Threat Is Seen

ROME (UPI) — Mankind faces for the second straight year the threat of a worldwide food shortage despite bumper crops in 1973, according to the director general of the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO).

"More than ever since the Second World War, the world will be dependent on this year's production for its basic food supplies, bearing in mind the fact that a continuation of recent trends would mean that reserve stocks of wheat will be gradually approaching the vanishing point," Director General Addeke H. Boerma said.

Speaking yesterday to senior executives of nearly 100 international companies gathered for the 10th General Committee session of the Cooperative Program of Agro-allied Industries (ICP), Boerma said:

"We find ourselves, for the second year in succession, facing the threat of a worldwide food shortage."

SACRAMENTO ROUNDUP

Pudinski Backs Trial For Women On CHP

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A proposed $1 million experiment to determine whether women should be hired as officers of the all-male California Highway Patrol has been endorsed by the agency's chief.

"Let's get this issue settled once and for all, but let's get it settled on facts and not emotionalism," declared CHPI Commissioner Walter Pudinski.

Pudinski, the patrol's first up-from-the-ranks chief, who is being sued for refusing to hire a woman jobseeker, declared his support for an experimental coeducational training program in an interview with UPI. The issue surfaced in the Senate Transportation Committee Monday when Chairman Lawrence Walsh, D-Huntington Park, sought to question Pudinski on his proposed legislation to hire at least 30 women on a test basis for road patrol duty.

Pudinski said he was willing to discuss the proposal but Waslh was cut off from questioning him by Sen. Jack Schrade, R-San Diego, who threatened to walk out of the hearing.

Schrade, who gathered up his papers and moved to leave, charged such questioning was "out of order" because of the pending sex discriminating lawsuit against Pudinski.

Pudinski told a newsman later, however, he favored the plan. He estimated it would cost $1 million and take two years to complete, including 12 months of actual on-the-road work by "patrolwomen."

He has steadfastly opposed hiring women as patrol officers, chiefly on grounds that they would not be physically strong enough to perform the tasks of patrolmen.

Pudinski, however, has said he would "reconsider" his position if results of a testing program showed that women performed as well as men on patrol duty.

PETITION NAMES

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation designed to insure the secrecy of signatures on initiative or recall petitions was approved yesterday by the Assembly Elections and Reapportionment Committee.

"I think there's no more right to find out if I signed a petition than if I voted for myself in the last election," declared Assemblyman Jack R. Fenton, D-Montebello.

His bill (AB2690) would prevent county clerks from permanently marking on voter registration affidavits who signed various petitions and would require the petitions themselves be destroyed eight months after an election.

FUEL SUPPLIES

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation designed to provide gasoline and oil for state and local government agencies has been approved by the Senate Natural Resources Committee.

The bill, sent to the Governmental Organization Committee on a 9-0 vote yesterday, would create a state fuel purchases coordinating council to purchase fuel on behalf of numerous public agencies.

Assemblyman Ken Meade, D-Oakland, author of the bill (AB1846), said many governmental bodies have been unsuccessful in having oil companies bid to supply fuel because of the energy crisis.

VOTE SPENDING

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation limiting the amount of money candidates for statewide office and the legislature can spend on media advertising was introduced yesterday by Assemblyman Edwin L. Z'berg.

The Sacramento Democrat's measure AB3351 would permit statewide candidates to spend only 10 cents per registered voter. Based on January registration figures, each gubernatorial contender could spend about $911,000 in this year's race.

In 1970, Gov. Ronald Reagan spent $2.6 million in his campaign.

The bill would permit Assembly and Senate candidates to spend up to $50,000 — which would be more than 10 cents per voter. In an average Assembly district, it would be about 30 cents per voter.

WILD AREAS

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A state wilderness system, initially including about 100,000 acres, would be created under a bill which has advanced to the Senate floor.

The conservationist bill (SB1498) by Sen. John A. Nejedly, R-Walnut Creek, cleared the Finance Committee yesterday on an 8-1 vote.

The measure is similar to the federal wilderness program. It would set aside state-owned land which has a "primeval character and influence without permanent improvements or human habitation."

HEADS CAUCUS

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Sen. Dennis E. Carpenter of Newport Beach has been chosen chairman of the Senate Republican Caucus, the No. 2 GOP leadership post in the upper house.

Carpenter, an attorney and former FBI special agent who was first elected to the Senate in 1970, replaces Sen. John L. Harmer of Glendale, who resigned as caucus chairman to run for lieutenant governor.

Nine Month Jail Term Is Given

The former assistant manager of a Novato pizza parlor has been sentenced to nine months in county jail for taking $1,338 from a safe during work.

But Superior Court Judge Charles Read Best told Francis Raymond, 24, of Sebastopol, that he may serve the sentence in a live-in drug treatment program.

Raymond turned himself in after the money was discovered missing from Round Table Pizza in January. He had been hired as assistant manager in December.

Judge Best placed Raymond on three years' probation, ordered him to repay the restaurant and said the offense to which Raymond pleaded guilty, grand theft, will be reduced to a misdemeanor if he completes probation successfully.

Pact Is Signed For Geothermal Electric Plant

ROSEMEAD (UPI) — Southern California Edison Co. and Magma Energy Inc. have signed an agreement to develop a geothermal electric generating station near Mammoth in Mono County, it was announned yesterday.

Contract negotiations are expected to be completed within a few months for the plant, which would be located in the Casa Diablo area.

If the contract is negotiated soon, the companies said, the plant may be in operation late this year or early in 1975 to utilize geothermal energy from several wells previously developed by Magma.

Bay School Session

Staff members and trustees of the Sausalito School District will meet with residents of the Richardson Bay Houseboat communities to discuss school programs at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at St. Andrew United Presbyterian Church, Drake and Donahue avenues in Marin City, according to Supt. Donald W. Johnson.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

African Bushman Is Found To Have 18 Different Physicial Ills

How many ailments can a person have without developing symptoms or becoming disabled? To my knowledge, no one has researched this question, but Dr. Robert D. Courteau who spent three years in Rhodesia recently wrote about an African bushman with 18 different disorders. His report appeared in the medical journal, "Postgraduate Medicine."

The patient, a 60-year-old man, complaind of pricking chest pains and a cough that produced yellowish sputum. He had been bothered for two months and requested admission to the hospital because he was getting no better and was developing fatigue and occasional headache.

WHEN QUESTIONED, he denied having fever, sweats, chills, weight loss, difficulty sleeping, or anything else. There were no cardiac, gastronitestinal, or urinary tract symptoms and he was sexually active.

When examined, he had no fever and his blood pressure was normal. Dr. Courteau could hear rales (abnormal breath sounds) in the lungs and the prostate gland was enlarged. The real abnormalities showed up when X-rays and laboratory tests were done. Stool specimens uncovered four different types of intestinal parasites, including those responsible for amebic dysnetery. All were eliminated with appropriate medicines.

THE CHEST X-ray showed pneumonia in one part of the lung and pulmonary tuberculosis in another. A peculiar tumor-like shadow turned out to be a decomposing adult cockroach. Apparently, he had unknowingly inhaled the insect which created the irritation that triggered the peneumonia. And it had to be removed before the pneumonia responded to the antibiotics.

The urine was loaded with pus cells and contained blood. When the usual treatments failed, the kidneys and bladder were X-rayed. A large stone was found in the urinary bladder along with dilation of the tube leading to the right kidney, which was also enlarged. The bladder was small and the wall was thickened. An operation was necessary to remove the stone. The man is now in a tuberculosis sanitarium undergoing further treatment.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request c/o the Independent-Journal, PO Box 330, 1040 B St., San Rafael, Ca. 94902. Telephone inquiries will not be answered.

MONGOLISM TESTS

A reader writes: Are there any tests to determine if a newborn baby is suffering from mongolism?

REPLY

The child may have a mongoloid appearance along with shorter and less well-developed hands, feet neck, torso, arms, and legs. A "simian" crease is often noted in the palm point. Muscle flabbiness is pronounced. Chromosomal tests show abnormalities. These youngsters have an extra chromosome — 47 instead of 46. Many birth defects can now be diagnosed early in pregnancy and tests along this line are available should this child prove to have mongolism. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on this condition.

WHEN COUSINS WED

B.G. writes: Would the children of second cousins be born deformed or mentally incapable?

REPLY

They could be but they might also be perfect or just normal children. Inbreeding may accentuate the good as well as the bad characteristics of a family.

Information On Panther Party To Be Released

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Justice Department yesterday agreed to surrender "a truckload" of documents pertaining to the FBI's role in gathering intelligence on the Black Panther Party before a 1969 raid that left two Panther leaders dead.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Sheldon Waxman announced in U.S. District Court that the records, which could amount to "as much as a semi-truck load," would likely include memorandanda from Eugene O'Neal, an informant, to FBI agent Roy Mitchell.

Waxman's concession came during a hearing on a $3.8 million damage suit brought by relatives of the slain panthers, Fred Hampton and Mark Clark, against former Cook County state's attorney Edward V. Hanrahan, 17 other persons, the City of Chicago and Cook County.

Visitor Says Few Favor Impeaching

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — A Japanese editor who has been touring the United States said yesterday he has found Americans much less eager for impeachment of President Nixon than news stories had led him to expect.

Masanobu Shimizu, deputy editor of the West Japan Daily, said, "Your eastern papers seem to be constantly calling for impeachment and their stories sent to my nation reflect this attitude. These papers seem to indicate the entire United States feels the same way.

"But in my travels I have found no evidence of this. In other parts of this country there is much divided opinion on your President and many people feel he should be allowed to finish his term."

He said, "In Japan we have been given to believe that the American public was solidly for the President's impeachment or his resignation, but I have not found this to be true at all."

He said Japan probably will not return to a normal economic condition for several years as a result of the fuel crisis. He said the nationwide shortage has caused a slowdown of the entire Japanese economy.

Food Shortage Threat Is Seen

ROME (UPI) — Mankind faces for the second straight year the threat of a worldwide food shortage despite bumper crops in 1973, according to the director general of the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO).

"More than ever since the Second World War, the world will be dependent on this year's production for its basic food supplies, bearing in mind the fact that a continuation of recent trends would mean that reserve stocks of wheat will be gradually approaching the vanishing point," Director General Addeke H. Boerma said.

Speaking yesterday to senior executives of nearly 100 international companies gathered for the 10th General Committee session of the Cooperative Program of Agro-allied Industries (ICP), Boerma said:

"We find ourselves, for the second year in succession, facing the threat of a worldwide food shortage."

SACRAMENTO ROUNDUP

Pudinski Backs Trial For Women On CHP

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A proposed $1 million experiment to determine whether women should be hired as officers of the all-male California Highway Patrol has been endorsed by the agency's chief.

"Let's get this issue settled once and for all, but let's get it settled on facts and not emotionalism," declared CHPI Commissioner Walter Pudinski.

Pudinski, the patrol's first up-from-the-ranks chief, who is being sued for refusing to hire a woman jobseeker, declared his support for an experimental coeducational training program in an interview with UPI. The issue surfaced in the Senate Transportation Committee Monday when Chairman Lawrence Walsh, D-Huntington Park, sought to question Pudinski on his proposed legislation to hire at least 30 women on a test basis for road patrol duty.

Pudinski said he was willing to discuss the proposal but Waslh was cut off from questioning him by Sen. Jack Schrade, R-San Diego, who threatened to walk out of the hearing.

Schrade, who gathered up his papers and moved to leave, charged such questioning was "out of order" because of the pending sex discriminating lawsuit against Pudinski.

Pudinski told a newsman later, however, he favored the plan. He estimated it would cost $1 million and take two years to complete, including 12 months of actual on-the-road work by "patrolwomen."

He has steadfastly opposed hiring women as patrol officers, chiefly on grounds that they would not be physically strong enough to perform the tasks of patrolmen.

Pudinski, however, has said he would "reconsider" his position if results of a testing program showed that women performed as well as men on patrol duty.

PETITION NAMES

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation designed to insure the secrecy of signatures on initiative or recall petitions was approved yesterday by the Assembly Elections and Reapportionment Committee.

"I think there's no more right to find out if I signed a petition than if I voted for myself in the last election," declared Assemblyman Jack R. Fenton, D-Montebello.

His bill (AB2690) would prevent county clerks from permanently marking on voter registration affidavits who signed various petitions and would require the petitions themselves be destroyed eight months after an election.

FUEL SUPPLIES

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation designed to provide gasoline and oil for state and local government agencies has been approved by the Senate Natural Resources Committee.

The bill, sent to the Governmental Organization Committee on a 9-0 vote yesterday, would create a state fuel purchases coordinating council to purchase fuel on behalf of numerous public agencies.

Assemblyman Ken Meade, D-Oakland, author of the bill (AB1846), said many governmental bodies have been unsuccessful in having oil companies bid to supply fuel because of the energy crisis.

VOTE SPENDING

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation limiting the amount of money candidates for statewide office and the legislature can spend on media advertising was introduced yesterday by Assemblyman Edwin L. Z'berg.

The Sacramento Democrat's measure AB3351 would permit statewide candidates to spend only 10 cents per registered voter. Based on January registration figures, each gubernatorial contender could spend about $911,000 in this year's race.

In 1970, Gov. Ronald Reagan spent $2.6 million in his campaign.

The bill would permit Assembly and Senate candidates to spend up to $50,000 — which would be more than 10 cents per voter. In an average Assembly district, it would be about 30 cents per voter.

WILD AREAS

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A state wilderness system, initially including about 100,000 acres, would be created under a bill which has advanced to the Senate floor.

The conservationist bill (SB1498) by Sen. John A. Nejedly, R-Walnut Creek, cleared the Finance Committee yesterday on an 8-1 vote.

The measure is similar to the federal wilderness program. It would set aside state-owned land which has a "primeval character and influence without permanent improvements or human habitation."

HEADS CAUCUS

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Sen. Dennis E. Carpenter of Newport Beach has been chosen chairman of the Senate Republican Caucus, the No. 2 GOP leadership post in the upper house.

Carpenter, an attorney and former FBI special agent who was first elected to the Senate in 1970, replaces Sen. John L. Harmer of Glendale, who resigned as caucus chairman to run for lieutenant governor.

Nine Month Jail Term Is Given

The former assistant manager of a Novato pizza parlor has been sentenced to nine months in county jail for taking $1,338 from a safe during work.

But Superior Court Judge Charles Read Best told Francis Raymond, 24, of Sebastopol, that he may serve the sentence in a live-in drug treatment program.

Raymond turned himself in after the money was discovered missing from Round Table Pizza in January. He had been hired as assistant manager in December.

Judge Best placed Raymond on three years' probation, ordered him to repay the restaurant and said the offense to which Raymond pleaded guilty, grand theft, will be reduced to a misdemeanor if he completes probation successfully.

Pact Is Signed For Geothermal Electric Plant

ROSEMEAD (UPI) — Southern California Edison Co. and Magma Energy Inc. have signed an agreement to develop a geothermal electric generating station near Mammoth in Mono County, it was announned yesterday.

Contract negotiations are expected to be completed within a few months for the plant, which would be located in the Casa Diablo area.

If the contract is negotiated soon, the companies said, the plant may be in operation late this year or early in 1975 to utilize geothermal energy from several wells previously developed by Magma.

Bay School Session

Staff members and trustees of the Sausalito School District will meet with residents of the Richardson Bay Houseboat communities to discuss school programs at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at St. Andrew United Presbyterian Church, Drake and Donahue avenues in Marin City, according to Supt. Donald W. Johnson.

New FCC Look Emerging

By LOUISE SWEENEY
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON — Seven people in a brown glass-walled building on M Street here decide if you will pay more for your long-distance phone calls, if your children's TV programs will be strafed with violence, if the detergent commercial you watch is more full of hot air than suds, if you will be able to have cable TV in your community, and if your minority candidate will have equal time to voice his views over the airwaves.

The seven members of the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) make decisions every day that affect every U.S. citizen's life — and right now a major change in the makeup of that commission is taking place which could have a sharp impact on communications policy affecting you over the next several years.

President Nixon has just appointed one of the FCC commissioners, Richard E. Wiley, to succeed Dean Burch as chairman of the FCC when Burch steps into his new position as counselor to the President. By the end of the year, Nixon will have left what Albert H. Kramer, president of the National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting (NCCB), calls "a deep and lasting imprint" on the nation's communication system.

By then Nixon will have appointed eight of the 16 members of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting; the already named director, deputy director, and central staff of the White House office on telecommunications policy; and virtually all of the seven members of the FCC.

Nixon's imprint will be felt beyond his incumbency, since FCC commissioners serve for seven years and his unprecedented naming of the total commission will mold this powerful regulatory agency.

Leaving as chairman

CHARLOTTE T. REED
A Republican member

Some critics are concerned about whether that imprint will benefit the public or the vast businesses, like the telephone, cable TV, and broadcasting industries, which the FCC is chartered to regulate.

"President Nixon has clearly moved the FCC in the direction of less consumer orientation as far as his appointees are concerned," says NCCB president Kramer. "The only countervailing pressures will have to come from the incipient and growing consumer movement in broadcasting."

"I expect the commission will take a sudden lurch to the right with Wiley in charge," says Tracy Westen, director of Public Communications, Inc., a citizens communication organization. "Under his leadership the FCC will be much more conservative and much more politically oriented."

Commissioner Wiley, a former Chicago lawyer and state chairman for Nixon in 1968, has been described as "a friend of the broadcasting industry." A spokesman for the industry's National Association of Broadcasters (NAB) sees it differently: "He's a friend of the industry only in the sense that he appreciates all the industries he regulates and their problems," says Grover C. Cobb, senior executive vice-president of the NAB.

The NAB reflects the view widely held in all the industries overseen by the FCC: the less regulation the better — a laissez-faire approach.

Apparently the NAB is not displeased with the naming of Wiley as FCC chairman, an appointment which, unlike those of other commissioners, is not subject to congressional confirmation.

Right now the rest of the commission is in a state of flux, with three immediate vacancies to be filled: former Commissioner Nicholas Johnson's and H. Rex Lee's posts, as well as Commissioner Wiley's. A fourth vacancy may open up this summer when Commissioner Robert E. Lee's term expires; there is talk that he would like to be reappointed, and the President may agree.

FCC law stipulates that no more than four commissioners shall be members of the same party, but right now the only Democrat on the commission is Commissioner Benjamin Hooks, a former criminal court judge from Memphis.

There are those who wonder how strong a Democratic voice he is on the commission. Prof. Stephen R. Barnett, a professor of law specializing in communications at the University of California at Berkeley, said recently at a Senate hearing on an FCC nominee: "I do not question Hooks' veracity, but I can report that if he is a Democrat, you can't tell it from the way he has been voting on the FCC. On all the issues but one — the interests of minorities — Commissioner Hooks has been a loyal follower of the broadcast industry's line . . ."

The hearing at which Professor Barnett made that statement was on President Nixon's nomination of James H. Quello to fill the Johnson seat. Quello is a retired Detroit broadcaster who is ostensibly a Democrat although he contributed $1,100 to President Nixon's reelection campaign. During the week of testimony on his nomination, critics argued against him as a former member of the industry the FCC regulates and because of what they saw as his uncertain political stripe, among other reasons.

Sources say Quello probably still has the job sewn up, as he appeared to immediately after the hearings, but that might change if further Nixon nominees at this time were open to congressional challenge on the basis of politics, industry orientation, or lack of consumer representation.

Meanwhile, there are a few names surfacing to fill those FCC openings. Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn. reportedly is pushing the Nixon nomination of Ward White, minority counsel to the communications subcommittee. White, a native of Kansas, is a Republican.

Sen. Philip A. Hart, R-Mich., rallied almost all his Michigan congressional colleagues around him several weeks ago in a bipartisan show of backing for Senator Hart's long-time friend, nominee Quello.

Several other members of Congress have favorite aides or friends they would like to see nominated for an FCC plum. And with a string of Republicans deciding not to run again in the House there are plenty of potential nominees there, too.

Apart from that, two names have surfaced recently among the possible contenders for the next FCC vacancy: Democrat Glenn Robinson, a professor of law at the University of Minnesota who also has been a consultant and adviser to the NAB; and Democrat Luther Holcomb, a Johnson Democrat from Dallas, who has been vice-chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Council since 1965 (appointed by President Johnson, he was reappointed by President Nixon).

Streaking Continues, But Boom Being Lowered By Authorities

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Streaking spread to the trade unions yesterday but authorities warned they no longer would regard the public nudity as "fun and games."

The fad seems to have diminished on the college campuses where it began last month. The most noteworthy streaking yesterday was in Philadelphia where 10 construction workers wearing hard hats ran across the open first floor of a building project. Their coworkers and spectators 15 feet below cheered.

Police and authorities indicated, however, they are going to clamp down on the streakers.

At least 19 warrants have been issued at the University of Georgia charging public indecency.

"What started as a fun thing degenerated quickly," said the university's safety director, Edward Kassinger. "It's no longer a party when you've told a joke 600 times. It's no longer funny."

Fifty arrests have been made at Florida State University and among the accused streakers was William Seabrook Rudd, 20, son of Circuit Court Judge John Rudd of Tallahassee, Fla.

At Appalachian State University in Boone, N.C., Vice Chancellor Braxton Harris warned students that streaking was a violation of North Carolina law and will bring "immediate suspension."

Dr. Robert Kamm, president of Oklahoma State University, said yesterday that streaking places the streaker in jeopardy of misdemeanor and felony charges and protects the "pervert who needs help."

In Atlanta yesterday, James Bazeley, 21, pleaded guilty to public indecency after streaking through a hamburger restaurant and was fined $1,000 and given a 12-months sentence.

Judges in Derby, England, fined three males streakers $46 each Monday for streaking though the town Saturday. And in Dublin, Ireland, Justice C.O. Good ordered four streakers held in custody because streaking "is scandalous, disgusting and immoral and must be nipped in the bud."

Radio station KBIL at St. Louis University yesterday issued its second streaking ratings and listed the universities of Georgia and Illinois as coholders of the top spot.

If the station makes individual ratings, two women in Delta Junction, Alaska, deserve consideration for No. 1 this week. They jumped naked from a car in minus-40 degree weather and dashed through two taverns.

The act "pepped up business and created conversation," according to the proprietor of the Evergreen Inn. But the owner of the Grophy Lounge wasn't impressed.

"For two grownup women to do this is disgusting," he grumbled.

Lower Beef Prices This Week Said Only Temporary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — This will be a good week for beef bargain-hunters in many parts of the country, a supermarket industry spokesman said today. But it may be only temporary.

Clarence G. Adamy, president of the National Association of Food Chains, said in an interview that some chains began to feature "special" sale prices on a few beef cuts last week. He said he expected the price-cutting trend to go wider and deeper this week.

Earlier, a parade of farmer spokesmen and Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz had called for action by food retailers to lower beef prices. Cattlemen complained the chains hadn't given consumers the benefit of low live cattle prices that were forcing losses of $150 a head and more for producers.

Adamy, insisting the chains have not lagged unduly in passing on lower prices, said retailers began seeing reduced wholesale prices only a week ago. He said the savings will be passed on to consumers in most cases by "specialing" rather than across-the-board price reductions.

Most stores, in other words, will keep their "regular" comparatively high prices in effect for most beef cuts and will concentrate all their wholesale savings into deep slashes for a few advertised beef "specials."

Adamy said one local chain dropped sirloin steak to $1.39 a pound last week while another currently has lowered its hamburger to 85 cents a pound —far below regular prices of recent weeks.

These and similar price cuts, Adamy said, will be temporary.

The food chain official said beef supplies have piled up in a temporary glut because of a drop in consumer demand in January and disruptions caused a few weeks later by the truck strike. After this temporary supply bulge is eaten, Adam added, "we will be back to a relatively thin supply."

Court Hits A Statute On Pilots

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Where there is evidence of pilot negligence, they can be sued if non-paying passengers in private planes are injured or killed in crashes, the state Court of Appeal ruled yesterday.

The court ruled that the state's "guest statute" concerning pilots was unconstitutional, since it denied equal protection which is guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution.

Under the "guest statute," suit couldn't be filed for an injured or killed non-paying guest passenger unless it could be proved that the pilot was intoxicated or guilty of willful misconduct.

The court returned to San Mateo County Superior Court for trial a $2 million suit filed by Elva G. Ayers, whose husband, Eugene, was killed in a 1967 crash of a restored plane at Half Moon Bay Airport.

Mrs. Ayers had sued Albert G. Buscaglia of Milbrae, the pilot, and Phillip Boyle of San Francisco, co-owner of the plane.

Appellate court judges ruled that Buscaglia should be exempted from the suit, since he was not present when Buscaglia "unlawfully took Ayer up in an unlicensed aircraft."

Jail Time To Interior Decorator

The former assistant to a Tiburon interior decorator must spend 60 days in jail for embezzling $4,500 from his employer.

William Everard Barham, 45, of San Francisco, pleaded guilty last week to the offense and was sentenced by Marin Superior Court Judge Charles Read Best.

Best also placed Barham on three years' probation and ordered him to repay Patricia L. Jampolsky.

According to a probation report, Barham worked three months for Mrs. Jampolsky last summer and during that time took orders which he did not report to her.

The offense will be declared a misdemeanor if Barham completes probation, Best said.

Mask Wearers Rob Market

Two men wearing blue ski masks robbed the Stop N Go Market at 807 San Anselmo Avenue of about $100 in cash and food stamps yesterday, police said.

The pair entered the market at 1:52 a.m., pulled a blue steel revolver and ordered a clerk to lie on the floor, according to police. They fled on foot after grabbing a money bag that was placed behind a counter.

The men also wore blue sweaters and blue jeans, according to police.

Hub Woman Qualifies For Program

A San Anselmo woman, Teresa Ann Carrillo, 22, has qualified for a rehabilitation program instead of prosecution on a drug charge, but a man arrested with her will be prosecuted.

Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court Friday placed Miss Carrillo on one year's probation on condition she take part in a drug education program.

But he ordered Timothy John Blain, 23, held for a preliminary hearing March 21 on a felony marijuana possession count and a misdemeanor charge of possessing drug paraphernalia.

Blain and Miss Carrillo were arrested in January after they allegedly received a letter from Colombia containing 38 grams — a little more than an ounce — of hashish.

In the house shared by the pair, San Anselmo police reported finding several dozen "Thai sticks," a concoction of potent marijuana threaded to thin sticks.

Denounces Romance

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An earthquake jolted the central area of Los Angeles at approximately 12:35 a.m. today. The quake, a series of short, vertical, bumping motions, was reportedly also felt in the nearby San Fernando Valley.

There were no immediate reports of damage or injuries.

New FCC Look Emerging

By LOUISE SWEENEY
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

WASHINGTON — Seven people in a brown glass-walled building on M Street here decide if you will pay more for your long-distance phone calls, if your children's TV programs will be strafed with violence, if the detergent commercial you watch is more full of hot air than suds, if you will be able to have cable TV in your community, and if your minority candidate will have equal time to voice his views over the airwaves.

The seven members of the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) make decisions every day that affect every U.S. citizen's life — and right now a major change in the makeup of that commission is taking place which could have a sharp impact on communications policy affecting you over the next several years.

President Nixon has just appointed one of the FCC commissioners, Richard E. Wiley, to succeed Dean Burch as chairman of the FCC when Burch steps into his new position as counselor to the President. By the end of the year, Nixon will have left what Albert H. Kramer, president of the National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting (NCCB), calls "a deep and lasting imprint" on the nation's communication system.

By then Nixon will have appointed eight of the 16 members of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting; the already named director, deputy director, and central staff of the White House office on telecommunications policy; and virtually all of the seven members of the FCC.

Nixon's imprint will be felt beyond his incumbency, since FCC commissioners serve for seven years and his unprecedented naming of the total commission will mold this powerful regulatory agency.

Some critics are concerned about whether that imprint will benefit the public or the vast businesses, like the telephone, cable TV, and broadcasting industries, which the FCC is chartered to regulate.

"President Nixon has clearly moved the FCC in the direction of less consumer orientation as far as his appointees are concerned," says NCCB president Kramer. "The only countervailing pressures will have to come from the incipient and growing consumer movement in broadcasting."

"I expect the commission will take a sudden lurch to the right with Wiley in charge," says Tracy Westen, director of Public Communications, Inc., a citizens communication organization. "Under his leadership the FCC will be much more conservative and much more politically oriented."

Commissioner Wiley, a former Chicago lawyer and state chairman for Nixon in 1968, has been described as "a friend of the broadcasting industry." A spokesman for the industry's National Association of Broadcasters (NAB) sees it differently: "He's a friend of the industry only in the sense that he appreciates all the industries he regulates and their problems," says Grover C. Cobb, senior executive vice-president of the NAB.

The NAB reflects the view widely held in all the industries overseen by the FCC: the less regulation the better — a laissez-faire approach.

Apparently the NAB is not displeased with the naming of Wiley as FCC chairman, an appointment which, unlike those of other commissioners, is not subject to congressional confirmation.

Right now the rest of the commission is in a state of flux, with three immediate vacancies to be filled: former Commissioner Nicholas Johnson's and H. Rex Lee's posts, as well as Commissioner Wiley's. A fourth vacancy may open up this summer when Commissioner Robert E. Lee's term expires; there is talk that he would like to be reappointed, and the President may agree.

FCC law stipulates that no more than four commissioners shall be members of the same party, but right now the only Democrat on the commission is Commissioner Benjamin Hooks, a former criminal court judge from Memphis.

There are those who wonder how strong a Democratic voice he is on the commission. Prof. Stephen R. Barnett, a professor of law specializing in communications at the University of California at Berkeley, said recently at a Senate hearing on an FCC nominee: "I do not question Hooks' veracity, but I can report that if he is a Democrat, you can't tell it from the way he has been voting on the FCC. On all the issues but one — the interests of minorities — Commissioner Hooks has been a loyal follower of the broadcast industry's line . . ."

The hearing at which Professor Barnett made that statement was on President Nixon's nomination of James H. Quello to fill the Johnson seat. Quello is a retired Detroit broadcaster who is ostensibly a Democrat although he contributed $1,100 to President Nixon's reelection campaign. During the week of testimony on his nomination, critics argued against him as a former member of the industry the FCC regulates and because of what they saw as his uncertain political stripe, among other reasons.

Sources say Quello probably still has the job sewn up, as he appeared to immediately after the hearings, but that might change if further Nixon nominees at this time were open to congressional challenge on the basis of politics, industry orientation, or lack of consumer representation.

Meanwhile, there are a few names surfacing to fill those FCC openings. Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn. reportedly is pushing the Nixon nomination of Ward White, minority counsel to the communications subcommittee. White, a native of Kansas, is a Republican.

Sen. Philip A. Hart, R-Mich., rallied almost all his Michigan congressional colleagues around him several weeks ago in a bipartisan show of backing for Senator Hart's long-time friend, nominee Quello.

Several other members of Congress have favorite aides or friends they would like to see nominated for an FCC plum. And with a string of Republicans deciding not to run again in the House there are plenty of potential nominees there, too.

Apart from that, two names have surfaced recently among the possible contenders for the next FCC vacancy: Democrat Glenn Robinson, a professor of law at the University of Minnesota who also has been a consultant and adviser to the NAB; and Democrat Luther Holcomb, a Johnson Democrat from Dallas, who has been vice-chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Council since 1965 (appointed by President Johnson, he was reappointed by President Nixon).

Streaking Continues, But Boom Being Lowered By Authorities

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Streaking spread to the trade unions yesterday but authorities warned they no longer would regard the public nudity as "fun and games."

The fad seems to have diminished on the college campuses where it began last month. The most noteworthy streaking yesterday was in Philadelphia where 10 construction workers wearing hard hats ran across the open first floor of a building project. Their coworkers and spectators 15 feet below cheered.

Police and authorities indicated, however, they are going to clamp down on the streakers.

At least 19 warrants have been issued at the University of Georgia charging public indecency.

"What started as a fun thing degenerated quickly," said the university's safety director, Edward Kassinger. "It's no longer a party when you've told a joke 600 times. It's no longer funny."

Fifty arrests have been made at Florida State University and among the accused streakers was William Seabrook Rudd, 20, son of Circuit Court Judge John Rudd of Tallahassee, Fla.

At Appalachian State University in Boone, N.C., Vice Chancellor Braxton Harris warned students that streaking was a violation of North Carolina law and will bring "immediate suspension."

Dr. Robert Kamm, president of Oklahoma State University, said yesterday that streaking places the streaker in jeopardy of misdemeanor and felony charges and protects the "pervert who needs help."

In Atlanta yesterday, James Bazeley, 21, pleaded guilty to public indecency after streaking through a hamburger restaurant and was fined $1,000 and given a 12-months sentence.

Judges in Derby, England, fined three males streakers $46 each Monday for streaking though the town Saturday. And in Dublin, Ireland, Justice C.O. Good ordered four streakers held in custody because streaking "is scandalous, disgusting and immoral and must be nipped in the bud."

Radio station KBIL at St. Louis University yesterday issued its second streaking ratings and listed the universities of Georgia and Illinois as coholders of the top spot.

If the station makes individual ratings, two women in Delta Junction, Alaska, deserve consideration for No. 1 this week. They jumped naked from a car in minus-40 degree weather and dashed through two taverns.

The act "pepped up business and created conversation," according to the proprietor of the Evergreen Inn. But the owner of the Grophy Lounge wasn't impressed.

"For two grownup women to do this is disgusting," he grumbled.

Jail Time To Interior Decorator

The former assistant to a Tiburon interior decorator must spend 60 days in jail for embezzling $4,500 from his employer.

William Everard Barham, 45, of San Francisco, pleaded guilty last week to the offense and was sentenced by Marin Superior Court Judge Charles Read Best.

Best also placed Barham on three years' probation and ordered him to repay Patricia L. Jampolsky.

According to a probation report, Barham worked three months for Mrs. Jampolsky last summer and during that time took orders which he did not report to her.

The offense will be declared a misdemeanor if Barham completes probation, Best said.

Mask Wearers Rob Market

Two men wearing blue ski masks robbed the Stop N Go Market at 807 San Anselmo Avenue of about $100 in cash and food stamps yesterday, police said.

The pair entered the market at 1:52 a.m., pulled a blue steel revolver and ordered a clerk to lie on the floor, according to police. They fled on foot after grabbing a money bag that was placed behind a counter.

The men also wore blue sweaters and blue jeans, according to police.

Hub Woman Qualifies For Program

A San Anselmo woman, Teresa Ann Carrillo, 22, has qualified for a rehabilitation program instead of prosecution on a drug charge, but a man arrested with her will be prosecuted.

Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court Friday placed Miss Carrillo on one year's probation on condition she take part in a drug education program.

But he ordered Timothy John Blain, 23, held for a preliminary hearing March 21 on a felony marijuana possession count and a misdemeanor charge of possessing drug paraphernalia.

Blain and Miss Carrillo were arrested in January after they allegedly received a letter from Colombia containing 38 grams — a little more than an ounce — of hashish.

In the house shared by the pair, San Anselmo police reported finding several dozen "Thai sticks," a concoction of potent marijuana threaded to thin sticks.

Denounces Romance

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (UPI) — There is no truth to rumors that Grand Duke Henri of Luxembourg is wooing Princess Caroline, the teen-age daughter of Prince Rainier and Princess Grace of Monaco, according to a spokesman for the Principality of Monaco. The spokesman said simply, "It is not so."

Lower Beef Prices This Week Said Only Temporary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — This will be a good week for beef bargain-hunters in many parts of the country, a supermarket industry spokesman said today. But it may be only temporary.

Clarence G. Adamy, president of the National Association of Food Chains, said in an interview that some chains began to feature "special" sale prices on a few beef cuts last week. He said he expected the price-cutting trend to go wider and deeper this week.

Earlier, a parade of farmer spokesmen and Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz had called for action by food retailers to lower beef prices. Cattlemen complained the chains hadn't given consumers the benefit of low live cattle prices that were forcing losses of $150 a head and more for producers.

Adamy, insisting the chains have not lagged unduly in passing on lower prices, said retailers began seeing reduced wholesale prices only a week ago. He said the savings will be passed on to consumers in most cases by "specialing" rather than across-the-board price reductions.

Los Angeles Area Rattled By Quake

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An earthquake jolted the central area of Los Angeles at approximately 12:35 a.m. today. The quake, a series of short, vertical, bumping motions, was reportedly also felt in the nearby San Fernando Valley.

There were no immediate reports of damage or injuries.

Court Hits A Statute On Pilots

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Where there is evidence of pilot negligence, they can be sued if non-paying passengers in private planes are injured or killed in crashes, the state Court of Appeal ruled yesterday.

The court ruled that the state's "guest statute" concerning pilots was unconstitutional, since it denied equal protection which is guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution.

Under the "guest statute," suit couldn't be filed for an injured or killed non-paying guest passenger unless it could be proved that the pilot was intoxicated or guilty of willful misconduct.

The court returned to San Mateo County Superior Court for trial a $2 million suit filed by Elva G. Ayers, whose husband, Eugene, was killed in a 1967 crash of a restored plane at Half Moon Bay Airport.

Mrs. Ayers had sued Albert G. Buscaglia of Milbrae, the pilot, and Phillip Boyle of San Francisco, co-owner of the plane.

Appellate court judges ruled that Buscaglia should be exempted from the suit, since he was not present when Buscaglia "unlawfully took Ayer up in an unlicensed aircraft."

Sears Says 'No' To Any 'Fixing'

Questioned by Mitchell's attorney, Peter Fleming Jr, Sears said he knew quite well what the word "fix" means in the common vernacular.

"Did you attempt to fix the Vesco case with Mr. Mitchell?"

"No, Sir."

"Did you ever ask Mr. Mitchell to fix the Vesco case?"

"Never at any time," Sears replied.

It was the sixth day on the witness stand for the tall, bald New Jersey Republican politician, who had been a good friend of Mitchell when the latter was attorney general in the Nixon administration and later when Mitchell was chairman of the Nixon 1972 reelection campaign.

Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans are on trial in federal court on charges of attempting to impede a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation of Vesco in exchange for his $200,000 cash contribution to the Nixon campaign.

Sears in 1972 headed the New Jersey Committee for the Reelection of the President and was a corporation lawyer and board member for financier Robert L. Vesco, a fugitive in this case.

Mitchell and Stans are charged with trying to impede a federal investigation of Vesco in exchange for his secret $200,000 cash contribution to the 1972 Nixon campaign, which Mitchell chaired. Stans was finance chairman.

Sears testified on direct examination Friday that by Feb. 14 or 15, 1973—less than a year after his April campaign gift—Vesco had become so irksome to Mitchell that Mitchell called him a petty thief.

The Securities and Exchange Commission had charged Vesco and others on Nov. 27, 1972, of looting $224 million from overseas mutual funds.

Sears testified he told Mitchell in February that "the house was falling apart" at Vesco's International Controls Corp. (ICC), that "every discussion was a confrontation, every meeting a dog fight" between Vesco and his board chairman, Laurence Richardson.

Sears said Vesco lied to him about not being able to pay for legal fees and there "was a real question in my mind as to his motives."

Sears said he found out that on the loan that Vesco arranged for him when he first went to work—on which Sears paid interest monthly out of his salary—Vesco had juggled ICC assets so that the interest was paid by the corporation rather than Vesco.

"I told Mr. Mitchell that I had paid back every cent out of my own pocket and Vesco had cashed the checks for himself," Sears said.

"And Mr. Mitchell said to me, 'Why that bastard is nothing but a petty thief,' and I had to agree."

A memo allegedly sent by Vesco in November 1972, to President Nixon's older brother Donald—but never delivered to Donald, according to Sears—is alleged by the indictment to threaten disclosure of the secret contribution unless the SEC dropped legal proceedings against Vesco.

When read to the jury by Prosecutor John R. Wing, the "threat" seemed quite subtle. One part of the memo said that in view of subpoenas to attorneys by the SEC, and other legal means, "it is probable that the facts will become known unless the investigation by the SEC is stopped promptly."

Martha Uses TV Show To Say White House Framed Husband

NEW YORK (UPI) — Martha Mitchell said today that her husband, on trial in an influence peddling case, was framed by the White House.

"I've come to the conclusion that Mitchell was framed. I think that I can almost document it," she said in a live television interview with Barbara Walters of the NBC "Today" show. "This is not for the Senate Watergate Committee ... they missed their chance a long time ago. I dropped hints all over, I told everybody, but nobody came to get me ... nobody bothered to call."

Miss Walters said Mrs. Mitchell, separated since last year from John N. Mitchell, the former attorney general in President Nixon's cabinet, told her she called to ask to appear on the show in order to clear up "certain misconceptions." On the air, however, Mrs. Mitchell was vague about specifics.

Asked specifically about a mysterious campaign book she claimed to have seen which outlined various political "dirty tricks" Mrs. Mitchell said only that she was too emotionally involved to appear as a witness before any investigating group.

"I am now so confused by what I've read, by all I've seen, that I couldn't be a witness in the slightest ..." she said. "I don't know why I didn't realize the meaning of what was going on ... I was brainwashed, I was used, but at the time I was perfectly willing to be used."

Asked if she felt President Nixon should be impeached, she said, "I have no idea whether the President should be impeached — I have no idea." She also said she had "no idea" why her husband left her, but vowed to explain it all in a book.

"He doesn't talk to me," she said. "I don't know — it's very hard to say. I have to put myself back into a state of where I'm not so heavily involved."

Development Agency Idea Rejected

Plans for an advisory review agency to watchdog future developments which affect more than one city were rejected last night by the Corte Madera Planning Commission.

Commissioners unanimously recommended that the town council not accept the City-County Planning Council of Marin proposal for the agency, according to William G. McBride, town zoning administrator.

"They were concerned that it doesn't detail how the agency will be financed and who will provide staff services," McBride said.

He said commissioners also thought the review agency will only "add another layer of government."

Such an agency would review plans within a city's limits when the project was deemed to have significant impact on surrounding areas, but its findings would be merely advisory, not mandatory.

The Corte Madera Planning Commission also:

MEMBER — Seated new member Robert L. Dunn.

SCHOOL — Approved increased enrollment from 50 to 80 students for Marin Montessori School, 5200 Paradise Drive.

RESTAURANT — Approved plans for a 6619-square-foot Tudor-style restaurant at 100 Nellen Avenue by S. and A. Leasing Corp.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to Saturday at 9 a.m. in town hall to continue hearings on the housing element of the proposed Corte Madera general plan.

Dinner To Open Annual Appeal

The annual Southern Sonoma United Jewish Appeal will begin at 7 p.m. Saturday with a catered dinner at the Petaluma Jewish Community Center, 740 Western Avenue.

Rabbi Jacob Weinstein of San Francisco, founding editor of "Jewish Frontier," will address the gathering.

Vandalism In Parks Will Be Discussed

The San Rafael Parks and Recreation Commission will discuss vandalism in city parks when it meets at 8 p.m. tomorrow in city hall.

Commissioners will also consider expansion of the agency from five to seven members.

Member Of Recruitment Panel Quits

A Redwood High School teacher has quit the Tamalpais High School District committee which investigates charges that women have not been recruited for district jobs and claimed the district has no real intention of doing any recruiting.

In her letter to the district board, which will discuss the matter at Monday's meeting, the teacher, Patricia Sachsman, also said administrators not only have no such intention, they are actually thwarting recruitment.

In November, the board adopted an "affirmative action" policy which requires that women and minority members be sought as applicants for district jobs. Mrs. Sachsman was subsequently appointed to a seven-member committee which explores violations of the policy.

"It seems clear to me that neither the personnel office, the superintendent nor the board of trustees has any real intention of pursuing an affirmative action policy other than on paper," she said. "And any true redress on minority grievances will have to have the force of the federal government and the courts behind it in order to be effective."

Sears Says 'No' To Any 'Fixing'

Questioned by Mitchell's attorney, Peter Fleming Jr, Sears said he knew quite well what the word "fix" means in the common vernacular.

"Did you attempt to fix the Vesco case with Mr. Mitchell?"

"No, Sir."

"Did you ever ask Mr. Mitchell to fix the Vesco case?"

"Never at any time," Sears replied.

It was the sixth day on the witness stand for the tall, bald New Jersey Republican politician, who had been a good friend of Mitchell when the latter was attorney general in the Nixon administration and later when Mitchell was chairman of the Nixon 1972 reelection campaign.

Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans are on trial in federal court on charges of attempting to impede a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation of Vesco in exchange for his $200,000 cash contribution to the Nixon campaign.

Sears in 1972 headed the New Jersey Committee for the Reelection of the President and was a corporation lawyer and board member for financier Robert L. Vesco, a fugitive in this case.

Mitchell and Stans are charged with trying to impede a federal investigation of Vesco in exchange for his secret $200,000 cash contribution to the 1972 Nixon campaign, which Mitchell chaired. Stans was finance chairman.

Sears testified on direct examination Friday that by Feb. 14 or 15, 1973—less than a year after his April campaign gift—Vesco had become so irksome to Mitchell that Mitchell called him a petty thief.

The Securities and Exchange Commission had charged Vesco and others on Nov. 27, 1972, of looting $224 million from overseas mutual funds.

TAR GAL SWIMMERS

'Just One Of The Guys'

By RON LENT

"We are just one of the guys!"

This is the belief shared by four College of Marin coeds who are bonafide members of the College of Marin swim team. Kristen Peterman, Lisa Benedetti, Carolyn Blewett and Carline Hurst have competed in meets for the first time this year. They hope to participate in Camino Norte Conference Championships April 4-6.

And why not? They're accepted by the league — and most important — by their teammates. Marin has won one of four meets.

"The guys used to joke about it at first. They would say 'Hey, we're swimming in a liberated pool,'" said Tar coach Bob Justice. "The guys also have to watch their language.

"The girls work hard but at their own pace. They try to keep up in practice. They show up every afternoon. They're a cheery bunch."

They are not only cheery; they're provocative. Examples:

Kristen Peterman, 19, 5-9, 130, special education, soph;

Lisa Benedetti, 17, 5-5, 128, nursing, freshman; and

Carline Hurst, 36, 5-4, 125, general education.

CARLINE HURST

"She's on the team for conditioning purposes. She can't officially compete, because she already has graduated from college (San Jose State).

Carline said: "They call me mom, because I'm from another generation. I'm just a tiny bit self conscious about my age.

"This is the first time I've been on a team, but it's great. With Bob, sportsmanship is very important. He's brave in letting us take part." Hurst is a former Delta airline stewardess. While Justice can be understanding, he also can be demanding, as Blewett can attest.

CAROLYN BLEWETT

"He sometimes says things to get us mad. That makes us work twice as hard." Carolyn enjoys the competitiveness. She swam in Amateur Athletic Union competition in Piedmont, but is now pointing to the conference competition.

Blewett admitted that "it was like a joke at first. But after the first meet, we wanted to compete at their (male teammates') level. When we competed in Monterey (Feb. 22 opener), we got lapped in the relays. And we couldn't do the events in order." The Monterey event was memorable also for Lisa.

LISA BENEDETTI

"In Monterey, we woke the guys up on Saturday morning. We knocked on their (motel) door politely. I don't think they liked that," she laughed.

Benedetti noted that "We (girls) waited in the gas lines in Cabrillo (during the Northern California Relays Feb. 23). Somebody had to get our vans filled if we were going to get home. So when we weren't swimming, that's where we were."

Regarding her male mates, Lisa said "If the girl is fairly good, the guys will work hard. After all, it's bad for the ego to be beaten by a girl."

Lisa's male rivals have had crushed egos, because she placed third in the 1,000-yard freestyle in Monterey and in Santa Rosa Feb. 26 against the surprised Bear Cubs. She is the only Marin girl to place. Lisa once swam for the Marin Aquatic Club, and so did Kristen Peterman.

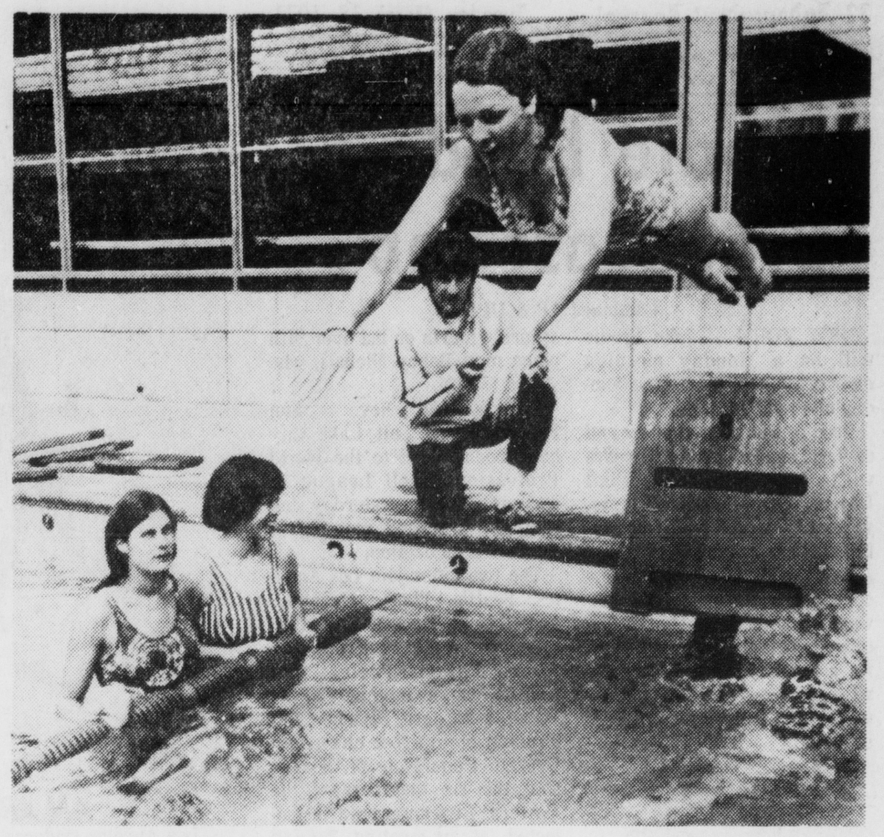

KRISTEN PETERMAN

Justice coached Kristen "eight years ago for the old San Rafael Swim Club," he said. The coach also mentioned another incident which Kirsten elaborated on.

"We were locked in by the custodian in Monterey. We were taking our time getting dressed after swimming. In practice, we were always out first; so we figured there was no need to rush. When we finally did come out, the guys were mad at us."

The anger did not last long, because the gals are thoughtful. "We bring brownies to them. They tease us about taking care of them," said Kristen.

The men had better take care of themselves, because the Tar mermaids are determined to swim up to their level.

Garner Deserving Of Long Beach Trip

There's a drive on at College of Marin to raise $300 to send Wil Garner to Long Beach this weekend to try out for a junior college all-star basketball team.

I hope that between the school's student body, the Block M Club and the basketball fans who have followed the Tars, the money is raised. For all the thrills and entertainment Garner has provided on the Tars' court the past two years, his chance at all-star play is well deserved.

Garner is one of 20 J.C. players in the state nominated for the California Junior College Association team to play in the National Amateur Athletic Union tourney March 21-24 in Baton Rouge, La. Of the 20 nominated players, 10 will be chosen to the team by coaches Don Reid of Merced J.C. and Barney Newlee of Chaffey College after this weekend's tryouts.

It would be very surprising if Garner didn't make the team since he has been all-state two years in a row. He is truly one of the premier forwards in junior college basketball. But he will have to get to Long Beach for the tryouts, and that is where the $300 comes in.

The Camino Norte Conference (of which Garner has been the basketball MVP two straight years) helps pay some of the expenses, but not all, of the trip to Long Beach. The school has to come up with the remainder.

Two years ago, Marin guard Joe Smith was nominated to the J.C. all-star team and the money was raised to send him to the tryouts. It was Smith's school scoring records which were shattered by Garner this year.

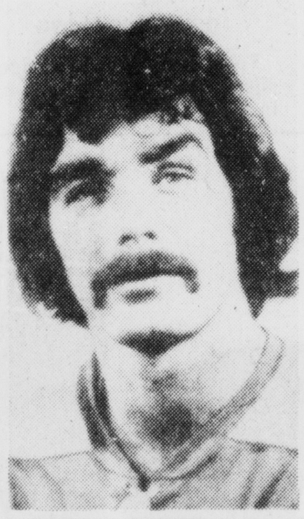

Marin coach John Panagakis is heading the drive to raise the expense money. If you want to help, make the checks payable to the Block M Club and send them to College of Marin.

ODDS AND ENDS: Everybody loves a parade, and disc jockey Frank Dill of San Rafael is no exception. But to have a parade in your honor is something else. The parade for Dill is a result of a winning radio bet from co-worker Mike Cleary and will be March 23 in Pleasanton. And to make the thing more pleasant, Dill will get some past and present athletes to march with him — Leo Nomellini, Ben Davidson, Gene Upshaw and Carol Doda. I know about the first three but is athletic Carol past or present?

WINNING HONORABLE MENTION on the West Coast Athletic Conference all-star team was University of San Francisco guard John Boro, no easy thing when you consider the other guard on the USF team is everybody's No. 1 pick, Phil Smith. Boro, who dribbled across the Marin County courts when he was a prep at Redwood High, was named to the official WCAC team, picked by the coaches, but failed to win honorable mention on the all-star team picked by the conference players.

IT WILL BE A MIGHTY long trip for the Hawaii Islanders from Honolulu to New York for the National Invitational Tournament starting Saturday. The Islanders' assistant coach, Jim Halm, and their reserve forward, Steve McGee, who both did their high school playing at Redwood, won't have a chance to stop off at home in Marin County on their way to the Big Apple and Madison Square Garden.

A UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL wire report out of Cocoa, Fla., about the Houston Astros' chances in the National League West this year says one of their problems will be to replace Jim Wynn, rightfielder traded to the Dodgers for pitcher Claude Osteen. The story listed four young players trying for the job, but not mentioned was minor leaguer John Dolinsek, former Novato athlete who expected to get a shot at the big club this year.

DEREK BANISHED — Controversial Boston Bruins' center Derek Sanderson yesterday was suspended for the duration of the season. The National Hockey League club announced that Sanderson's continuous disputes with coach Bep Guidolin were the chief reason. Sanderson, who fought with teammate Terry O'Reilly Sunday in Oakland following a 6-2 loss to California, is not expected to return to the Bruins next season.

Warriors Are Hurting In Rematch

Rick Barry scored 40 points last night to lead the Warriors to a 120-108 win over the Pistons in a game inserted in the schedule to make up for the second game of the National Basketball Association season, which was called off because the floor was too oily.

Golden State won it even though it had to play without center Nate Thurmond, who not only is missing the current road trip with foot problems but Sunday checked into a hospital to rest the foot.

Detroit big man Bob Lanier also was taken to the hospital as a precautionary measure after he injured his left eye in the first half last night. Doctors said the injury appeared superficial and he probably would be able to play tonight.

The Warriors, who have repeatedly blown huge leads this season, seemed to be engaged in another collapse when they built up an 86-63 lead in the third quarter only to see the Lanier-less Pistons run off a 22-6 splurge and close to within 92-85 at the start of the last stanza.

But Cazzie Russell, Jeff Mullins and Barry hit quick buckets to make it 98-85 and the Pistons could not get close again. Mullins, shaking off his slump of late, added 27 points.

The win got the Warriors a full game up on the Lakers. Each team has won 41, but the Warriors have dropped 30 and the Lakers 32.

GOLDEN STATE (120) —Barry 18 4-4 40, Lee 1 0-0 2, G. Johnson 4 2-3 10, Mullins 12 3-4 27, Beard 4 5-6 13, Barnett 6 0-0 12, Russell 5 0-0 10, Dickey 3 0-0 6, Totals 53 14-17 120.

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

What's Good For Game Good For Aaron

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

At least that's the view taken by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn who has ordered the Atlanta slugger to play in at least two of the three games in the Braves' season-opening series in Cincinnati.

HANK AARON
Accepts edict

Aaron, needing only two home runs to surpass Babe Ruth's career record of 714, caused an outcry from baseball's purists, and most fans in general, when he agreed with Braves chairman Bill Bartholomay to sit out the series against the Reds to make his bid for Ruth's mark at home in Atlanta where the Braves play 11 games after opening in Cincinnati.

"I have had a number of discussions with Bill Bartholomay about his February announcement regarding Henry Aaron," said Kuhn in a statement released by his New York office. "Although he has advanced some substantial arguments in support of his announcement he has not been able to persuade me that the procedure he wishes to follow is good for baseball.

"As a result I have advised him that I am disapproving the announcement and that, barring disability, I will expect the Braves to use Henry Aaron in the opening series in Cincinnati in accordance with the pattern of his use in 1973 when he started approximately two of every three Braves' games."

"He's the commissioner I suppose and I have to abide by his rules," said Aaron last night at West Palm Beach, Fla., the site of the Braves' spring training quarters. "I've said all I can say about it, but I may have something to say later."

Aaron, when questioned during the day prior to Kuhn's statement, intimated he expected just the sort of ruling handed down by Kuhn.

Aaron struck out in a pinch hitting appearance against the New York Yankees yesterday but it hardly mattered as four Brave pitchers, Ron Reed, Dave Cheadle, Joe Grzenda and Jamie Easterly combined to nohit the Yanks in Atlanta's 4-0 triumph. Rookie outfielder Rowland Office slammed a two-run homer.

Champion Carolina State Coach Ecstatic

NEW YORK (UPI) — There's a fanaticism associated with Atlantic Coast Conference basketball that must be experienced to be understood.

Consequently, when North Carolina State Coach Norman Sloan reacts to his Wolfpack team being named the major college basketball national champion by United Press International's Board of Coaches with "these past two years have been the happiest we've ever known," it's not just another quarter-pound of baloney.

If ACC games take on the appearance of a war, it's not just a war—it's a crusade.

TAR GAL SWIMMERS

'Just One Of The Guys'

By RON LENT

"We are just one of the guys!"

This is the belief shared by four College of Marin coeds who are bonafide members of the College of Marin swim team. Kristen Peterman, Lisa Benedetti, Carolyn Blewett and Carline Hurst have competed in meets for the first time this year. They hope to participate in Camino Norte Conference Championships April 4-6.

And why not? They're accepted by the league — and most important — by their teammates. Marin has won one of four meets.

"The guys used to joke about it at first. They would say 'Hey, we're swimming in a liberated pool,'" said Tar coach Bob Justice. "The guys also have to watch their language.

"The girls work hard but at their own pace. They try to keep up in practice. They show up every afternoon. They're a cheery bunch."

They are not only cheery; they're provocative. Examples:

Kristen Peterman, 19, 5-9, 130, special education, soph;

Lisa Benedetti, 17, 5-5, 128, nursing, freshman; and

Carline Hurst, 36, 5-4, 125, general education.

CARLINE HURST

"She's on the team for conditioning purposes. She can't officially compete, because she already has graduated from college (San Jose State).

Carline said: "They call me mom, because I'm from another generation. I'm just a tiny bit self conscious about my age.

"This is the first time I've been on a team, but it's great. With Bob, sportsmanship is very important. He's brave in letting us take part." Hurst is a former Delta airline stewardess. While Justice can be understanding, he also can be demanding, as Blewett can attest.

CAROLYN BLEWETT

"He sometimes says things to get us mad. That makes us work twice as hard." Carolyn enjoys the competitiveness. She swam in Amateur Athletic Union competition in Piedmont, but is now pointing to the conference competition.

Blewett admitted that "it was like a joke at first. But after the first meet, we wanted to compete at their (male teammates') level. When we competed in Monterey (Feb. 22 opener), we got lapped in the relays. And we couldn't do the events in order." The Monterey event was memorable also for Lisa.

LISA BENEDETTI

"In Monterey, we woke the guys up on Saturday morning. We knocked on their (motel) door politely. I don't think they liked that," she laughed.

Benedetti noted that "We (girls) waited in the gas lines in Cabrillo (during the Northern California Relays Feb. 23). Somebody had to get our vans filled if we were going to get home. So when we weren't swimming, that's where we were."

Regarding her male mates, Lisa said "If the girl is fairly good, the guys will work hard. After all, it's bad for the ego to be beaten by a girl."

Lisa's male rivals have had crushed egos, because she placed third in the 1,000-yard freestyle in Monterey and in Santa Rosa Feb. 26 against the surprised Bear Cubs. She is the only Marin girl to place. Lisa once swam for the Marin Aquatic Club, and so did Kristen Peterman.

KRISTEN PETERMAN

Justice coached Kristen "eight years ago for the old San Rafael Swim Club," he said. The coach also mentioned another incident which Kirsten elaborated on.

"We were locked in by the custodian in Monterey. We were taking our time getting dressed after swimming. In practice, we were always out first; so we figured there was no need to rush. When we finally did come out, the guys were mad at us."

The anger did not last long, because the gals are thoughtful. "We bring brownies to them. They tease us about taking care of them," said Kristen.

The men had better take care of themselves, because the Tar mermaids are determined to swim up to their level.

There's a drive on at College of Marin to raise $300 to send Wil Garner to Long Beach this weekend to try out for a junior college all-star basketball team.

I hope that between the school's student body, the Block M Club and the basketball fans who have followed the Tars, the money is raised. For all the thrills and entertainment Garner has provided on the Tars' court the past two years, his chance at all-star play is well deserved.

Garner is one of 20 J.C. players in the state nominated for the California Junior College Association team to play in the National Amateur Athletic Union tourney March 21-24 in Baton Rouge, La. Of the 20 nominated players, 10 will be chosen to the team by coaches Don Reid of Merced J.C. and Barney Newlee of Chaffey College after this weekend's tryouts.

It would be very surprising if Garner didn't make the team since he has been all-state two years in a row. He is truly one of the premier forwards in junior college basketball. But he will have to get to Long Beach for the tryouts, and that is where the $300 comes in.

The Camino Norte Conference (of which Garner has been the basketball MVP two straight years) helps pay some of the expenses, but not all, of the trip to Long Beach. The school has to come up with the remainder.

Two years ago, Marin guard Joe Smith was nominated to the J.C. all-star team and the money was raised to send him to the tryouts. It was Smith's school scoring records which were shattered by Garner this year.

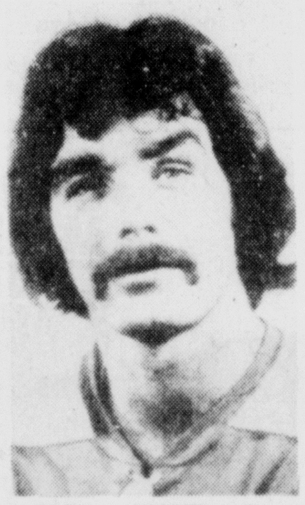

Marin coach John Panagakis is heading the drive to raise the expense money. If you want to help, make the checks payable to the Block M Club and send them to College of Marin.

ODDS AND ENDS: Everybody loves a parade, and disc jockey Frank Dill of San Rafael is no exception. But to have a parade in your honor is something else. The parade for Dill is a result of a winning radio bet from co-worker Mike Cleary and will be March 23 in Pleasanton. And to make the thing more pleasant, Dill will get some past and present athletes to march with him — Leo Nomellini, Ben Davidson, Gene Upshaw and Carol Doda. I know about the first three but is athletic Carol past or present?

WINNING HONORABLE MENTION on the West Coast Athletic Conference all-star team was University of San Francisco guard John Boro, no easy thing when you consider the other guard on the USF team is everybody's No. 1 pick, Phil Smith. Boro, who dribbled across the Marin County courts when he was a prep at Redwood High, was named to the official WCAC team, picked by the coaches, but failed to win honorable mention on the all-star team picked by the conference players.

IT WILL BE A MIGHTY long trip for the Hawaii Islanders from Honolulu to New York for the National Invitational Tournament starting Saturday. The Islanders' assistant coach, Jim Halm, and their reserve forward, Steve McGee, who both did their high school playing at Redwood, won't have a chance to stop off at home in Marin County on their way to the Big Apple and Madison Square Garden.

A UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL wire report out of Cocoa, Fla., about the Houston Astros' chances in the National League West this year says one of their problems will be to replace Jim Wynn, rightfielder traded to the Dodgers for pitcher Claude Osteen. The story listed four young players trying for the job, but not mentioned was minor leaguer John Dolinsek, former Novato athlete who expected to get a shot at the big club this year.

DEREK BANISHED — Controversial Boston Bruins' center Derek Sanderson yesterday was suspended for the duration of the season. The National Hockey League club announced that Sanderson's continuous disputes with coach Bep Guidolin were the chief reason. Sanderson, who fought with teammate Terry O'Reilly Sunday in Oakland following a 6-2 loss to California, is not expected to return to the Bruins next season.

Warriors Are Hurting In Rematch

Rick Barry scored 40 points last night to lead the Warriors to a 120-108 win over the Pistons in a game inserted in the schedule to make up for the second game of the National Basketball Association season, which was called off because the floor was too oily.

Golden State won it even though it had to play without center Nate Thurmond, who not only is missing the current road trip with foot problems but Sunday checked into a hospital to rest the foot.

Detroit big man Bob Lanier also was taken to the hospital as a precautionary measure after he injured his left eye in the first half last night. Doctors said the injury appeared superficial and he probably would be able to play tonight.

The Warriors, who have repeatedly blown huge leads this season, seemed to be engaged in another collapse when they built up an 86-63 lead in the third quarter only to see the Lanier-less Pistons run off a 22-6 splurge and close to within 92-85 at the start of the last stanza.

But Cazzie Russell, Jeff Mullins and Barry hit quick buckets to make it 98-85 and the Pistons could not get close again. Mullins, shaking off his slump of late, added 27 points.

The win got the Warriors a full game up on the Lakers. Each team has won 41, but the Warriors have dropped 30 and the Lakers 32.

GOLDEN STATE (120) —Barry 18 4-4 40, Lee 1 0-0 2, G. Johnson 4 2-3 10, Mullins 12 3-4 27, Beard 4 5-6 13, Barnett 6 0-0 12, Russell 5 0-0 10, Dickey 3 0-0 6, Totals 53 14-17 120.

What's Good For Game Good For Aaron

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

At least that's the view taken by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn who has ordered the Atlanta slugger to play in at least two of the three games in the Braves' season-opening series in Cincinnati.

HANK AARON
Accepts edict

Aaron, needing only two home runs to surpass Babe Ruth's career record of 714, caused an outcry from baseball's purists, and most fans in general, when he agreed with Braves chairman Bill Bartholomay to sit out the series against the Reds to make his bid for Ruth's mark at home in Atlanta where the Braves play 11 games after opening in Cincinnati.

"I have had a number of discussions with Bill Bartholomay about his February announcement regarding Henry Aaron," said Kuhn in a statement released by his New York office. "Although he has advanced some substantial arguments in support of his announcement he has not been able to persuade me that the procedure he wishes to follow is good for baseball.

"As a result I have advised him that I am disapproving the announcement and that, barring disability, I will expect the Braves to use Henry Aaron in the opening series in Cincinnati in accordance with the pattern of his use in 1973 when he started approximately two of every three Braves' games."

"He's the commissioner I suppose and I have to abide by his rules," said Aaron last night at West Palm Beach, Fla., the site of the Braves' spring training quarters. "I've said all I can say about it, but I may have something to say later."

Aaron, when questioned during the day prior to Kuhn's statement, intimated he expected just the sort of ruling handed down by Kuhn.

Aaron struck out in a pinch hitting appearance against the New York Yankees yesterday but it hardly mattered as four Brave pitchers, Ron Reed, Dave Cheadle, Joe Grzenda and Jamie Easterly combined to nohit the Yanks in Atlanta's 4-0 triumph. Rookie outfielder Rowland Office slammed a two-run homer.

Champion Carolina State Coach Ecstatic

NEW YORK (UPI) — There's a fanaticism associated with Atlantic Coast Conference basketball that must be experienced to be understood.

Consequently, when North Carolina State Coach Norman Sloan reacts to his Wolfpack team being named the major college basketball national champion by United Press International's Board of Coaches with "these past two years have been the happiest we've ever known," it's not just another quarter-pound of baloney.

UCLA Wins Pac-8 Statistic Titles

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

UCLA's 1974 Pacific-8 championship basketball team is the first to win all the league's statistical titles.

The Bruins scored 76.4 points per conference game and allowed 58.4 for a difference of 18 per contest. They hit 50.3 per cent from the field, 73.6 per cent from the free throw line and averaged 10.9 rebounds per contest more than their opposition, final figures showed today.

The individual races did not reflect the Bruins' superiority.

Ron Lee of Oregon was the conference scoring champ with 269 points in 14 games for a 19.2 average. Rich Kelley of Stanford (18.5) and Bill Walton of UCLA (18.3) were next although when all games are considered Walton leads at 19.3 with Lee at 18.9 and Kelley at 18.2.

Walton topped the conference in rebounds (14.4) and field goal accuracy (.694) while Dan Anderson of USC led free throw shooters at .891.

The All America UCLA center set marks as a soph with 239 rebounds and a 17.1 average, and this year's field goal accuracy mark also set a conference record. His fourth mark was the career rebounding average of 16.0.

Meanwhile, the West Coast Athletic Conference named Seattle guard Frank Oleynick, who led the league in scoring, as its Player of the Year.

Joining him on the all-league team were Phil Smith and Kevin Restani of champion San Francisco, Bob Florence of Nevada-Las Vegas and Jim Padgett of Nevada-Reno.

Former Brazilian Olympic star Marcos Leite, now playing with Pepperdine, headed the second team, which also included Jimmy Baker of Las Vegas, Maurice Harper of St. Mary's, Eric Fernsten of USF and Dave Webber of Nevada-Reno.

In other Coast cage developments, UCLA wound up second in the final UPI national ratings. The Bruins, who overwhlmed USC 82-52 last Saturday, moved past the Notre Dame team they split two games with during the season but finished nine points back of the North Carolina State team whose lone loss was to the Bruins.

McVea To WFL Wheels

DETROIT (UPI) — The Detroit Wheels of the new World Football League today announced the signing of six-year National Football League veteran Warren McVea, who played last season with the Kansas City Chiefs.

Wheels Coach Danny Boisture called the signing of McVea, 27, a running back and kickoff returner, "probably the biggest signing to date for the Wheels."

McVea, a 5-10, 190-pounder who played at the University of Houston, was signed as a free agent. He was released by the Chiefs at the end of last season.

"McVea gives us the broken field runner we need," said Boisture. "He's the type of running back that is also a great crowd pleaser."

He began his pro career at Cincinnati and was traded to the Kansas City Chiefs in 1969. His 80-yard touchdown run in 1969 tied a Kansas City record which still holds.

Angels' Pitcher Succumbs

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Bruce Heinbechner, a 23-year-old pitcher struggling to earn a spot in the California bullpen, was killed late Sunday night in a head-on traffic accident near the Angels' spring training camp here.

Heinbechner, a 6-foot-1, 200-pound left-hander who was scheduled to work in the Angels' exhibition game against Arizona State last night, was crushed when his sports car veered across the center line and smashed into another vehicle. The accident occurred as Heinbechner, of Arleta, Calif., was returning to the hotel where the team was staying.

"It is a terribly tragic loss for the family," said Angels' General Manager Harry Dalton. "We feel hopelessly frustrated. We watched him grow up in our system. He was an outstanding young man and a fine prospect."

The driver of the other car, Kathy Jean Carroll, 21, of Cathedral City, suffered facial lacerations, fractures of both arms and possible internal injuries. Police did not know why Heinbechner's car crossed the center line.

MADDOX, MATTHEWS

Miffed, But Not Bitter

By JACK HANLEY

PHOENIX — Neither Gary Maddox nor Gary Matthews looked kindly on publication of details of their 1974 salary negotiations. Indeed, the two M's of the Giants plainly were miffed when Jerry Donovan, Horace Stoneham's contract negotiator, disclosed the details and said so when they reported for spring training.

However, they declared they were not bitter. Both received substantial raises but not as much as they tried for. Maddox wound up with $46,000. He made $25,000 last year. Matthews would up with $35,000. He made $17,000 plus a $5,000 bonus, last season when he was National League Rookie of the Year.

When contract negotiations stalled on March 1, Donovan disclosed that Maddox originally asked for $65,000. Maddox reduced that to $52,000 on March 1 and told Donovan that he would not go lower. Donovan stayed with the original $45,000 figure the Giants offered Maddox.

On March 1, Donovan also disclosed Matthews' original 1974 salary goal as $44,000, double his salary-bonus total of $22,000 last season. Matthews reduced that to $40,000 on March 1 and told Donovan that was his lowest figure. Donovan stayed with the original $34,000 the Giants offered Matthews, double his 1973 salary of $17,000.

Late in the afternoon of March 1, Donovan received a telephone call from John Dranichik who said he was representing the two ball players as their agent. Dranichik said Maddox was now willing to take $51,000, Matthews $39,000. Donovan told Dranichik they would have to lower their sights still further.

On March 4 Dranichik and Donovan reached agreement on Matthews' contract for $35,000. On March 6 they agreed on a $46,000 contract for Maddox.

Donovan declared that if Dranichik had been in the picture prior to March 1, the negotiations probably would have been concluded long before they actually were.

Dranichik told Donovan when they reached agreement on both contracts that Maddox and Matthews did not want their salaries made public. Donovan did not announce the salaries.

But the precise figures became known later. Maddox pinpointed his own 1974 salary at $46,000.

Donovan clearly was the winner in the negotiations but he said he didn't feel like one.

"I don't want to be known as a winner or a loser in negotiations," said Donovan. "All I want to do is be fair to both our players and Mr. Stoneham.

"Matthews, in his original figure, wanted more in his second year than Bobby Bonds was paid as a sophomore. Bonds made $35,000 in his second year.

"Maddox would become the quickest $100,000 player in the history of baseball if we agreed to doubling his salary after each season.

"I think we were fair to Maddox and Matthews. In good conscience I couldn't recommend to Horace Stoneham that we give in to Maddox and Matthews. Mr. Stoneham is not cheap with his ball players."

Yates Replaces Memphis State's Bartow As Coach

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Memphis State University, anxious to keep resigned coach Gene Bartow from luring basketball recruits off to Illinois, today named assistant Wayne Yates to replace Bartow as head coach.

Yates, a handsome, 6-8 former Memphis State star and National Basketball Association player, said he would work to carry on the winning tradition of Bartow, who took Memphis State to a losing National Collegiate Athletic Association final against UCLA a year ago.

"With the great success brought by Gene Bartow, it was very important that we maintain the continuity of the past four years," said MSU president Dr. Billy M. Jones.

UCLA Wins Pac-8 Statistic Titles

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

UCLA's 1974 Pacific-8 championship basketball team is the first to win all the league's statistical titles.

The Bruins scored 76.4 points per conference game and allowed 58.4 for a difference of 18 per contest. They hit 50.3 per cent from the field, 73.6 per cent from the free throw line and averaged 10.9 rebounds per contest more than their opposition, final figures showed today.

The individual races did not reflect the Bruins' superiority.

Ron Lee of Oregon was the conference scoring champ with 269 points in 14 games for a 19.2 average. Rich Kelley of Stanford (18.5) and Bill Walton of UCLA (18.3) were next although when all games are considered Walton leads at 19.3 with Lee at 18.9 and Kelley at 18.2.

The All America UCLA center set marks as a soph with 239 rebounds and a 17.1 average, and this year's field goal accuracy mark also set a conference record. His fourth mark was the career rebounding average of 16.0.

Meanwhile, the West Coast Athletic Conference named Seattle guard Frank Oleynick, who led the league in scoring, as its Player of the Year.

Joining him on the all-league team were Phil Smith and Kevin Restani of champion San Francisco, Bob Florence of Nevada-Las Vegas and Jim Padgett of Nevada-Reno.

Former Brazilian Olympic star Marcos Leite, now playing with Pepperdine, headed the second team, which also included Jimmy Baker of Las Vegas, Maurice Harper of St. Mary's, Eric Fernsten of USF and Dave Webber of Nevada-Reno.

In other Coast cage developments, UCLA wound up second in the final UPI national ratings. The Bruins, who overwhlmed USC 82-52 last Saturday, moved past the Notre Dame team they split two games with during the season but finished nine points back of the North Carolina State team whose lone loss was to the Bruins.

McVea To WFL Wheels

DETROIT (UPI) — The Detroit Wheels of the new World Football League today announced the signing of six-year National Football League veteran Warren McVea, who played last season with the Kansas City Chiefs.

Wheels Coach Danny Boisture called the signing of McVea, 27, a running back and kickoff returner, "probably the biggest signing to date for the Wheels."

McVea, a 5-10, 190-pounder who played at the University of Houston, was signed as a free agent. He was released by the Chiefs at the end of last season.

"McVea gives us the broken field runner we need," said Boisture. "He's the type of running back that is also a great crowd pleaser."

He began his pro career at Cincinnati and was traded to the Kansas City Chiefs in 1969. His 80-yard touchdown run in 1969 tied a Kansas City record which still holds.

Angels' Pitcher Succumbs

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Bruce Heinbechner, a 23-year-old pitcher struggling to earn a spot in the California bullpen, was killed late Sunday night in a head-on traffic accident near the Angels' spring training camp here.

Heinbechner, a 6-foot-1, 200-pound left-hander who was scheduled to work in the Angels' exhibition game against Arizona State last night, was crushed when his sports car veered across the center line and smashed into another vehicle. The accident occurred as Heinbechner, of Arleta, Calif., was returning to the hotel where the team was staying.

"It is a terribly tragic loss for the family," said Angels' General Manager Harry Dalton. "We feel hopelessly frustrated. We watched him grow up in our system. He was an outstanding young man and a fine prospect."

The driver of the other car, Kathy Jean Carroll, 21, of Cathedral City, suffered facial lacerations, fractures of both arms and possible internal injuries. Police did not know why Heinbechner's car crossed the center line.

MADDOX, MATTHEWS

Miffed, But Not Bitter

By JACK HANLEY

PHOENIX — Neither Gary Maddox nor Gary Matthews looked kindly on publication of details of their 1974 salary negotiations. Indeed, the two M's of the Giants plainly were miffed when Jerry Donovan, Horace Stoneham's contract negotiator, disclosed the details and said so when they reported for spring training.

However, they declared they were not bitter. Both received substantial raises but not as much as they tried for. Maddox wound up with $46,000. He made $25,000 last year. Matthews would up with $35,000. He made $17,000 plus a $5,000 bonus, last season when he was National League Rookie of the Year.

When contract negotiations stalled on March 1, Donovan disclosed that Maddox originally asked for $65,000. Maddox reduced that to $52,000 on March 1 and told Donovan that he would not go lower. Donovan stayed with the original $45,000 figure the Giants offered Maddox.

On March 1, Donovan also disclosed Matthews' original 1974 salary goal as $44,000, double his salary-bonus total of $22,000 last season. Matthews reduced that to $40,000 on March 1 and told Donovan that was his lowest figure. Donovan stayed with the original $34,000 the Giants offered Matthews, double his 1973 salary of $17,000.

Late in the afternoon of March 1, Donovan received a telephone call from John Dranichik who said he was representing the two ball players as their agent. Dranichik said Maddox was now willing to take $51,000, Matthews $39,000. Donovan told Dranichik they would have to lower their sights still further.

On March 4 Dranichik and Donovan reached agreement on Matthews' contract for $35,000. On March 6 they agreed on a $46,000 contract for Maddox.

Donovan declared that if Dranichik had been in the picture prior to March 1, the negotiations probably would have been concluded long before they actually were.

Donovan clearly was the winner in the negotiations but he said he didn't feel like one.

"I don't want to be known as a winner or a loser in negotiations," said Donovan. "All I want to do is be fair to both our players and Mr. Stoneham.

"Maddox would become the quickest $100,000 player in the history of baseball if we agreed to doubling his salary after each season.

"I think we were fair to Maddox and Matthews. In good conscience I couldn't recommend to Horace Stoneham that we give in to Maddox and Matthews. Mr. Stoneham is not cheap with his ball players."

FISH AND GAME

By AL GIDDINGS

Some Changes In Abalone Rules

Spring is rapidly rolling around, and with it comes the start of new seasons in fish and game. Some of those seasons will be here before you realize it. California's fishing season for abalone will open Saturday with new gear restrictions on the books.

The regulations are designed to limit the number of abalone that the Department of Fish and Game contends are wasted along the coastline from cuts inflicted by poorly designed abalone irons.

Beginning this season abalone irons must be straight or with a curve having a radius of not less than 18 inches, such as irons made from automobile leaf springs or similarly curved material, and not less than three-quarters of an inch wide or less than one-sixteenth of an inch thick. All edges must be rounded.

PREVIOUSLY REGULATIONS had provided only that no hooking device or any device 36 inches or longer could be used to take abalone.

Tests conducted by the Department of Fish and Game's abalone research project determined that straight irons with dull tips, such as the leaf spring type, did the least damage. Narrow, sharp and bent irons and knives were found to be most damaging to the resource.

MINIMUM SIZES, measured at the greatest shell diameter, are seven inches for reds; six inches for greens, pinks and whites; five inches for blacks, and four inches for all others.

Other rules require that abalones must be brought ashore in a condition such that size can be determined, and that abalones not retained must be replaced immediately, with the shell outward, to the surface of the rock from which they were detached.

The season will run through Jan. 14, 1975.

TROUT PLANTS ARE scheduled this week in Bon Tempe and Lagunitas reservoirs, located above Fairfax. Plants are also scheduled for Rodeo Lagoon near Fort Cronkhite and at Stafford Dam near Novato. The limit on trout at the lakes and reservoirs is five trout per day. The streams of Marin County do not open this year until the Saturday before Memorial Day (May 25).

The new fishing regulations are out for distribution at the sporting good shops. Marin County has been placed in the North Coast District of the fishing regulations this year. It's important that you acquaint yourselves with the newly changed regulations which went into effect March 1.

Plants of 40,000 silver salmon are to be made also in Papermill Creek this month. As mentioned, the stream is now closed. These fish are a year old and should go to sea in April. These plants are made to enhance local ocean and bay fishing, then after two years, these fish will return as adults (10-12 pounds) for the Tomales Bay and the Papermill Creek tidwater winter fishery near Point Reyes Station.

FIGURES RELEASED by the Department of Fish and Game show that hunters took 23 per cent more bears last year than the year before.

On the basis of tag returns, the fish and game said, 767 bears were taken during the 1973 seasons, 42 of them by archers. Corresponding figures for 1972 were 626 and 35.

Males in the bag outnumbered females three to two.

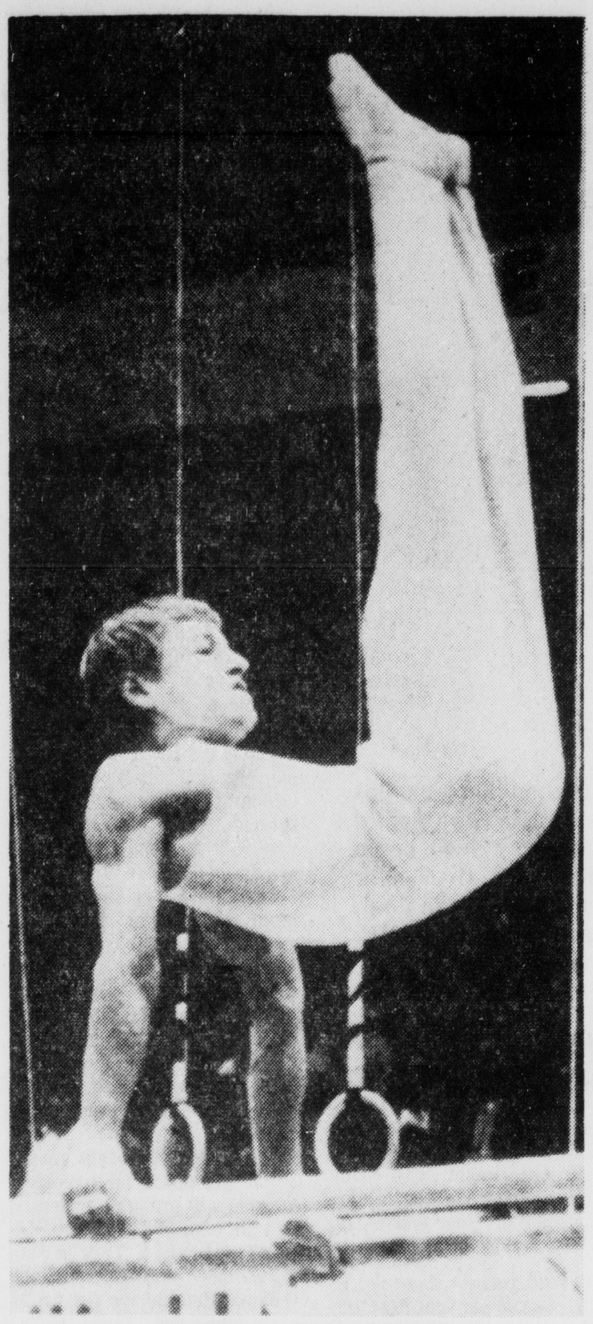

Most productive counties for bears last year were Siskiyou, which accounted for 157, Trinity (110) and Shasta (100). No bears were taken im Marin, Sonoma or Napa counties. In Mendocino County 26 were taken and in Lake County four were taken. This is interesting when compared to Modoc County where just three were taken!

ALPINE JUDICIAL District Judge Jim D. Lyons levied the maximum fine against retired trapper and guide Claude D. Cooper when Cooper pleaded guilty to a charge of killing a mountain lion.

Judge Lyons fined the 64-year-old Cooper, a resident of Sparks, Nev., $500, suspended $300 of the fine and placed him on probation for two years.

Mountain lions have been given added protection since early 1972. Since that time it has been illegal for hunters to kill mountain lions, and even cattle ranchers or sheepgrowers suffering depredation by lions must obtain permits from the Department of Fish and Game before attempting to remove mountain lions.

There were four arrests for mountain lion violations in the state last year.

Mays Having Fun In Camp

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — "I still watch what I eat," said Willie Mays. "You can see I'm in shape. In my mind, I haven't quit. It still hasn't sunk in yet."

Nor will it for awhile the way Willie Mays is making the big transition here.

When Willie Mays laughs now, he does it so carefree, so naturally, that he reminds you of the boyishly bubbling Willie Mays who broke in with the New York Giants more than 20 years ago.

No longer a player, and no longer having to go out and prove he is the legendary Willie Mays every day, he laughs far more easily now. Of course it's not the same as when he was playing. He misses that aspect of it already.

"You can't do the same thing for more than 20 years, then get out and say you don't miss it," he says. "If anyone does that and then says it, he's lying. Everyone who leaves has to adjust. But in my case, I'm still around the players so maybe it'll be a little easier. When the game starts, I get out of the way.

"It's in my contract. This is what Mr. Grant (Mets' board chairman M. Donald Grant) and I agreed on. What'll I do this year? A combination of a lotta things. I'll do whatever Yogi (Berra) asks me to. He's the manager. During the season, I imagine I'll work with the kids, visit the farm clubs on occasion and things like that. I'll keep busy, don't worry about that."

"I used to get a callus here," he said, holding up his hand, "but never a blister. It comes from the fungo stick."

Willie Mays grew serious again.

"No," he said, in answer to a question, "this isn't my toughest time; last year was. I think I was very moody. My wife helped me a great deal. Right now, I'm adjusting. I realize it'll take awhile. One thing, though, money is not a problem with me. I'll be making $170,000 this year with the jobs I have. I have a public relations job with the Colgate-Palmolive Company and I'm also working for the Tex-Fair Clothing Company, but my No. 1 job is with the Mets. Everybody understands that."

A good deal was written about Willie Mays' final performance for the Mets last fall. It came for an all purposes in the second World Series game with the Oakland Athletics. Willie had considerable trouble in the field although he did hit one up the middle to account for the winning run.

Battling both age and the sun, 42-year-old Willie Mays looked like anything but Willie Mays the legend that day in Oakland and there were those in the media, myself included, who said as much.

FIRST OF 4-GAME SET

A's Meet Giants Today

MESA, Ariz. (UPI) — The World Champion Oakland A's meet cross-bay neighbor San Francisco today in the first of four exhibition games between them this spring.

The new Oakland manager, Alvin Dark, is also the last San Francisco pilot to land the Giants in a World Series, back in 1962. He named Glenn Abbott, Bob Locker and Chuck Dobson to pitch against the Giants, who will counter with Tom Bradley, Don Rose, Elias Sosa and Randy Moffitt.

The A's fell 5-4 to Milwaukee yesterday even though Gene Tenace made it three homers in as many spring games for the A's.

Pedro Garcia's three-run homer off Dave Hamilton put Oakland on the ropes early but Paul Lindblad pitched sharp relief for the A's, who fought back to almost catch the Brewers.

The Giants, meanwhile, saw reserve infielder Bruce Miller laid low by the same flu bug which has claimed 28 other victims since the club assembled at Casa Grande, Ariz., over two weeks ago.

Giants Manager Charlie Fox now has 35 squad members and must cut 10 by opening day.

Norton Wants To Be Rated Favorite Again

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — In his two fights with Muhammad Ali last year, Ken Norton was the underdog.

When he enters the ring with heavyweight champion George Foreman at Caracas, Venezuela, March 26, the 28-year-old ex-Marine Corps corporal will have the same role again.

In the first Ali fight at San Diego March 31, 1973, Norton was a 5-1 underdog. Despite a 12-round split decision victory and the fact he broke the former champion's jaw, Norton was a 5-2 underdog in their rematch last Sept. 10 at the Forum in Inglewood, Calif.

"I was the favorite in my first 31 fights," noted Norton, who was knocked out by Venezuelan Jose Luis Garcia in 1970 for his only other ring defeat. "Maybe when I win the title from Foreman, they'll start making me the favorite again."

Norton, a native of Jacksonville, Ill., expects to weigh 210 for the Foreman bout. That's five more pounds than he weighed for the second Ali fight.

"I think I'll feel good at that weight," he noted. "I really haven't paid that much attention to the scales the past couple weeks anyway."

Since Feb. 1, Norton has been getting up at 6 a.m. and going to bed between 9:30 and 10 p.m. at Gilman Hot Springs.

His good friend, No.1 welterweight contender Hedgemon Lewis of Los Angeles, joined him there last week and will accompany him to Venezuela tomorrow.

"I've never fought in a foreign country before but I don't anticipate any problems," Norton said. "I'm sure I'll get acclimated to Caracas before the fight."

He got $50,000 for the initial Ali bout and $200,000 for the second. For Foreman, he's receiving $200,000 against 20 per cent of the total take, live and closed circuit television, which could boost his purse as high as half a million.

Although he has movies of four of Foreman's fights, including his second-round KO over Joe Frazier for the title in Jamaica in January, 1973, Norton hasn't spent much time studying his opponent.

"I watched them a couple of times," he explained, "but then I stopped. If you've seen him once, you've seen him a hundred times. His style is basically the same and he doesn't alter it at all."

Redwood Wins Under Dry Sky

Run-scoring singles in the fifth inning by Jeff Vogel and the sixth by Gary LaTorre were all Lucchesi needed. Vogel had two hits for the fourth consecutive games.

Three other Marin teams were rained out. Drake will replay its game with visiting Mission of San Francisco Friday at 3:30 p.m., San Marin will visit Sacred Heart (S.F.) Thursday at 3:30 p.m., and San Rafael's game with Riordan (S.F.) has not been rescheduled yet.

San Marin's game with Riordan today has been moved to Saturday, March 23. College of Marin's game today at Santa Rosa has been changed to tomorrow at 3 p.m.

FISH AND GAME

By AL GIDDINGS

Some Changes In Abalone Rules

Spring is rapidly rolling around, and with it comes the start of new seasons in fish and game. Some of those seasons will be here before you realize it. California's fishing season for abalone will open Saturday with new gear restrictions on the books.

The regulations are designed to limit the number of abalone that the Department of Fish and Game contends are wasted along the coastline from cuts inflicted by poorly designed abalone irons.

Beginning this season abalone irons must be straight or with a curve having a radius of not less than 18 inches, such as irons made from automobile leaf springs or similarly curved material, and not less than three-quarters of an inch wide or less than one-sixteenth of an inch thick. All edges must be rounded.

PREVIOUSLY REGULATIONS had provided only that no hooking device or any device 36 inches or longer could be used to take abalone.

Tests conducted by the Department of Fish and Game's abalone research project determined that straight irons with dull tips, such as the leaf spring type, did the least damage. Narrow, sharp and bent irons and knives were found to be most damaging to the resource.

MINIMUM SIZES, measured at the greatest shell diameter, are seven inches for reds; six inches for greens, pinks and whites; five inches for blacks, and four inches for all others.

Other rules require that abalones must be brought ashore in a condition such that size can be determined, and that abalones not retained must be replaced immediately, with the shell outward, to the surface of the rock from which they were detached.

The season will run through Jan. 14, 1975.

TROUT PLANTS ARE scheduled this week in Bon Tempe and Lagunitas reservoirs, located above Fairfax. Plants are also scheduled for Rodeo Lagoon near Fort Cronkhite and at Stafford Dam near Novato. The limit on trout at the lakes and reservoirs is five trout per day. The streams of Marin County do not open this year until the Saturday before Memorial Day (May 25).

The new fishing regulations are out for distribution at the sporting good shops. Marin County has been placed in the North Coast District of the fishing regulations this year. It's important that you acquaint yourselves with the newly changed regulations which went into effect March 1.

Plants of 40,000 silver salmon are to be made also in Papermill Creek this month. As mentioned, the stream is now closed. These fish are a year old and should go to sea in April. These plants are made to enhance local ocean and bay fishing, then after two years, these fish will return as adults (10-12 pounds) for the Tomales Bay and the Papermill Creek tidwater winter fishery near Point Reyes Station.

FIGURES RELEASED by the Department of Fish and Game show that hunters took 23 per cent more bears last year than the year before.

On the basis of tag returns, the fish and game said, 767 bears were taken during the 1973 seasons, 42 of them by archers. Corresponding figures for 1972 were 626 and 35.

Males in the bag outnumbered females three to two.

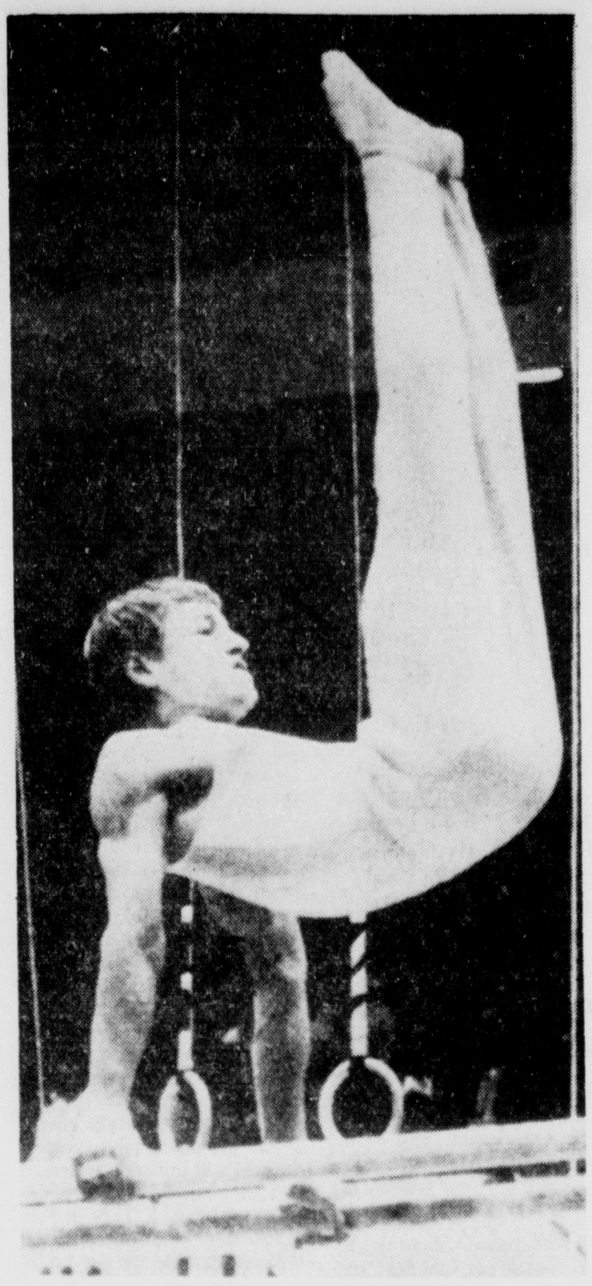

Most productive counties for bears last year were Siskiyou, which accounted for 157, Trinity (110) and Shasta (100). No bears were taken im Marin, Sonoma or Napa counties. In Mendocino County 26 were taken and in Lake County four were taken. This is interesting when compared to Modoc County where just three were taken!

ALPINE JUDICIAL District Judge Jim D. Lyons levied the maximum fine against retired trapper and guide Claude D. Cooper when Cooper pleaded guilty to a charge of killing a mountain lion.

Judge Lyons fined the 64-year-old Cooper, a resident of Sparks, Nev., $500, suspended $300 of the fine and placed him on probation for two years.

Mountain lions have been given added protection since early 1972. Since that time it has been illegal for hunters to kill mountain lions, and even cattle ranchers or sheepgrowers suffering depredation by lions must obtain permits from the Department of Fish and Game before attempting to remove mountain lions.

There were four arrests for mountain lion violations in the state last year.

Mays Having Fun In Camp

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — "I still watch what I eat," said Willie Mays. "You can see I'm in shape. In my mind, I haven't quit. It still hasn't sunk in yet."

Nor will it for awhile the way Willie Mays is making the big transition here.

"This isn't work," he said, laughing. "This is fun."

In the outfield, Don "Hondo" Hahn, employing the persistence of a process server, tracked down the ball and grabbed it in perfect stride.

"I never hit fungoes before. This is the first time," Mays laughed again.

When Willie Mays laughs now, he does it so carefree, so naturally, that he reminds you of the boyishly bubbling Willie Mays who broke in with the New York Giants more than 20 years ago.

No longer a player, and no longer having to go out and prove he is the legendary Willie Mays every day, he laughs far more easily now. Of course it's not the same as when he was playing. He misses that aspect of it already.

"You can't do the same thing for more than 20 years, then get out and say you don't miss it," he says. "If anyone does that and then says it, he's lying. Everyone who leaves has to adjust. But in my case, I'm still around the players so maybe it'll be a little easier. When the game starts, I get out of the way.

"It's in my contract. This is what Mr. Grant (Mets' board chairman M. Donald Grant) and I agreed on. What'll I do this year? A combination of a lotta things. I'll do whatever Yogi (Berra) asks me to. He's the manager. During the season, I imagine I'll work with the kids, visit the farm clubs on occasion and things like that. I'll keep busy, don't worry about that."

"I used to get a callus here," he said, holding up his hand, "but never a blister. It comes from the fungo stick."

"You mean a golf club," needled Cleon Jones, who had come in from the outfield to hit.

Willie Mays grew serious again.

"No," he said, in answer to a question, "this isn't my toughest time; last year was. I think I was very moody. My wife helped me a great deal. Right now, I'm adjusting. I realize it'll take awhile. One thing, though, money is not a problem with me. I'll be making $170,000 this year with the jobs I have. I have a public relations job with the Colgate-Palmolive Company and I'm also working for the Tex-Fair Clothing Company, but my No. 1 job is with the Mets. Everybody understands that."

A good deal was written about Willie Mays' final performance for the Mets last fall. It came for an all purposes in the second World Series game with the Oakland Athletics. Willie had considerable trouble in the field although he did hit one up the middle to account for the winning run.

Battling both age and the sun, 42-year-old Willie Mays looked like anything but Willie Mays the legend that day in Oakland and there were those in the media, myself included, who said as much.

FIRST OF 4-GAME SET

A's Meet Giants Today

MESA, Ariz. (UPI) — The World Champion Oakland A's meet cross-bay neighbor San Francisco today in the first of four exhibition games between them this spring.

The new Oakland manager, Alvin Dark, is also the last San Francisco pilot to land the Giants in a World Series, back in 1962. He named Glenn Abbott, Bob Locker and Chuck Dobson to pitch against the Giants, who will counter with Tom Bradley, Don Rose, Elias Sosa and Randy Moffitt.

The A's fell 5-4 to Milwaukee yesterday even though Gene Tenace made it three homers in as many spring games for the A's.

Pedro Garcia's three-run homer off Dave Hamilton put Oakland on the ropes early but Paul Lindblad pitched sharp relief for the A's, who fought back to almost catch the Brewers.

The Giants, meanwhile, saw reserve infielder Bruce Miller laid low by the same flu bug which has claimed 28 other victims since the club assembled at Casa Grande, Ariz., over two weeks ago.

All-star shortstop Chris Speier rejoined the team after three days in sick bay. He probably will play some today.

Giants Manager Charlie Fox now has 35 squad members and must cut 10 by opening day.

Norton Wants To Be Rated Favorite Again

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — In his two fights with Muhammad Ali last year, Ken Norton was the underdog.

When he enters the ring with heavyweight champion George Foreman at Caracas, Venezuela, March 26, the 28-year-old ex-Marine Corps corporal will have the same role again.

In the first Ali fight at San Diego March 31, 1973, Norton was a 5-1 underdog. Despite a 12-round split decision victory and the fact he broke the former champion's jaw, Norton was a 5-2 underdog in their rematch last Sept. 10 at the Forum in Inglewood, Calif.

"I was the favorite in my first 31 fights," noted Norton, who was knocked out by Venezuelan Jose Luis Garcia in 1970 for his only other ring defeat. "Maybe when I win the title from Foreman, they'll start making me the favorite again."

Norton, a native of Jacksonville, Ill., expects to weigh 210 for the Foreman bout. That's five more pounds than he weighed for the second Ali fight.

"I think I'll feel good at that weight," he noted. "I really haven't paid that much attention to the scales the past couple weeks anyway."

Since Feb. 1, Norton has been getting up at 6 a.m. and going to bed between 9:30 and 10 p.m. at Gilman Hot Springs.

His good friend, No.1 welterweight contender Hedgemon Lewis of Los Angeles, joined him there last week and will accompany him to Venezuela tomorrow.

"I've never fought in a foreign country before but I don't anticipate any problems," Norton said. "I'm sure I'll get acclimated to Caracas before the fight."

He got $50,000 for the initial Ali bout and $200,000 for the second. For Foreman, he's receiving $200,000 against 20 per cent of the total take, live and closed circuit television, which could boost his purse as high as half a million.

His biggest purse before meeting Ali a year ago this month was $7,500 to meet Henry Clark at Stateline, Nev., in 1972.

Although he has movies of four of Foreman's fights, including his second-round KO over Joe Frazier for the title in Jamaica in January, 1973, Norton hasn't spent much time studying his opponent.

"I watched them a couple of times," he explained, "but then I stopped. If you've seen him once, you've seen him a hundred times. His style is basically the same and he doesn't alter it at all."

Redwood Wins Under Dry Sky

Redwood High School managed to find one of the few patches of dry sky in the Bay Area yesterday and used it to good advantage to win a non-league baseball game.

Lucchesi, mixing up fast balls and curves, struck out 11 and walked just two in handcuffing previously undefeated South City (4-1).

Run-scoring singles in the fifth inning by Jeff Vogel and the sixth by Gary LaTorre were all Lucchesi needed. Vogel had two hits for the fourth consecutive games.

Three other Marin teams were rained out. Drake will replay its game with visiting Mission of San Francisco Friday at 3:30 p.m., San Marin will visit Sacred Heart (S.F.) Thursday at 3:30 p.m., and San Rafael's game with Riordan (S.F.) has not been rescheduled yet.

San Marin's game with Riordan today has been moved to Saturday, March 23. College of Marin's game today at Santa Rosa has been changed to tomorrow at 3 p.m.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Hold Loomis-Sayles For Extended Growth

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. I presently have the opportunity to invest in Loomis-Sayles Capital Development Fund. Would you give your opinion of this fund? — P.L.

A. If your investment objective is capital appreciation — growth — over the long-term, then this fund is a suitable choice for you. In the 10-year period through 1973, Loomis Sayles Capital Development increased its asset value 137 per cent as compared with 74 per cent for an all-fund average. In 1973, assets dropped 12 per cent versus 21 per cent for the average fund. At the 1973 year end, assets were 90 per cent invested in a diversified list of 40 good quality common stocks, with emphasis on health care, office equipment and oil and gas issues. The balance of the portfolio was in short-term notes, Treasury bills and cash.

Q. I am 71, single and retired. My stocks have been bought over the last 30 years with any extra money I was able to set aside. Would you review my portfolio and make suggestions to increase my income? — B.R.

A. Your 8 holdings worth $18,600 return $1,000 annually, a yield of 5.4%. The bulk of your securities should be held for either their generous returns or above-average appreciation potential. However, Standard Oil of Ohio (NYSE) and Utah Idaho (ASE) should be sold. The indicated dividend on the latter issue provides only a 2.9 per cent yield, a rate which may be bettered in other issues. Sohio is also a low-yield stock, currently paying $1.36 annually, a 2.2 per cent return.

I would also accept the loss on National Bellas Hess (ASE). This discount operator has reported deficits in four of the past five years and the current fiscal year appears to be heading in the same southerly direction. Your 42 shares of Newmont Mining $4.50 cv. preferred (NYSE) should be retained for appreciation despite the modest 4.4 per cent return.

Russian Stand On Oil Hurts Trading

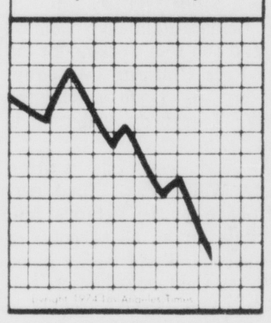

NEW YORK (UPI) — News that the Russians are urging the Arabs not to lift their oil embargo against the United States sent stock prices lower on the New York stock exchange today. Trading was fairly active.

Wall Street reacted to news the Soviet Union is broadcasting messages in Arabic urging Arab nations not to lift their oil embargo. The new hard line taken by the Soviet Union came as a surprise and disappointment to Wall Street. The stock market had been rallying recently, primarily on the belief the oil embargo would end soon, but the news today cast fresh doubt on that hope.

Stocks on the American Exchange rose slightly in light trading. Marinduque Mining led the actives, ahead ⅜ to 4 ½ on 29,800 shares.

Sausalito Sweet Shop Planning Expansion During Summer Months

Sausalito Sweet Shop restaurant at 676 Bridgeway, which has been a Sausalito institution since 1908, will expand this summer into the adjacent space now occupied by Glen Five & Ten at 670 Bridgeway.

William R. Charles, who has operated Sausalito Sweet Shop since November of 1965, said Glen Five & Ten will leave by the end of April, and he hopes to rebuild the premises for an expanded restaurant upstairs, with seating for 100 or more customers, compared with the present 48. The downstairs portion will be leased to one or more shops.

Sausalito Sweet Shop will remain open during the expansion, with a possible closing for a few days when the actual move takes place. "We're hoping to have everything completed in July or August," said Charles. The sweet shop serves full breakfast, egg dishes, cakes, pastries, ice cream, beer and wine.

When the restaurant moves into larger quarters, its present location will probably be leased to a gift shop.

GLEN FIVE & TEN in Sausalito has been operated by William Remak and his brothers, John and Paul, for 15 years. William Remak said he will close the Sausalito store about April 15 because he is unable to find another 3,000-square-foot location in Sausalito.

The Remaks operate other stores in Strawberry Town & Country Village, Pacheco Plaza in Ignacio, in Pacifica and two in San Francisco.

Co-chairman Virgil Hollis, county superintendent of schools, has distributed 53,000 Medic-Alert brochures through the schools.

The Marin Association of Life Underwriters will pay for the cost of Medic-Alert emblems for Marin residents, especially children, who need but cannot afford them, said Thurston.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Hold Loomis-Sayles For Extended Growth

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. I presently have the opportunity to invest in Loomis-Sayles Capital Development Fund. Would you give your opinion of this fund? — P.L.

A. If your investment objective is capital appreciation — growth — over the long-term, then this fund is a suitable choice for you. In the 10-year period through 1973, Loomis Sayles Capital Development increased its asset value 137 per cent as compared with 74 per cent for an all-fund average. In 1973, assets dropped 12 per cent versus 21 per cent for the average fund. At the 1973 year end, assets were 90 per cent invested in a diversified list of 40 good quality common stocks, with emphasis on health care, office equipment and oil and gas issues. The balance of the portfolio was in short-term notes, Treasury bills and cash.

Q. I am 71, single and retired. My stocks have been bought over the last 30 years with any extra money I was able to set aside. Would you review my portfolio and make suggestions to increase my income? — B.R.

A. Your 8 holdings worth $18,600 return $1,000 annually, a yield of 5.4%. The bulk of your securities should be held for either their generous returns or above-average appreciation potential. However, Standard Oil of Ohio (NYSE) and Utah Idaho (ASE) should be sold. The indicated dividend on the latter issue provides only a 2.9 per cent yield, a rate which may be bettered in other issues. Sohio is also a low-yield stock, currently paying $1.36 annually, a 2.2 per cent return.

I would also accept the loss on National Bellas Hess (ASE). This discount operator has reported deficits in four of the past five years and the current fiscal year appears to be heading in the same southerly direction. Your 42 shares of Newmont Mining $4.50 cv. preferred (NYSE) should be retained for appreciation despite the modest 4.4 per cent return.

Russian Stand On Oil Hurts Trading

NEW YORK (UPI) — News that the Russians are urging the Arabs not to lift their oil embargo against the United States sent stock prices lower on the New York stock exchange today. Trading was fairly active.

Wall Street reacted to news the Soviet Union is broadcasting messages in Arabic urging Arab nations not to lift their oil embargo. The new hard line taken by the Soviet Union came as a surprise and disappointment to Wall Street. The stock market had been rallying recently, primarily on the belief the oil embargo would end soon, but the news today cast fresh doubt on that hope.

Stocks on the American Exchange rose slightly in light trading. Marinduque Mining led the actives, ahead ⅜ to 4 ½ on 29,800 shares.

Record Year By Department Chain

HAYWARD (BW) — Mervyn's (OTC), 16-store Northern California department store chain, has reported record operating results for the year ended Jan. 27.

Audited figures show net income rose 46 per cent to $3,340,000, compared with $2,294,000 for the year earlier. Earnings per share rose to $1.63 from $1.15 a year ago.

Sales for the year climbed to $90,145,000 vs. $61,042,000, a 48 per cent increase over the previous year.

Silver Prices

NEW YORK (UPI) — Handy and Harman today quoted silver at $5.29 per fine ounce, up 9 cents. Engelhard quoted silver bullion at $5.29, up 9 cents and fabricated silver at $5.343, up 9 cents.

Sausalito Sweet Shop Planning Expansion During Summer Months

Sausalito Sweet Shop restaurant at 676 Bridgeway, which has been a Sausalito institution since 1908, will expand this summer into the adjacent space now occupied by Glen Five & Ten at 670 Bridgeway.

William R. Charles, who has operated Sausalito Sweet Shop since November of 1965, said Glen Five & Ten will leave by the end of April, and he hopes to rebuild the premises for an expanded restaurant upstairs, with seating for 100 or more customers, compared with the present 48. The downstairs portion will be leased to one or more shops.

Sausalito Sweet Shop will remain open during the expansion, with a possible closing for a few days when the actual move takes place. "We're hoping to have everything completed in July or August," said Charles. The sweet shop serves full breakfast, egg dishes, cakes, pastries, ice cream, beer and wine.

When the restaurant moves into larger quarters, its present location will probably be leased to a gift shop.

GLEN FIVE & TEN in Sausalito has been operated by William Remak and his brothers, John and Paul, for 15 years. William Remak said he will close the Sausalito store about April 15 because he is unable to find another 3,000-square-foot location in Sausalito.

The Remaks operate other stores in Strawberry Town & Country Village, Pacheco Plaza in Ignacio, in Pacifica and two in San Francisco.

Gagnon

Herlihy

PAUL E. GAGNON of Petaluma and WARREN W. HERLIGHY of Orinda were named to executive positions with Rydax Inc. of San Rafael, manufacturer of mobile radio telephone, traffic measurement, and remote monitoring systems.

Gagnon, manufacturing manager for the firm since 1969, was promoted last month to assistant plant manager. Herlihy, formerly with Aerotron Inc., in Orinda, was named sales manager of Rydax.

PHOTOGRAPHERS, both professional and non-professional, are invited to submit black and white prints for use in a photo exhibit to be displayed in Northgate Mall stores during April. All pictures must have been taken somewhere in Marin by a photographer who now lives in the county. There is no restriction in subject matter. Categories include people in activities, nature, photo journalism, personal portraits (not commercial), and experimental.

FRANKLIN SAVINGS and Loan Association, headquartered in San Francisco, will open its first Marin County branch in Larkspur, at Sohner Plaza, corner of Bon Air Road and Magnolia Avenue. The new office, scheduled to open in mid-May, will be Franklin's ninth office.

Founded in 1875 in San Francisco, Franklin Savings and Loan has more than $100 million in total assets.

BECHTEL CORP. announced two appointments to new positions in its reorganized procurement services operation. John Griffen Jr. of Mill Valley was named manager of procurement services, responsible for worldwide purchasing, expediting, inspection, subcontracts and traffic for the Bechtel group of companies. John E. Eggleston of San Rafael was appointed manager of operations, with procurement responsibility for project operations worldwide. Griffen joined Bechtel in 1950, and Eggleston in 1965.

JAMES E. FRITSCH of Mill Valley was promoted to product specialist in the structural shape sales division of Bethlehem Steel Corporation's sales department. He will be transferred to the company's home office in Bethlehem, Pa.

Fritsch joined Bethlehem Steel in 1967 and has been a salesman in San Francisco ever since, except for a leave of absence in 1968-69 to serve as an officer in the United States Air Force.

NEIL D. ROSS of Terra Linda has joined On-Line-Business Systems Inc. of San Francisco as manager, finance and administration. He formerly held a similar position with P&O, the British Cruise Line.

On-Line Business Systems provides programming and computer processing for business and financial management.

MEDIC-ALERT bracelets and necklaces for those who have hidden medical problems are available through the Marin Association of Life Underwriters, which is publicizing the life-saving emblems during March, Medic-Alert month.

Paul L. Thurston, chairman of the campaign, said the emblems can save the lives of those who suffer allergy to penicillin or tetanus shots, heart condition, diabetes, epilepsy, or other medical problem. Co-chairman Virgil Hollis, county superintendent of schools, has distributed 53,000 Medic-Alert brochures through the schools.

The Marin Association of Life Underwriters will pay for the cost of Medic-Alert emblems for Marin residents, especially children, who need but cannot afford them, said Thurston.

EXECUTIVE SINGLES Directory of Marin, an introduction service started last month by Barbara Austin of San Rafael, can be reached through Post Office Box 884, Kentfield, Calif. Mrs. Austin said she is swamped by phone calls and therefore requests contact through her post office box.

Through interviewing executive, professional and academic single men and women, Mrs. Austin is compiling a directory of persons who want to meet others with similar interests.

MARJORIE MACRIS, principal planner in the Marin County Planning Department, was elected to the 1974 executive board of the American Institute of Planners, Northern California section. In Northern California, the A.I.P. has a membership of 533 licensed city planners, with offices at 100 Bush Street, San Francisco.

DR. DONOVAN O. COOKE, county coroner and public administrator, was appointed co-chairman of the legislative committee of the California Association of Public Administrators, Public Guardians and Conservators. He was appointed this month by William Hill of San Bernardino, president of the association.

A DETERMINED YOUNG STUDENT

Danny Catlett of Avant, a community in northeastern Oklahoma, takes a boat to get to school. The youth's efforts were wasted, however, yesterday when high water forced his school to close. Today severe thunderstorms hit the south, producing marble-size hail in Louisiana and Texas. Fair weather was the rule, however, over the Southern Plains, the Rockies and the Plateau Region.

Golda Says Russ Goal Not Peace

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir said today in Jerusalem the Soviet Union is not encouraging Syria to disengage from Israeli forces, and that Israel cannot surrender the Golan Heights because its continued occupation is the only guarantee of security in the north.

Mrs. Meir said Israel and Egypt could not have disengaged their forces if Moscow had been a decisive factor in the agreement. She said the Russians were not encouraging Syrian President Hafez Assad to conclude a similar disengagement accord.

"I doubt whether the disengagement project would have gone through and been decided upon as it was agreed upon between the Egyptians and us if the Russians had a share in it," she said, adding:

"I have no doubt that they are not encouraging Assad to go through at least a similar disengagement agreement as we had with the Egyptians because Assad wants thrown in as a bonus a part of the Golan Heights beyond the 1967 borders, when we are speaking of disengagement in the situation that was created after the Yom Kippur war."

Mrs. Meir made the comments in English during more than four hours at three seminars about international relations at Hebrew University.

Israel's afternoon newspapers banner headlined reports from Cairo that President Nixon will visit Egypt in mid-May. They said the possibility existed he will stop in Israel afterward. The national radio said the government knew nothing of a Nixon trip to Israel.

The newspaper Yedioth Ahronoth said Foreign Minister Abba Eban will discuss the possibility of a Nixon visit with U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger when the two meet in Washington Thursday.

Earlier, the Israeli military command reduced tension on the Syrian front by opening roads on the heights to civilian traffic and permitting farmers to resume their work in the fields, a military source said.

Mrs. Meir, alluding to possible U.S. guarantees of security in the event of peace agreements with the Arabs, made her statement in a seminar at Hebrew University as Foreign Minister Abba Eban was en route to the United States to lay the groundwork for troop disengagement talks with Syria.

"No guarantee in the world that is promised to us can come anywhere near to the security of Israel to the value of our being on the Golan Heights," she said.

In a sharp attack on the Soviet Union, Mrs. Meir said, "I'm convinced that the Soviet Union does not want peace. The limit (is) not to become involved in a war with the United States."

An Israeli military source said that a week-long troop alert in anticipation of a Syrian offensive remained in effect. But the nation's newspapers no longer characterized it as a high state of alert.

Israeli leaders called the alert after receiving what was described as intelligence information that the Syrians planned an attempt at recapturing the 325-square mile area captured by Israel in the October war.

The military command had ordered all the two-lane blacktop roads leading to the 17 agricultural settlements on the Golan Heights—captured in the 1967 war—closed to civilian traffic.

The command said no incidents had occurred on the northern cease-fire lines since sporadic Syrian shelling on Thursday.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban will arrive in Washington Thursday for meetings with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to lay the groundwork for indirect talks there on troop pullbacks from the Golan Heights.

U.S. Undersecretary of State Joseph Sisco told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday that the talks, which had been scheduled for later this month, had been delayed for at least two weeks.

He indicated that the negotiators for Israel and Syria perhaps would not even be in Washington at the same time.

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan said yesterday in Jerusalem that the Soviet Union knew when Egypt and Syria planned to launch their October attack.

"Russia knew beforehand exactly when the Arabs planned to start this war," Dayan said. "They knew when the war was due to start and they did everything they could not to prevent it."

Russian Air Ministry Officials Eyeing U.S. Jumbo Jet Purchase

MOSCOW (UPI) — Russian aviation ministry officials took a two-hour flight in a Lockheed 1011 Tristar yesterday in a prelude to a possible deal to buy the $20 million jumbo aircraft, a Lockheed spokesman said today.

The spokesman said the 400-seat airliner powered by three Rolls-Royce RB211 engines was flown here Sunday at Soviet request. Lockheed signed a cooperation agreement in January with the state committee on science and technology.

The plane, borrowed from the British charter air company Court Line, is the first widebodied jet known to have landed here. Several airlines, including Pan American, have asked for permission to fly the large jets here but have been refused.

The Soviets at present have no wide-body aircraft. Their possible decision to purchase the Tristar or other western jumbo jets would mark the first time the Soviets have turned to the West to meet their aviation needs.

The Lockheed spokesman stressed that talks at this stage were preliminary and that any decision to enter into a sale to the Soviets would be contingent on U.S. government approval.

He said another factor would be public reaction to a proposed deal. After the visit here in January by Lockheed chairman Daniel J. Haughton, the company received some unfavorable mail about its possible dealings with the Soviets, he said.

"We are concerned about public reaction and don't want to stir up a hornets nest," the spokesman said.

He said a 25-member Lockheed delegation here headed by George C. Prill, president of Lockheed Aircraft International, also was discussing possible sale of other Lockheed products. They include air traffic control equipment, flight recorders, and land vehicles for operation in rough terrain.

He said there had been no discussion of possible construction of Soviet plants to produce the Tristar.

The spokesman said the Soviets expressed an "active interest" in the Tristar. They indicated they need the widebody planes for the heavily traveled north-south routes such as Moscow and Leningrad to the Black Sea resorts, he said.

Streaking Leads To An Arrest

Officer Martin Nielsen reported that he was driving north on Hill Street at about 9:20 p.m. when he observed a man and a woman nude at the corner of Hill and Sunnyside avenue.

The pair took off and ran up a driveway. Nielsen parked his patrol car nearby and called for assistance from the police station. He and another officer then saw a man Nielsen though was the male streaker now dressed in a pants and shirt and standing in the yard at 87 Sunnyside.

Nielsen said he advised the man who was not wearing shoes, that he had just seen a male and female naked in public. The man, Peter Elder, 39, of 87 Sunnyside, told Nielsen he was mistaken, but Nielsen cited him for nudity in public.

The policeman also reported that he would not have been able to identify the female because she had her back to him most of the time.

Oilman Says Energy, Ecology Don't Mix

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — If this nation is to solve its energy problems, its citizens must learn to live with such inconveniences as oil refineries on the outskirts of town, according to the president of the world's largest petroleum company.

C. C. Garvin Jr., president of Exxon Corp., told the 76th annual meeting of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers (AICHE) yesterday citizens like those in New Hampshire who refused to allow a refinery built near their town are going to have to learn tosacrifice more to solve energy problems.

"Regrettably, we are today largely a nation of citizens illiterate in economic matters, and in some instances unaware of, indifferent to and often antagonistic to the very system that has enabled our society to prosper," he said. "This has to be corrected — at the educational level — or our system may indeed perish."

Garvin also agreed with most other oil company executives who have disputed President Nixon's prediction the United States can become energy self sufficient by 1980.

O. N. Miller, the recently retired chairman of Standard Oil of California, said Americans are going to have to learn the value of energy.

"We will have to change our attitude — permanently — toward this now precious commodity that is energy," he said. "A new ethic will have to arise in the land — an ethnic of conservation that recognizes the importance and value of energy."

Unified PG&E Hearings Denied

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A hearing examiner for the state Public Utilities Commission refused yesterday to consolidate considerations of requests by Pacific Gas & Electric Co. for rate increases.

Parke Boneysteele, the examiner, rejected a plea by attorney James Cherry of San Francisco Consumer Action that hearings be consolidated and said the sessions now would concern only a request for a $233 million a year general rate increase.

Cherry had contended the utility has "half a billion dollars' worth of rate increases pending."

Arts, Crafts Fair To Aid Head Start

An arts and crafts fair to raise funds for play equipment for Marin Head Start schools will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. March 23 at St. Raphael's School in San Rafael.

Staff and parents of the Head Start schools are sponsoring the spring festival, according to Sheila Hines, chairman. In addition to an exhibit of works by the pre-school youngsters, the fair will offer kite kits, sewing, stained glass and pottery, she said.

A DETERMINED YOUNG STUDENT

Danny Catlett of Avant, a community in northeastern Oklahoma, takes a boat to get to school. The youth's efforts were wasted, however, yesterday when high water forced his school to close. Today severe thunderstorms hit the south, producing marble-size hail in Louisiana and Texas. Fair weather was the rule, however, over the Southern Plains, the Rockies and the Plateau Region.

Golda Says Russ Goal Not Peace

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir said today in Jerusalem the Soviet Union is not encouraging Syria to disengage from Israeli forces, and that Israel cannot surrender the Golan Heights because its continued occupation is the only guarantee of security in the north.

Mrs. Meir said Israel and Egypt could not have disengaged their forces if Moscow had been a decisive factor in the agreement. She said the Russians were not encouraging Syrian President Hafez Assad to conclude a similar disengagement accord.

"I doubt whether the disengagement project would have gone through and been decided upon as it was agreed upon between the Egyptians and us if the Russians had a share in it," she said, adding:

"I have no doubt that they are not encouraging Assad to go through at least a similar disengagement agreement as we had with the Egyptians because Assad wants thrown in as a bonus a part of the Golan Heights beyond the 1967 borders, when we are speaking of disengagement in the situation that was created after the Yom Kippur war."

Mrs. Meir made the comments in English during more than four hours at three seminars about international relations at Hebrew University.

Israel's afternoon newspapers banner headlined reports from Cairo that President Nixon will visit Egypt in mid-May. They said the possibility existed he will stop in Israel afterward. The national radio said the government knew nothing of a Nixon trip to Israel.

The newspaper Yedioth Ahronoth said Foreign Minister Abba Eban will discuss the possibility of a Nixon visit with U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger when the two meet in Washington Thursday.

Earlier, the Israeli military command reduced tension on the Syrian front by opening roads on the heights to civilian traffic and permitting farmers to resume their work in the fields, a military source said.

Mrs. Meir, alluding to possible U.S. guarantees of security in the event of peace agreements with the Arabs, made her statement in a seminar at Hebrew University as Foreign Minister Abba Eban was en route to the United States to lay the groundwork for troop disengagement talks with Syria.

"No guarantee in the world that is promised to us can come anywhere near to the security of Israel to the value of our being on the Golan Heights," she said.

In a sharp attack on the Soviet Union, Mrs. Meir said, "I'm convinced that the Soviet Union does not want peace. The limit (is) not to become involved in a war with the United States."

An Israeli military source said that a week-long troop alert in anticipation of a Syrian offensive remained in effect. But the nation's newspapers no longer characterized it as a high state of alert.

Israeli leaders called the alert after receiving what was described as intelligence information that the Syrians planned an attempt at recapturing the 325-square mile area captured by Israel in the October war.

The military command had ordered all the two-lane blacktop roads leading to the 17 agricultural settlements on the Golan Heights—captured in the 1967 war—closed to civilian traffic.

The command said no incidents had occurred on the northern cease-fire lines since sporadic Syrian shelling on Thursday.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban will arrive in Washington Thursday for meetings with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to lay the groundwork for indirect talks there on troop pullbacks from the Golan Heights.

U.S. Undersecretary of State Joseph Sisco told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday that the talks, which had been scheduled for later this month, had been delayed for at least two weeks.

He indicated that the negotiators for Israel and Syria perhaps would not even be in Washington at the same time.

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan said yesterday in Jerusalem that the Soviet Union knew when Egypt and Syria planned to launch their October attack.

"Russia knew beforehand exactly when the Arabs planned to start this war," Dayan said. "They knew when the war was due to start and they did everything they could not to prevent it."

Russian Air Ministry Officials Eyeing U.S. Jumbo Jet Purchase

MOSCOW (UPI) — Russian aviation ministry officials took a two-hour flight in a Lockheed 1011 Tristar yesterday in a prelude to a possible deal to buy the $20 million jumbo aircraft, a Lockheed spokesman said today.

The spokesman said the 400-seat airliner powered by three Rolls-Royce RB211 engines was flown here Sunday at Soviet request. Lockheed signed a cooperation agreement in January with the state committee on science and technology.

The plane, borrowed from the British charter air company Court Line, is the first widebodied jet known to have landed here. Several airlines, including Pan American, have asked for permission to fly the large jets here but have been refused.

The Soviets at present have no wide-body aircraft. Their possible decision to purchase the Tristar or other western jumbo jets would mark the first time the Soviets have turned to the West to meet their aviation needs.

The Lockheed spokesman stressed that talks at this stage were preliminary and that any decision to enter into a sale to the Soviets would be contingent on U.S. government approval.

He said another factor would be public reaction to a proposed deal. After the visit here in January by Lockheed chairman Daniel J. Haughton, the company received some unfavorable mail about its possible dealings with the Soviets, he said.

"We are concerned about public reaction and don't want to stir up a hornets nest," the spokesman said.

He said a 25-member Lockheed delegation here headed by George C. Prill, president of Lockheed Aircraft International, also was discussing possible sale of other Lockheed products. They include air traffic control equipment, flight recorders, and land vehicles for operation in rough terrain.

He said there had been no discussion of possible construction of Soviet plants to produce the Tristar.

The spokesman said the Soviets expressed an "active interest" in the Tristar. They indicated they need the widebody planes for the heavily traveled north-south routes such as Moscow and Leningrad to the Black Sea resorts, he said.

Streaking Leads To An Arrest

Officer Martin Nielsen reported that he was driving north on Hill Street at about 9:20 p.m. when he observed a man and a woman nude at the corner of Hill and Sunnyside avenue.

The pair took off and ran up a driveway. Nielsen parked his patrol car nearby and called for assistance from the police station. He and another officer then saw a man Nielsen though was the male streaker now dressed in a pants and shirt and standing in the yard at 87 Sunnyside.

Nielsen said he advised the man who was not wearing shoes, that he had just seen a male and female naked in public. The man, Peter Elder, 39, of 87 Sunnyside, told Nielsen he was mistaken, but Nielsen cited him for nudity in public.

The policeman also reported that he would not have been able to identify the female because she had her back to him most of the time.

Oilman Says Energy, Ecology Don't Mix

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — If this nation is to solve its energy problems, its citizens must learn to live with such inconveniences as oil refineries on the outskirts of town, according to the president of the world's largest petroleum company.

C. C. Garvin Jr., president of Exxon Corp., told the 76th annual meeting of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers (AICHE) yesterday citizens like those in New Hampshire who refused to allow a refinery built near their town are going to have to learn tosacrifice more to solve energy problems.

"Regrettably, we are today largely a nation of citizens illiterate in economic matters, and in some instances unaware of, indifferent to and often antagonistic to the very system that has enabled our society to prosper," he said. "This has to be corrected — at the educational level — or our system may indeed perish."

Garvin also agreed with most other oil company executives who have disputed President Nixon's prediction the United States can become energy self sufficient by 1980.

O. N. Miller, the recently retired chairman of Standard Oil of California, said Americans are going to have to learn the value of energy.

"We will have to change our attitude — permanently — toward this now precious commodity that is energy," he said. "A new ethic will have to arise in the land — an ethnic of conservation that recognizes the importance and value of energy."

Unified PG&E Hearings Denied

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A hearing examiner for the state Public Utilities Commission refused yesterday to consolidate considerations of requests by Pacific Gas & Electric Co. for rate increases.

Parke Boneysteele, the examiner, rejected a plea by attorney James Cherry of San Francisco Consumer Action that hearings be consolidated and said the sessions now would concern only a request for a $233 million a year general rate increase.

Arts, Crafts Fair To Aid Head Start

An arts and crafts fair to raise funds for play equipment for Marin Head Start schools will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. March 23 at St. Raphael's School in San Rafael.

Staff and parents of the Head Start schools are sponsoring the spring festival, according to Sheila Hines, chairman. In addition to an exhibit of works by the pre-school youngsters, the fair will offer kite kits, sewing, stained glass and pottery, she said.

Syringes Recalled On Labeling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration said today 48,470 hypodermic syringes are being recalled because of a labeling mixup which could cause an abortion or a premature birth if administered to a pregnant patient.

The agency said perhaps only three of the syringes are actually mislabeled, but all in the particular production lot are being brought back by the manufacturer, Parke Davis and Co., Detroit, to weed out the questionable ones.

The syringes, which were distributed nationwide to 400 hospitals and four wholesale drug dealers, contain a hormone called Pitocin which is used primarily after the delivery of a baby to restore the mother's uterus to normal. The FDA said some of the syringes could carry labels which describe the content mistakenly as an influenza vaccine called Fluogen.

The agency said that vaccine is used mainly for people with chronic diseases or for the elderly.

Couple Repeats Vows, Then Joins Army

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Mary Ann Brunt and Paul Foster said "I do" to each other. Then they said it to the U.S. Army.

In a double ceremony yesterday, the Milford couple was married at the Armed Forces Entrance Examining Station and then enlisted in the service.

Mrs. Foster said they decided to enlist because "it's too hard to be married and live comfortably." She said the Army would give her and her husband the education needed to get good jobs.

Illegitimate Picasso Children Ruled Legal Heirs By Court

GRASSE, France (AP) — A French court ruled today that Claude and Paloma Picasso, although illegitimate children of Pablo Picasso and Francoise Gilot, are legitimate heirs of the famous painter.

Picasso's widow, Jacqueline, and his son Paul — by his first wife —have been seeking to have themselves declared the only legitimate heirs to the thousands of paintings and other works stored in Picasso's workrooms.

During his lifetime, the painter himself successfully fought legal efforts by Claude, now 26, and Paloma, 25, to have themselves certified as legal children.

A 1972 French law gives children born out of wedlock additional advantages for inheritances, and the two children of Francoise Gilot, now married to Dr. Jonas Salk, sued to benefit from the new law.

In its opinion, the court said the paternity had been confirmed by the artist who had signed designs and paintings "To my son Claude" or "Your father forever."

However the court ruling, which probably will be appealed, does not open the way for full shares in the estate for Claude and Paloma.

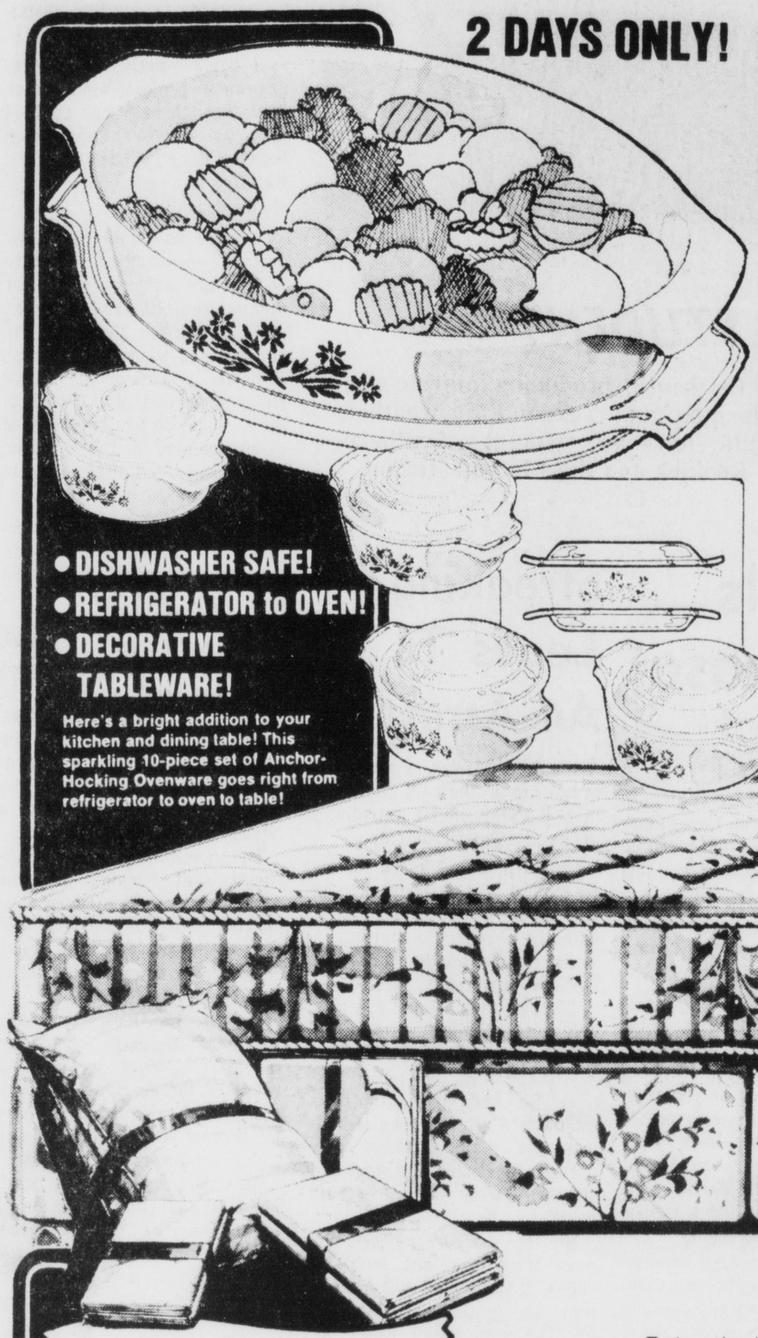

The 1972 law provides that legitimate children receive full shares, but that only half shares go to illegitimate children conceived while the father is married and legitimate children are living. At the time Picasso was living with Francoise Gilot, he was not divorced from his first wife, Olga Koklova.
